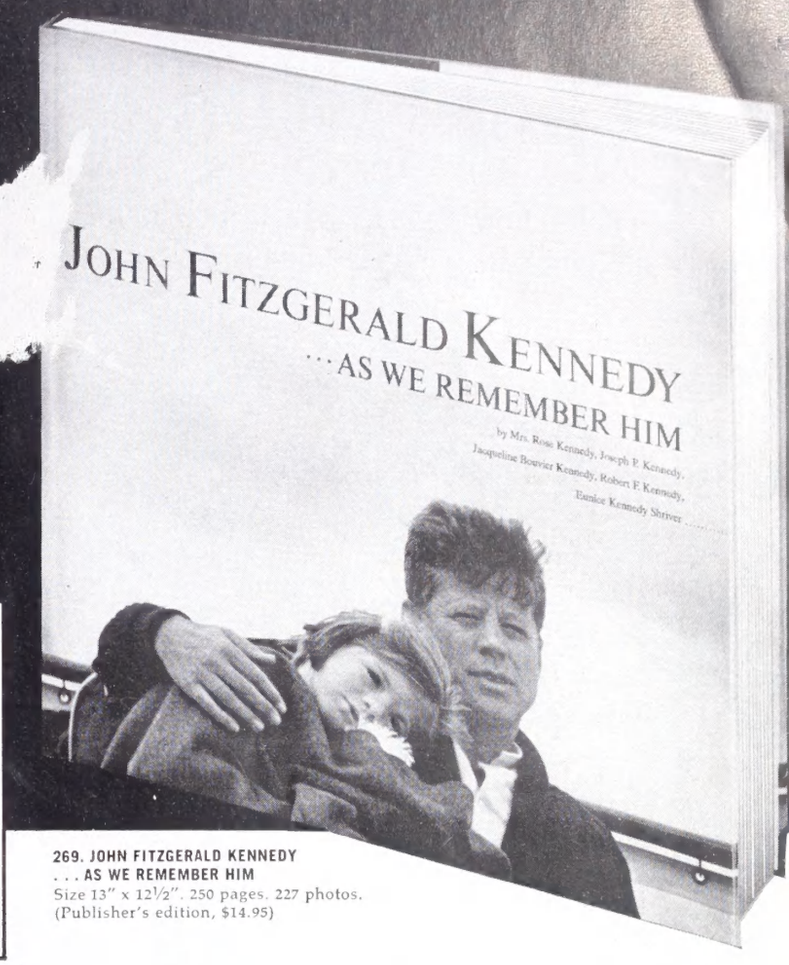
The recreation room.
One of the active rooms.

The floors for the active rooms: Armstrong vinyl floors.

A lot of living, a lot of entertaining go on in your recreation room. It's one of the active rooms . . . a room where good looks make for greater enjoyment. Armstrong vinyl floors belong in all the active rooms of your home. They start out beautiful, and they stay that way with very little care.

Here's a new vinyl floor for your active rooms. It's Armstrong Coronelle™ Vinyl Corlon® in a handsome custom design combining 87060 (red brick) and 87061 (white brick). The realistic brick-like texture adds character, helps hide heel and scuff marks. Coronelle Corlon is just one of the many Armstrong vinyl floors.



See the Armstrong nam printed on the roll; it' your assurance of quality Your Armstrong retailer i listed in the Yellow Page under "Floors."

FREE 24-page, full-colo booklet of decorating idea for the active rooms of you home. Write Armstrong 6607 Atkins Ave., Lancaste Pennsylvania.

THIS UNUSUAL OFFER cannot be repeated. John Fitzgerald Kennedy . . . As We Remember Him is a lavish book and an expensive one. Because of its cost, we can include it just this once as part of the Guild's introductory offer.

Nothing like John Fitzgerald Kennedy . . . As We Remember Him has ever been attempted before. It was "written" by 53 of the people who were closest to him throughout his lifetime. Through transcriptions of actual conversations with his family, friends and intimate associates, through unpublished letters, photographs and speech drafts from family files, this volume relates the late President's life as remembered and shared by those who knew him best.

Of all the books about Kennedy, this is the one that you will return to and cherish for years to come.

And by joining the Literary Guild now, you may (if you wish) include it as one of your choices of any four introductory books. Because of the limited supply of this volume, you are urged to act promptly.

Guild members were informed about this book before it was published — and those who ordered it received it at the special members' price of $6.95 instead of the publisher's price of $14.95. This is typical of the guaranteed savings Guild members enjoy on important new books: from 40% to 60% below the price of the publishers' editions.

In recent months, for example, Guild members were offered new best-sellers such as The Comedians for $2.95 instead of $5.75 in the publisher's edition; Tai-Pan, for $2.95 instead of $6.95; and The Last 100 Days, for $3.50 instead of $8.95. These books were described before publication in the Guild's free monthly Preview. Members who wanted them received them immediately upon publication.

Your only membership obligation is to accept four Guild selections or alternates during the coming year, from among the 20 or more which will be offered each month. And for every four you buy, you may choose a bonus book.

Look over this rich and varied selection of books. There has never been a better time to try membership in the Guild. To join, send no money now, just fill out and mail the coupon today.

NOTE: Guild editions are sometimes reduced in size, but texts are full-length—not a word is cut!

Literary Guild of America, Inc.
Dept. 67-HBX, Garden City, N. Y.

Please enroll me as a trial member of the Literary Guild and send me the FOUR books or sets whose numbers I have printed in the four boxes below. Bill me only $1 plus shipping for all four. If not delighted, I may return them in 10 days and this membership will be cancelled.

I do not need to accept a book every month — only as few as four a year — and may resign any time after purchasing four books. All selections and alternates will be described to me in advance in the Guild's free monthly "Preview," and a convenient form will always be provided for my use if I do not wish to receive a forthcoming selection. You will bill me the special Guild price for each book I take. This will always be at least 40%, often as much as 60%, below the price of the publisher's edition. (A modest charge is added for shipping.) For each four monthly selections or alternates I accept, I may choose a valuable bonus book from the special bonus catalog.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

"Without question," I said to Betsy Halsey, "you are the most shameless brain-picker I've ever been brain-picked by." Betsy is the daughter of a friend and client, one of my favorite children, and still an infant, even if scheduled soon to march down the aisle.

While she was home for a mid-term holiday, she "just happened" to pass the door of the living room where her mother and I were having a little teatime gossip. And, before you could say "one-room apartment" she was telling me, with a question mark after each statement, what she and her med-student groom were planning for the one-room top floor they were about to rent in a house in Cambridge. They were going to have the gang in to help them paint the walls white? (This, apparently, is youth's first remedy for any decorative woe.) And then there was this marvelous swirly "op" wallpaper they could cut out to look like a zebra skin rug and paste on the floor? She was going to ask Mother if they might "borrow" the Spanish rug with the tasseled border as a throw for the double boxspring and mattress so the room wouldn't look bedroomy? Out of Doug's grandmother's attic, they'd resurrected a Victorian settee and thought it would be gear to keep its horsehair upholstery but enamel its flowery frame white? They were going to have to have plenty of seating, because she thought the time had come for entertaining to have a certain dignity. That, of course, was what she and Doug were going to strive for—no more beer parties with people strewn all over the floor instead of sitting on chairs. They were going in for proper cocktail parties and buffet suppers, and they were seriously considering a regular Sunday-afternoon salon with tea and sherry and cucumber sandwiches.

"Of course, we can't have a sit-down dinner for more than two guests, so I'll just compose table settings on trays—and figure out a way for me to serve them gracefully without racing back and forth to that funny little kitchen in the wall. Don't you think trays are divine—I mean, just look at Mother's tea tray! Have you ever seen anything prettier? And it isn't even best china!"

"Hardly flattering to her old friend," I commented, "but this arrangement, my girl, could quite possibly solve your service problem. Look!"

Betsy looked, bewildered. "What do you mean? Oh . . . I see—the tea wagon! She loads it in the kitchen and wheels it in here, and if we had a cart I could put a meal on its shelves, push it around, and let guests help themselves."

"Precisely," said I. "And next time you go down to Wall Street to pick up your father, stop in at Otto Gerdau's Tontine Emporium at Number 82 and see the very tea trolley I have in mind. You're in for a surprise. It's an impressive satin-finish walnut on cadmium-plated casters and measures a normal 26″ long and 17″ wide. But it actually folds up no thicker than 3½″, so you can store it easily in a closet or under the bed. It has one more added attraction—its top tray comes off and four little legs spring out, so that it becomes a little table that stands a handy 14″ high. You could let it hold dessert and coffee, or, when you are not wining and dining friends, it might even hold your dinner while you watch 'Batman.'"—M.G.

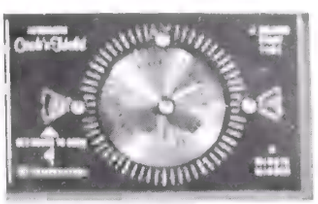
Dishwasher, Range Top, Oven and Hood

MODERN MAID



A solution to the problem of finding room for both a range and a dishwasher in limited kitchen space.

This new space-saving installation features a Modern Maid Roll Out Vent Hood and Manor House range above a Modern Maid 14-place setting automatic dishwasher — and in a space only 30 inches wide! Installation's economical and uncomplicated, doesn't require any special cabinet work or conversion kits.

Select a gas or electric Manor House range. Both have a big 21" wide eye level oven, large enough to cook a 25-pound turkey or a 30-pound roast.

Install Modern Maid's "500" automatic dishwasher, with lifetime guaranteed tub, or Model DW-346, pictured. Both have Miniature Food Grinder, eliminates pre-rinsing, plus Hygienic Wash and Rinse in Guaranteed Hot Water.

Lifetime guaranteed Perma-Coil® elements, too. You'll never pay another repair bill for burned-out elements.

AUTOMATIC DELAYED COOK 'N HOLD® Cooks an oven meal to perfection, then automatically changes from cooking heat to low temperature to keep the meal serving-hot for hours without overcooking or drying out. If you want the oven to turn on and start cooking at a later hour, simply set the "Delay" clock for turn-on time. Leave home then, if you like; Cook 'n Hold's automatic "brain" takes over and handles the rest.

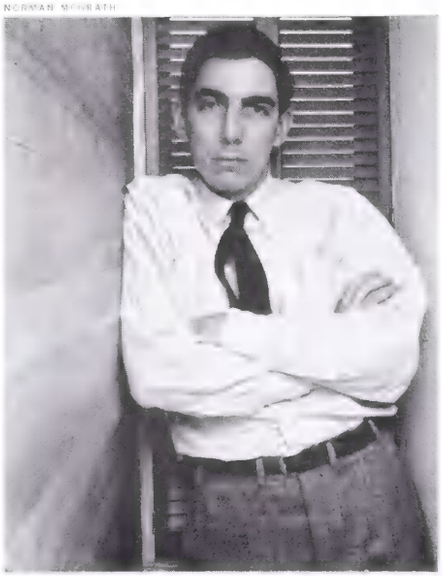
Whose work will be seen on pages to come



DAVID HIRSCH

Charles Gwathmey, from Yale, and Richard Henderson, Cornell, believe that architecture grows from order, "through which form, light, and space related to proportion, scale, and soul become reality." Their design, page 54.

FELICIANO GARCIA

NORMAN MCGRATH

James S. Polshek was trained at the Yale School of Architecture. He believes in an evolving design philosophy, but that "architecture will always be the art of building." His town house, page 60.

Hugh Hardy, a Princetonian, says that architecture is "not the pursuit of new shapes, techniques, or materials for their own sake. It is . . . involvement of people with their full environment." His attic remodeling is on page 64.

Lucky Boy! That's PPG Safety Glass, so strong you don't have to worry about its breaking That's the beauty of PPG Herculite® K Tempered Safety Glass. It takes bumps that shatter regular glass.

How's this for strength? A "bridge" of 3/16" PPG Safety Glass supports the weight of two boys and their trike (over 150 pounds). They're safe because Herculite K is specially treated—heat tempered—to make it many times stronger than regular glass.

And, if they somehow managed to break the glass, chances are no one would get hurt. When Herculite K breaks, it crumbles into small, rounded pieces that can't cause serious injury.

Look for this PPG Safety Shield on quality patio doors. The difference is a few dollars in the price, and a lot more safety in the home. PPG makes the glass that makes the difference.

Jay Spectre has had his own decorating firm in Louisville, Ky., for the past eight years. "Atmosphere is my chief commodity," he says. His design for the Paterno apartment (page 70) is an example of what he means.

ERNEST SILVA

Roe Kasian's interest in interior design began with the painting of furniture. He feels that his designs must reflect the client's personality. Thus, his theatrical design for producer Saint Subber (page 76).

John Patton, educated at the University of California and Parsons, believes that the design of a room should be based on a single, basic idea and carefully adhered to in its execution. His own apartment is shown on page 82.

David Parmelee, now moving to Canada as a designer, was trained in both the artistic and business sides of the furnishings industry. He emphasizes the necessity of restraint: "A fine hand is more recognizable by what it doesn't do." His own example, page 84.

Which costs less? The lamp, the sofa, the table, the silver service, their gowns, or the Inlaid Paneling?

Answer: the Georgia-Pacific Hardwood Inlaid Paneling.

Really! That elegant 12 by 8-foot elm-with-walnut wall cost just $80.85. A couple of years ago, you'd have been lucky to buy a wall like that for $300.

Of course that was before G-P discovered how to put Inlaid Paneling on easy-to-install 4 by 8-foot panels. We now offer a selection of eleven modestly priced Inlaid Hardwood Paneling combinations.

Quite frankly, the new Georgia-Pacific Inlaids are better than the old hand-crafted walls. The reason for this is our exclusive Acryglas® finish.

It looks like a hand-rubbed oil finish. Yet it's so durable you can actually scrub it with fingernail polish remover—without a speck of damage.

The lamp is from Stanley's Antiques, Chicago	$200
Sofa, S. J. Campbell, Chicago	$1514
Table, Stanley's Antiques	$475
Silver Service, Marshall Field & Co., Chicago	$150
The red gown is by Mignon	$125
The beige gown is by Renault	$150

You can get full information about Georgia-Pacific Hardwood Inlaid Paneling from your building materials dealer, builder or architect. Or mail us this coupon and we'll send you a copy of our paneling catalog. Please enclose 10¢.

See! Today's Cascade stops spots before they start!

Some dishwasher detergents allow water drops to form on dishes. These drops dry into ugly spots!

Today's Cascade has Chlorosheen to make water rinse off in clear sheets. Drops don't form, so dishes dry spotless!

You discover how beautifully spotfree your dishes can be when you discover today's Cascade! No more ugly spots. No more towel touch-ups. Just sparkling dishes you're proud to take straight from your dishwasher to your table! Only today's Cascade has Chlorosheen to stop spots before they start! Its amazing sheeting action lets dishes dry spotless! Cascade actually protects fine china patterns. More women prefer it. Every dishwasher maker approves it. Today's Cascade—wow!

There is a way to hit long, straight balls AUTOMATICALLY every time

NEW TRU-DRIVE TEES

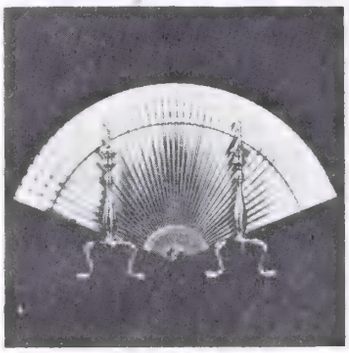
THIS IS IT!

You have to try this to see for yourself! And you can do it on our money-back guarantee. This tee gives you almost unbelievable results. Long straight drives every time! It's simple—because the tee is based on aero-dynamic principles that prevent the lateral spin which causes hooks or slicing.

The tee cups your ball (see illustration). When the club hits the tee all the power behind it goes into getting the ball away—and no matter where the club connects, the power goes behind the ball—gets it away faster, straighter. You may hit a few yards to right or left. BUT YOU WON'T HOOK OR SLICE.

You'll get off drives that will amaze you for distance. You'll hit truer shots—this tee makes golfers out of beginners and club-champs out of week-end golfers.

What's more, it saves you money on balls. You don't mark them up, you don't cut or mar them. You don't lose them so easily—and it speeds up your game.



Of course you have to try them for yourself. Order at our risk. If you are not completely satisfied—if you are not absolutely delighted with what it does for your game—return for a full refund.

Tru-Drive Golf Tees are only $1.98 for pkg. of 5. (They last for years if you don't lose them). But get enough for your partners and friends. Special offer for 3 sets—$5.75 postpaid. Order now—impress your golf partners next week-end!

Haskell, HB7, Dallas, Texas 75204.

RADIANT BEAUTY. It reminds us of medieval courts and castles, and we like to think of it lighting the lives and loves of fair damsels and dashing dons. It dwells as decoratively in the modern scene, in hall, dining room, or terrace. Black wrought iron, spikes in candle cups anchor candles. 9x9", $4.95 ppd. Ashlee Co., 247 West 35th Street, Dept. HB7, New York, New York 10001.

PARFUMS DE FRANCE— that unseen accessory that's pure "pow!" Here's a fabulous treasure chest of 10 elegant fragrances, bottled and sealed in France, to match your every mood. These are not colognes, not samples, but generous miniatures of perfumes created by internationally known perfumers. Have a ball; try them all. $5 ppd. Charles of 5th Ave., Box 98, HB7, Cedarhurst, N.Y. 11516.

GOING PLACES? Take a traveling companion that outsmarts wrinkles. Looks like a book, packs like a charm, stows in a dresser drawer. Shirts and blouses stay fresh and crisp so you and your dreamboat look neat and natty. Four "pages," 15x13" are see-through envelopes of heavy gauge, reinforced plastic. Folds are bound. $1 ppd. Greenland Studios, HB7, Miami, Florida 33147.

Electronic MESSAGE MINDER

Why waste time scrawling a hurriedly written note that may prove difficult for someone else to read? Merely flipping a button and speaking into Message Minder creates a sharp & clear voice message on a continuous tape that never needs changing. When the absentee returns he merely turns the switch which automatically causes the message to repeat continually. Another flip of the button erases the message clearing it for the next. Compact, attractive, completely portable and simple to operate. Works on standard batteries. Batteries & tape included. 6" tall × 3" x 2"

CLEARS AN AREA UP TO 3 ACRES OF ALL FLYING INSECTS including HOUSEFLIES AND MOSQUITOES!!

1966 JET CONTROL BLACK LIGHT INSECT TRAP

- Powerful 1/100 HP motor clears 3-acre radius.
- SYLVANIA 10" 22-Watt BLACK LIGHT is irresistible to moths, all flies, gnats, mosquitoes and other flying pests.
- All weather unit offers full 360 degree range.
- Operates electrically for pennies per month.
- No chemicals ■ No work ● No spraying or dangerous odor.
- Perfect for motels ■ shopping centers ● restaurants
- Drive-Ins ● dairy barns ● service stations as well as homes.

The all new Jet Control Black Light Insect Trap is the most powerful of its kind on the market today. Actually clears a 3 acre area of all harmful insects. Sylvania 10" 22 Watt Black Light Draws from grass, gardens, foliage and shrubbery killing adult insects before eggs are laid (At the height of its mating season). Its powerful 1/100 H.P. motor is twice as powerful as competitive models. (Most others have 1/200 HP Motors) and its Jet Control principle actually pulls the insects into the bag with such force (Creating a wind Tunnel With over 1175 Cubic Feet of Air per minute suction) that even powerful house flies and mosquitoes are powerless against it. Ruggedly constructed of Corrosion Free Baked enamel metal to insure years of trouble free operation. Shipped complete with hanging bracket, reusable mesh bag and 6 Ft of Weatherproof, Outdoor cord. honey and egg for wrinkles

Quite by accident, laboratory chemists stumbled upon a fascinating new skin discovery. By combining the skin-smoothing properties of egg with natural bee's honey they perfected a 15-minute "facial" that smoothes and tightens skin. Completely non-synthetic, this new skin beautifier works wonders on crepey, wrinkled skin on throat and face. Instantly, skin tingles with a refreshing coolness, as wrinkled skin tightens. Applies easily in seconds, yet rinses off instantly with clear, cool water.

This research discovery is sold under the name of Botticelli Honey And Egg. Its intoxicating fragrance is reminiscent of the queen bee's essence of nectar.

Not yet available at drug and department stores, you must order by mail. Send $3.00 for postpaid 10-week supply ($1.00 deposit on C.O.D.'s). Money-back guarantee, so send today sure.

Projected Ellis Island shrine—vine-clad buildings, a ramped wall with names of 16 million immigrants. Philip Johnson, architect.

VISIT A PARK OF YOUR OWN

From shining sea to snow-blue lake, the National Park Service is celebrating its 50th birthday

One of the things to celebrate in 1966 is that 50 years ago some farsighted Solons in the United States Congress voted for a custodian to protect the remarkable real estate we all have a stake in as citizens.

The trusty custodian is the National Park Service. Functioning under the Department of the Interior, it is charged with conserving, preserving, and maintaining certain natural lands and historic sites for the "use, observation, health, and pleasure of the people." Many of these places had been deemed conservation-worthy long before 1916. Yellowstone, for instance, was designated the world's first national park in 1872, and as early as 1832 Congress had made a reservation of the hot-springs area of what is now Arkansas, thereby acknowledging that there was something out there worth keeping an eye on. Meantime, as the country has gotten older and more and more concerned—if sometimes belatedly—about the preservation of our roots, natural or man-made, the Park Service has by degrees taken under its wing rather a mixed bag of worthy projects. These exceed 26 million acres in physical scope and range from the forest primeval to such an unprimeval extreme as the Vanderbilt Mansion National Historic Site, a past-century summer palace in Dutchess County, New York, which preserves for the benefit of later generations a glimpse of how one millionaire lived in the 1880's.

One of the projects assigned to the administration of the Park Service will be the eventual Ellis Island Shrine in New York Harbor, which will become part of the Statue of Liberty National Monument. The architect's concept is shown above. Here the buildings through which 16 million immigrants entered the United States between 1892 and 1954 will be preserved as romantic, vine-grown "arrested" ruins, a circular, ramped wall will be erected as a monument bearing those 16 million names, and the rest of the acreage will be a recreational area, as though floating like some wondrous pleasure ship in New York Bay with Manhattan's fabulous skyline as a backdrop.

All this to remind you that the deserts and canyons and snow-capped peaks of the West are not the sole precincts of the Park Service. Consider, for example, the five National Seashores. (Please turn to page 110) like Pinot Chardonnay . . .

and Cabernet Sauvignon . . .

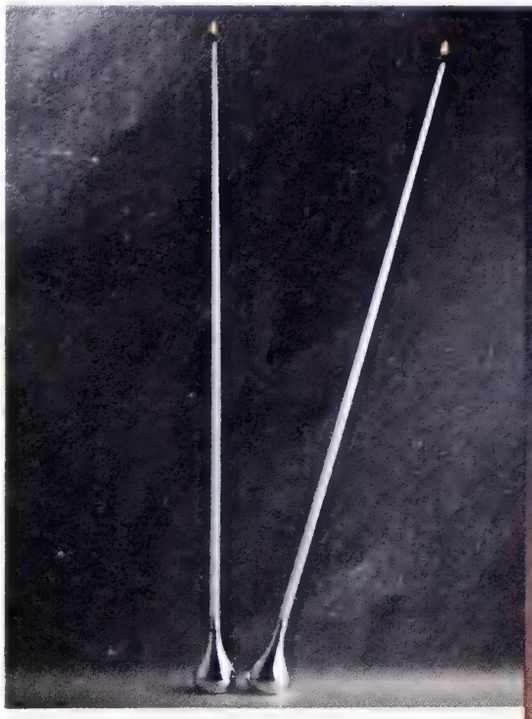
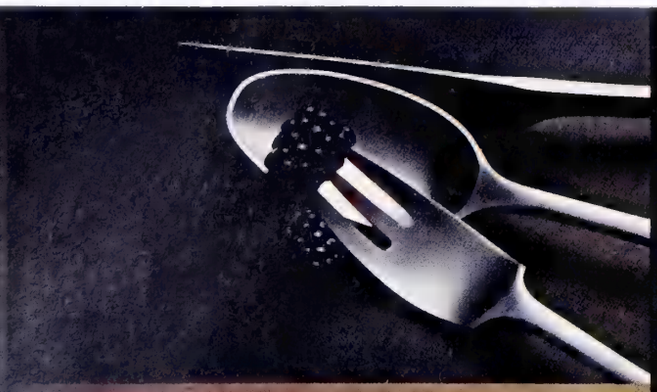
and Gewürztraminer . . .





These are just a few of the famous European wine grapes. Some American vintners grow some. Some grow others. But we grow them all...and to a special degree of perfection that is imparted to every Almadén wine.

Why can we grow all of these grapes? Because of Almadén's Paicines Mountain Vineyards – the largest vineyards of fine wine grapes in the world. Here, along the cool, green slopes of California's Gavilan Range, is situated the wine grower's fondest wish: Ideal soil, climate and elevation for the finest wine grape varieties.

So next time you have dinner guests, be sure they're all introduced . . . to the superb difference in Almadén. It's a little thing they'll appreciate.

Cube, prism, triangle, sphere—building blocks, historic geometric pillars of truth, the shape of some new carefree houses from the drawing boards of young men of talent. (Our cutoff point for the registry of Young Innovators is an arbitrary 35. That "old" because of the requirements of education, etc.) We've set out to show the new directions of interior design as well. Of creative new furniture design. For the young reader there are splendidly organized one-room apartments; a boys' haven that makes the most of the eccentricities of a dormered attic; homework from leading schools that teach home decoration. All this to prove that today's explosion isn't just population, it's talent. Talent to build. To design. To create. Innovate. Uncompromising. Sophisticated. Bold. Educated. And generally afire with the contemporary world. We've tried to capture some of it on these pages.

INNOVATION:

Looming into the night sky near the Atlantic Ocean at Amagansett is a lighted cube flanked with cylindrical turrets and prisms, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gwathmey designed for them by their son, Mr. Charles Gwathmey, and Mr. Richard Henderson. Beyond its startling statement in geometries, its plain faces illuminated with sharp rectangular windows, are warm, gentler delights: the conscious play of patterned sunlight within, the calculated vistas on the scene without, determined by window placement and scope; the endless conveniences that let the house take care of its family; the unity of color—inside and out it is all fine-scaled cedar boards—accented with light-hued transoms, railings, mullions; the beautiful craftsmanship everywhere evident. A very small house, 1200 square feet enclosed, yet there is a comfortable living room and dining area, a complete kitchen, a master bedroom with a studio and a bathroom, two guest rooms, a bath and utility room, plus 800 square feet of deck and terrace. A year-round house with both warmth and coolth. An entertaining house with space and concentrative privacy that a painter and art teacher, Mr. Gwathmey, and a textile designer, Mrs. Gwathmey, must have. An imaginative, thoughtful house, sparked by Le Corbusier, brought to rewarding personal reality.

INNOVATION: TOWN HOUSE

The cylinder shape, seen against the Long Island sky on previous pages, reappears here as the dominant form inside a remodeled Manhattan town house. Two curvilinear shells —one enclosing the kitchen and breakfast area, one a powder room—float free as the only dividers in a cleanly designed floor-through space. The partitions are short of the ceiling for spatial continuity. Designed by young Architect James S. Polshek (see page 6) for optics scientist-op artist Dr. Gerald Oster and his family, this living floor is divided, as were the early brownstones, into front parlor, dining space, and rear living room. An island of quarry tile in the floor sets dining apart. Open stairway leads to bedrooms.

Opposite, top: In the living room the seating pieces were deliberately designed by the architect in a boxy style to contrast with the curving forms of the partitions. The sofa and chairs are of English oak, with foam rubber. Green silk covers the chairs, purple wool jersey the couch. In evidence here, as throughout the apartment, Dr. Oster's own op-art creations: a yellow-on-black phosphene painting and, on the storage cabinet, a silk-screen-on-Plexiglass construction, "Moiré Vortex."

Opposite, below: From the parlor, a view past the circular enclosure of the kitchen and breakfast area. The dining table surrounded by Prague chairs, designed by Josef Hoffmann. The strong green of the short wall distinguishes the curving partition from the outside wall, giving a floating sense of freedom to this cylinder.

Below: The master bedroom has its own table, with bookcases running to the ceiling. A storage cabinet, half under the desk, runs from the bookcase to the window wall. All the wood here is natural birch. Work space is lighted by fluorescent strip behind white-painted wooden baffle. Black-and-white mattress ticking is laminated to the window shade. Desk chair is an unusual rattan swivel; armchair is Danish design in teak. On the floor, an old Berber rug; colors in the rug are white, yellow, blue, and rust. INNOVATION: ATTIC HAVEN FOR TWO BOYS

The unfinished attic of a 1927 Tudor mansion in Princeton, New Jersey was finished by a youthful architect, Hugh Hardy (see page 6), making it two all-purpose rooms for the two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Duncan. While preserving the exterior profile of the gabled roof, the architect has turned the previously static interior into a modern, highly functional, amorphous space. Like an origami artist, he has constructed a multifaceted ceiling which, with extensive built-in cabinets, divides each room into sleep, study, and play areas. A corner of the east room, above, contains such built-in features as a desk for study, shelves to hold a shell collection, and commodious storage drawers tucked under the guest bed.

Cross-section, top, of the attic floor dramatizes the geometric shapes formed by a ceiling that resembles a paper swan ready for flight. Its slopes and angles organize space visually while forming functional areas, including one in which the boys can jump up and down. The flat ceilings over passageways are high enough to make stooping unnecessary. Floor plan, bottom, shows the complete privacy of each room from the other. Numbers indicate camera angle for each of the five photographs.

West room: Sleep area in ten-year-old Coulter's room is made private by floor-to-ceiling wooden cabinet forming an enclosure around bed. Both rooms have rough sand plaster ceilings to resist dirt and deter finger prints. Slate blue was chosen for the storage units to set them off from the red oak floors, desks, and knee walls. The rooms are planned to grow along with the boys through their teen-age and college years.

YOUNG ARCHITECTS IN THE SPOTLIGHT

By MARY JEAN KEMPNER

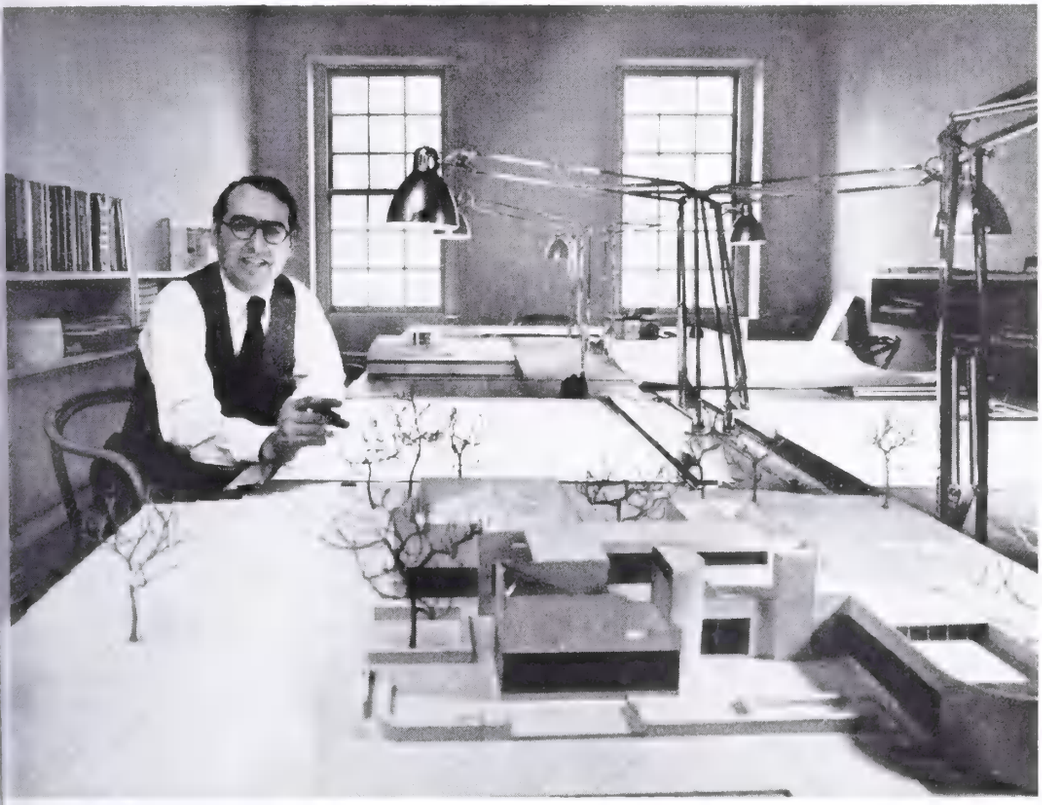
The twelve men whose faces—and examples of their recent work—appear on these and the next two pages share an inventive age. All are in their 30's, or under. All are partners or associates in firms that encourage innovation, where teamwork and criticism temper extremes. One of the most articulate inadvertently spoke for all when he said: "My philosophy is to find a good client and then give up sleep till the work is done." America today feels the surge of such constructive sleeplessness, the promise of fresh building idioms.

I believe in serving as a patient researcher in the field of meaningful form, not in posing as a creative prima donna.

T. M. Prentice, Jr. In collaboration with Hugh Hardy, Mr. Prentice built this house for Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ingersoll on the banks of the Housatonic near Sheffield, Massachusetts. It has severe white clapboard walls, a wood-shingled roof, full-length windows supplementing high, clerestory glass openings. The house turns a discreet face to the road with few windows, but a system of light scoops brings sunlight to the north rooms. Views of the river are carefully controlled, each major room taking advantage of a different aspect. Prentice, a graduate of Yale University's School of Architecture, won a State Department Cultural Exchange grant. Now, at 35, he is a partner in the New York firm of Lewis, Prentice, and Chan.

Good architecture, like people, should not be overbearing. Beauty and function are not separate in an ordered solution.

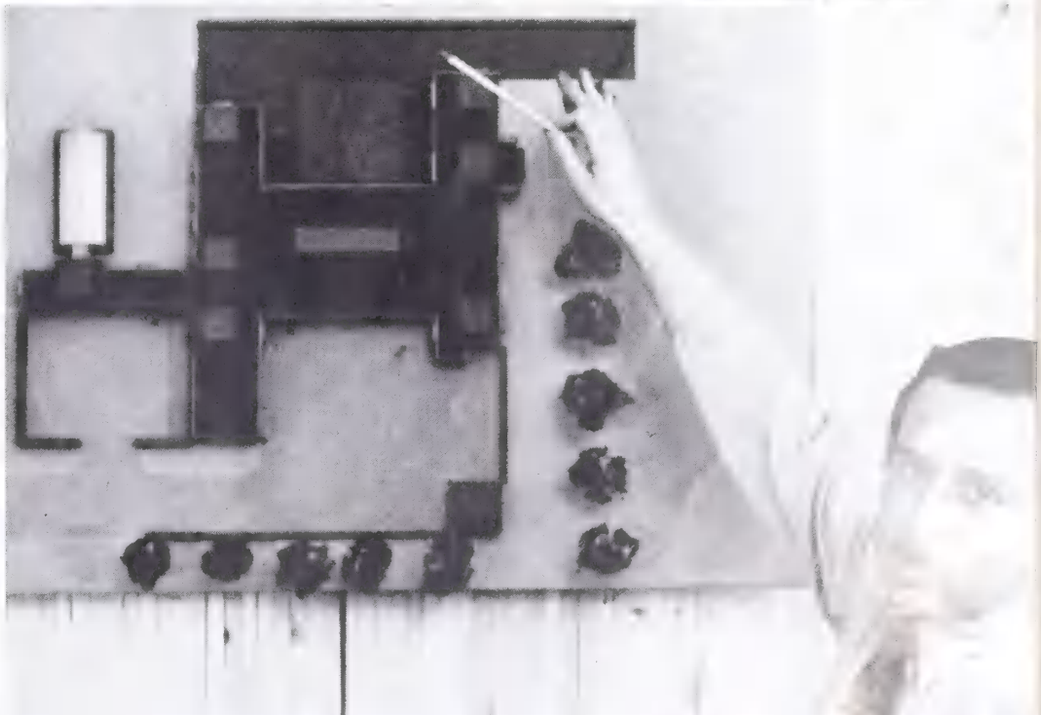
Thomas J. Holzbog holds here a model of a house designed with four levels. Exteriors are of stained, textured plywood; interiors are plaster, exposed masonry, stained beams. The house competes in price with prefabricated models while producing dividends in privacy, individuality, and varied space—largely due to the pitched roofs and the different levels. Graduate of Yale's School of Architecture, Mr. Holzbog studied in France on a Fulbright. Now 32, he teaches at Columbia and is chief design associate at Henry Otis Chapman & Assoc., New York City.



We have the impetus for evolving new, exciting architecture, becoming involved with real—not cosmetic—living problems.

Eugene Aubry's unusual treehouse, designed with Howard Barnstone, reflects his convictions. The building rests on four brick columns, which enclose the parking space. Over this, a huge living-dining room—all steel and tinted no-glare glass—seems to sail through the tops of redbud trees. In a general air of light, space, and serenity, the library links two master bedrooms, a gymnasium adjoins another. Mr. Aubry, 30, studied under Barnstone, afterwards became his partner in Houston.

HOWARD GRAFF



Architecture is a tension and polarity of objectively selected forms, reflecting and influencing man. It is the particularized relationship of form continuous in time that makes architecture an art.

Richard Meier is shown here with plans and a model for a nearly completed house in Ithaca for a Cornell government professor and his wife. Fitting the foundations of an old barn, it has a 20′-by-20′ cubical living room, two bedrooms, two studies. It is built of unpainted wood siding, with a flat, graveled roof designed as a terrace. Its clerestory windows run the length of the building, and give particularized light as they seem to follow the sun. Mr. Meier, a graduate of Cornell's School of Architecture, has been visiting architectural critic at Princeton and Pratt Institute. At 32, he has his own New York firm, also does teaching at Cooper Union.

The actual form of architecture is evolved from the particular activities that are inherent to a particular problem.

John Jay Stonehill with the Connecticut house just completed for Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rodgers (to be seen in HOUSE BEAUTIFUL in 1967). It has a façade of vertical redwood bleached silver-gray, a charcoal slate roof, a combined air of the contemporary and the romantic. (A perfectionist, Dorothy Rodgers has made unique contributions to the finished product.) Mr. Stonehill, a graduate of Yale's School of Architecture, simultaneously won a Prix de Rome (accepted) and a Fulbright (refused). Now 33, he is a partner in Lundquist & Stonehill, N.Y.C.

HANS NAMUTH

We think architects should help people to understand and take possession of places.

William Turnbull, Jr. and Donlyn Lyndon, two West Coast architects, stand before a ten-unit condominium that their firm designed at spectacular Sea Ranch for the moody coastline north of San Francisco. Each unit—four to an acre—begins as a 24-foot cube of vertical redwood boards. Variations include glassed-in bays, greenhouses, walled gardens, terraces—all more outside than in, but well sheltered from the winds. Mr. Lyndon, 30, an alumnus of Princeton, heads the Architectural Department at the University of Oregon. Mr. Turnbull has degrees from the Beaux Arts and Princeton, at 31 is visiting architectural critic at Oregon. Both were partners in Moore, Lyndon, Turnbull & Whitaker.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY BRUCE HARLOW

Whenever possible, I use mathematically derived solutions, working out spaces according to the simplest numbers series.

Giovanni Pasanella holds the plans of a house he recently completed in Bedford, New York. Masonry-based, the wooden building is painted "filing cabinet" gray. He deliberately zoned the interior to have all quiet areas at one end. Kitchen, dining, and living room, intellectually regarded as a single space, retain individuality and separateness. A graduate of Yale's School of Architecture, Mr. Pasanella, 35, is an Assistant Professor of Architecture at Columbia, and is on the Mayor's Committee on Office and City Planning. He is a partner in Merz & Pasanella in N.Y.C.

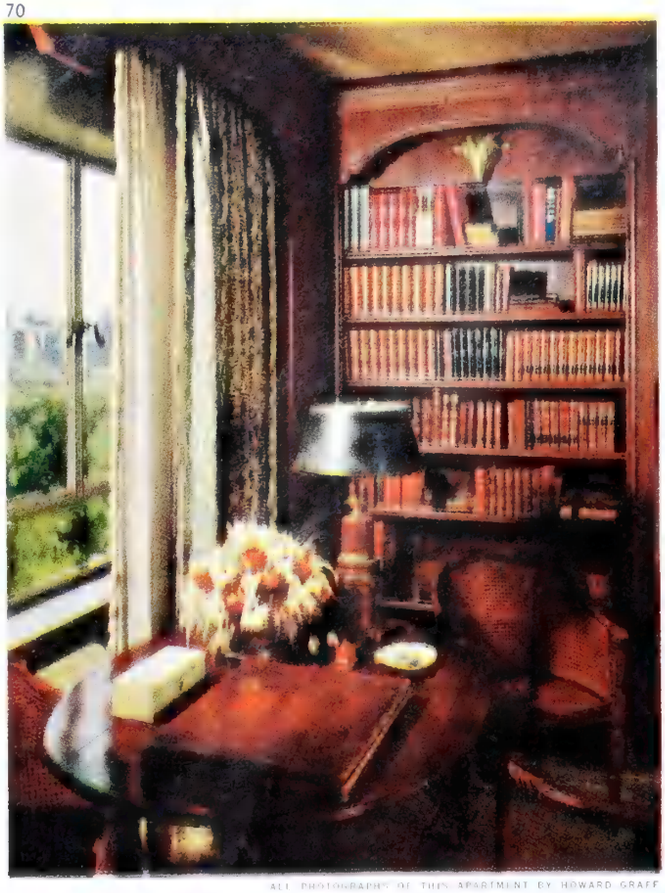
Shacks, next to castles, are the most engaging form for a house. Choose either a decrepit castle or a well-built shack.

John Wiebenson, a San Francisco architect, considers this dramatic twin-towered house a member of his shack family. Now in plan form, it will stand in the coastal hills across from the Golden Gate Bridge. It is built of redwood boards and battens; the towers are roofed with cement-asbestos; the space between is covered with glass—a holdover from Wiebenson's work with greenhouses. A graduate of Harvard's School of Architecture, at 33 Mr. Wiebenson is one of six partners in the firm of Agora, all of them young, all concerned with versatility of design and its usage.

Architecture is for people, not just architects. It involves building for man living in space and using space.

Richard Peters holds a model of a hillside house that overlooks San Francisco Bay, the visual and the functional focal point of the plan. He calls it "a big wooden box ripped open by moving light, with enough places for the owner to hide when he wants to." Two bedrooms occupy the lower floor; kitchen, dining, living, and music rooms are one up; a study is secluded in the turret. Each opens to outdoor decks and terraces. A graduate of Princeton's School of Architecture, Mr. Peters, 37, has his own firm and teaches architecture at the University of California.



LOUIS RAJKI

We feel that it's more responsible to respond to existing and future needs in real, tangible ways than to wait for clients or to execute visionary projects.

William D. Rienecke and David E. Sellers, Vermont designers, own and operate the Prickly Mountain Project. One of their vacation houses, left, is rooted to natural rock and soars 50 feet above the trees, opening up a spectacular view. At ground level, floors consist of the exposed rock ledge. There are five outdoor porches, one sheltered for winter sunning. Interiors are of natural spruce paneling, exteriors of ordinary yard lumber. Mr. Rienecke graduated from Yale's School of Architecture last year, as did Mr. Sellers, who led the class. Both are 27, owner-founders of the Vermont Farm Museum.

ELOQUENCE IN FRENCH IDIOMS

Editor: PHOEBE HYDE

Transforming a Manhattan duplex into the simulacre of a French country house calls for some architectural as well as decorating talent and ingenuity. A 28-year-old designer, Jay Spectre (see page 10), brought all these to his recast of Mr. and Mrs. Carlo Paterno's apartment overlooking Central Park. The convincing results are shown here and on the next four pages. Involved: structural changes, among them the addition of old walnut ceiling beams and hand-carved brackets in the living room, at right and above: designing made-to-order pieces of furniture and the Savonnerie rug, right: seeking out rare French antiques—one, the tea table, opposite, in the original paint, color cue for the new linen velvet covering the couch. More overleaf.

The dominant note in the living room is struck by the rich woodwork. Like the ceiling beams, the newly built-in bookcases, designed by Jay Spectre, are of old walnut. These, the mild tones of the tempera walls, the soft double draperies, the tôle lamps, collaborate in giving the living room the peaceful air of country elegance developed in centuries past and recreated, in fresh terms, in this Manhattan "house." More overleaf.

Left: In the upstairs hallway, a small closet was taken out to make way for the niche where a carved 18th-century French clock now stands, dramatizing time. The old railing, too, was brought from France. Above: At one side of the entry hall, doors taken from an 18th-century walnut armoire conceal, when closed, as at right, a small bar, a pair of upholstered bar stools. Right: Below the bar shelf, on the kitchen side, storage for glasses and bottles. As decorative splash-proofing back of the sink, 18th-century Delft tiles, white patterned in brown instead of the usual blue. High at one side above, an antique wine rack. Opposite page: Across from the hidden bar in the entry way, an unneeded wall under the stairs was removed to allow room for a telephone nook furnished with the easy dignity of a pint-size sitting room. Impressively larger in scale, the antique porcelain stove nearby, a Paris find of singular silhouette, its chimney a tall pale pillar terminating in a burst of dark tôle leaves. Serving as a hearth, antique French tiles, strongly patterned. The pattern on the foyer walls, fine fizzy stripes woven in a French cotton upholstery fabric matching that of the draped-back curtain.

Complete and completely charming though this city house is, the owners use the rus-in-urbe duplex only as a pied-à-terre, a place to stay and occasionally do a little light entertaining when they forsake their home in northern New York to spend a day in town, an evening at the theatre, and still surround themselves, afterwards, with the French Provincial atmosphere they specified. In an interesting, wayward switch, their upstate residence, a highly contemporary house by Architect Edward D. Stone, is having its interiors redone, by Jay Spectre, in the most formal of French styles, the mood metropolitan Parisian, even palatial—a special way of combining the best of two possible worlds. This—urbe-in-rus,

Above: There being no such things as antique headboards sized to fit today's twin beds, Jay Spectre designed a pair, in walnut, with exclamatory posts in a 17th-century mood, for the master bedroom. Right: More ingenuity was required to think out and construct an arrangement that, finished, seems like simplicity itself. Look at the four-panel screen, closed at right, a French antique of painted leather. To bring the panels up to door height, each has been placed on a trompe l'oeil base. Two panels, each one mirror-lined, open on a third mirror for three-way viewing, as above. The second pair are now the doors to a big walk-in closet made by throwing together the four little closets that formerly belonged, two each, to the master bedroom and the guest bedroom. Jay Spectre tells us that this screen-mirror-closet was the most difficult problem he faced in redoing the duplex interior. Its handsome functional outcome is a quiet triumph of mind and method. Other attractions in this room: the antique chandelier, made of rock crystal, and the flower-patterned bed covers in quilted silk. Lower right: The same flowered silk curtains the doorway to the dressing room, which has a tent ceiling of pink taffeta. Left: Another unusual mirror arrangement is in the guest dressing room, above the slate countertop. Enlivening, the warm-toned French tiles, the bright toile de Jouy used for the curtains and wallcovering,

BROWNSTONE ORIENTAL

Editor: FRANCES HEARD

Redesigning interiors in Broadway producer Saint Subber's town house, 29-year-old Roe Kasian (see page 10) was less concerned with the usual problem in these old houses—how to make the rooms seem wider—than with creating delightful uninsistent backgrounds. As a Korean, Mr. Kasian appreciates the traditions prized in the Orient; young and adventurous, he enjoys improvising. Result: these calm rooms, splashed with excitement.

Left: A steady rhythm of black-and-brown stripes marks the linen wallcovering and draperies in the master bed-sitting room. These, a contemporary note cutting the serene Oriental air of the natural straw cloth that screens the ceiling and doors, the carefully split bamboo stakes used for moldings and door trims. In the writing corner, where a conventional desk would have seemed too bulky, a simple contemporary table—a trestle of glass and steel—stands instead, leaving visual arrest to the complex wicker chair, the bibelots and books, the Chinese print in a peaked frame. In the foreground, a low bed with vicuna cover.

Right: Under Roe Kasian's gifted direction, a monochromatic room comes alive. Rows of lights set in the stenciled ceiling beams cast a good-theatre glow over the living room, a blend of warm woods and pale fabrics. On the walls, painted burlap. On the seating pads and for the windows, raw silk. Italian lamps are juxtaposed with an antique Chinese horse on the mantel, a huge modern Japanese painting. The low French cane chairs were made from the decorator's own designs and play an important role in the room's dialogue between East and West.

A PLEASING MIX OF OLD AND NEW

Astonishing variety marks the career of Boston-born Carlton B. Varney, Jr., at 29 the president of Dorothy Draper & Company. After studying at Oberlin College and the University of Madrid, he taught at a secondary school before entering the design field. He has been with the Draper firm since 1959, and among his interior designs are the romantic ones at Dromoland Castle in Ireland, as well as many private homes. He has flexed his talents, too, in furniture design, patterns for china, glass, wallpapers, fabrics. His design philosophy starts with a basic belief in people: "A designer must try to understand people, for all the art forms, which include industrial and interior design, are forms of human understanding and expression."

HOWARD GRAFF

Here, samples of Carlton Varney's design, taken at his own New York apartment. Right, a lively play of pale, bright, and dark in the large living room, the effective contrasts well defined: on one couch, a crewel-worked fabric, on the other, the palest velvet. One coffee table of steel and glass; another, the classic butler's table. Above, a late-Victorian roll-top desk, now velvet-lined, accompanied by a Queen Anne chair, an heirloom covered in antique silk with appliqué motifs defined by black braid.

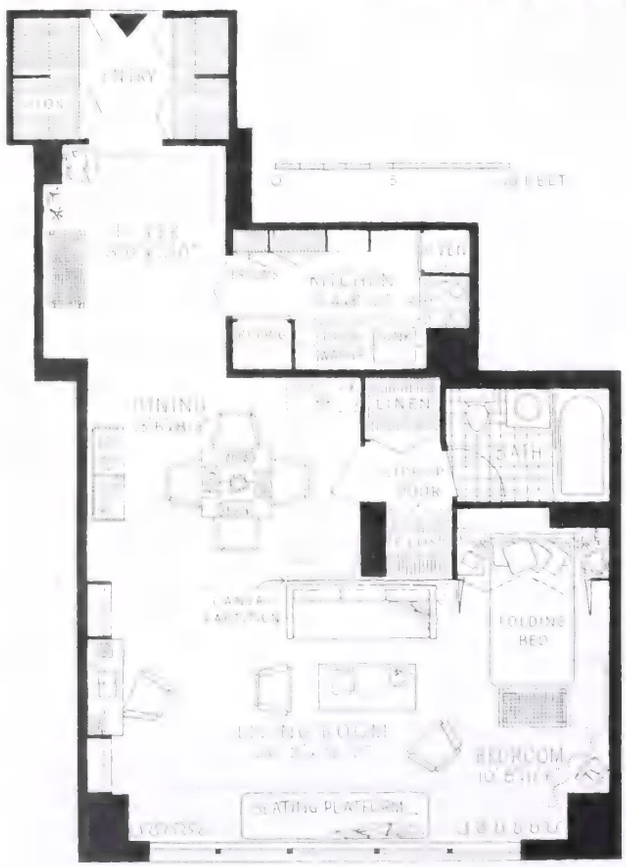
Three One-Room Wonders



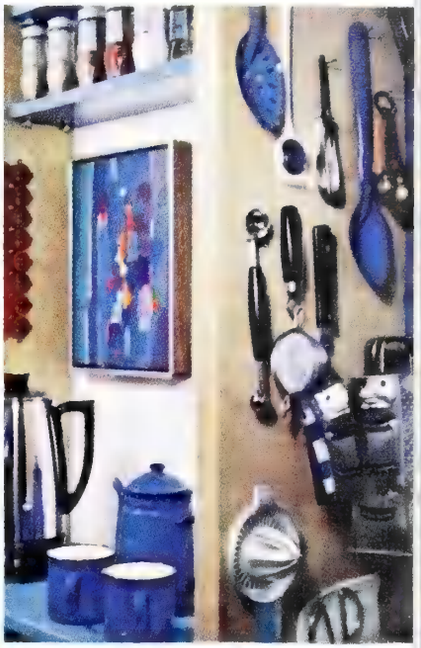
FIRST FLAT FOR TWO

This is the Manhattan apartment of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Lehman, young, newly married and, as their peers would agree, shot with luck. The planning and decoration of their one-room first home was masterminded, as her wedding present, by the groom's mother, Camille Lehman of The Lehmans, a design team noted for their expertise at creating distinction in places where none exists to start with.

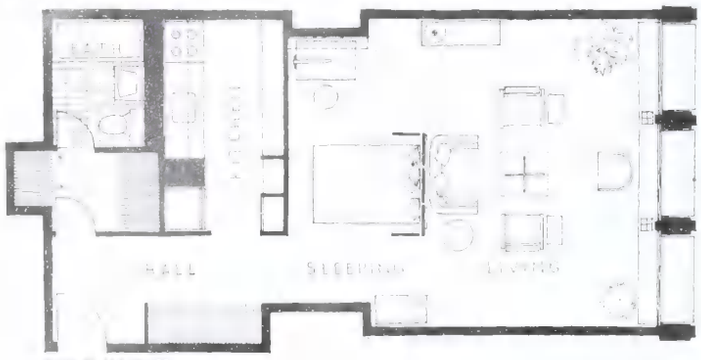
She bestowed on this one room the function of three. Living, dining, and sleeping occur in gracefully separated areas—the grace entirely owing to Mrs. Lehman's thoughtful concept of space and original execution.

Refer to the floor plan to see how neatly her innovations enhance the room's livability. Two closets thrown into one as a cupboard conceal a fold-up Murphy bed and insure that the apartment's daytime look has the character of a living room. "Lengthening" the wall—by the astonishingly simple ingenuity of a flat square of white canvas hung from ceiling to floor—manufactures space for a six-foot sofa. By-products of this canvas divider: a wall where the young people can display some of their favorite art, and, on its other side, new closet space. A pair of slender consoles, generally set against two short walls, join together to form a square dining table. Not shown: In the absence of budget for a second sofa, extra seating was provided by a low plywood platform, given casters for easy mobility, and covered in the same carpet as the floor: a specially built complex of bookshelves, cupboards, and a desk was designed to be easily movable to future quarters. For details about these furnishings, turn to page 114.

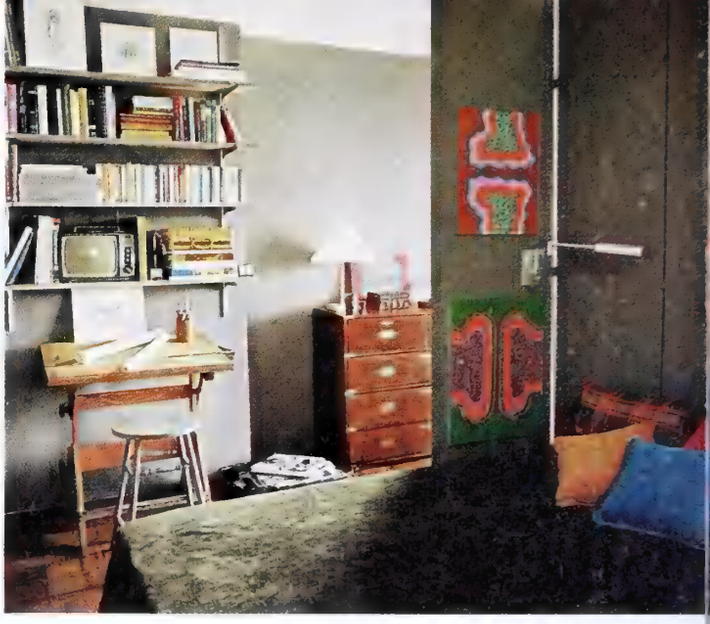
MADELAINE THATCHER



Ideas to make the one-room life graceful, uncluttered, unlimited: wicker chests that expand storage space while they serve as tables; a generous mirror, useful, decorative, and a visual trick to make space seem greater; a major piece of eye-amusing utility like the vitrine-bar-wine-cellar built of Mexican cane packing cases, topped with a Peruvian pottery church; double-purpose furniture of excellent quality to dispel all danger of the "make-do" look, like the cane-pattern Formica-top consoles, right, which join to form a square dining table, opposite.



HOWARD GRAFF



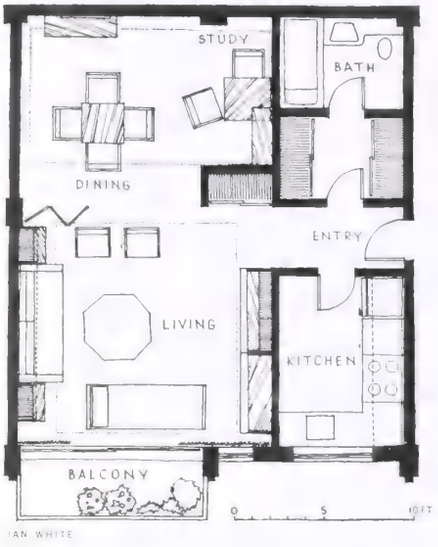
Budgetary notes for one-roomers: You can afford the handsomest, highest-styled wallpaper even where the price tag is gilt-edged, because so little is needed. For proof, the Lehmans' flowered bath and their plaid kitchenette, above. Custom carpentry was their greatest bargain in living comfort, providing a closet to hide their folding bed, above left, as well as built-in night tables to hold lamps and a bedside library. The doors hinge back, forming a little niche when the bed is down, then become a non-commital flat wall when the bed goes up (left). Behind the sofa is a free-hanging eight-foot-square piece of canvas, an imaginative and inexpensive way to "build" a partition or lengthen a wall for furniture placement. The space behind it has been treated as a closet (see the plan).

PLAN BY IAN WHITE

Within the outline of a one-room apartment, Mr. Patton has created a sleeping area, right, and a living room, below.

HOWARD GRAFF · PRODUCT INFORMATION · PAGE 106

A YOUNG BACHELOR'S DIGS



Opposite, above: Sleep-work area. Bed throw, olive-brown crushed linen velvet, blends with walls. Abstract paintings on the screen by a friend, Charles Holman. Opposite, below: Living area. Norman Holden painting dominates the room. On the small 18th-century chest from Japan, a collection of horns and porcupine boxes. Love seat (out of the 20's) covered in white duck with pillows of white-on-white Indian crewel. Giacometti lamp on a Directoire table. Wassily chairs of chrome and leather —the leather Patton's only concession to a conventional bachelorism. On the cocktail table, his collection of glass paperweights. Parsons' end tables, covered by Patton in snake wallpaper, and shellacked. Zebra rug was shot by a pleased client. This page: Kitchen, with putty-color cabinets and vinyl flooring, both apartment standards. Wallpaper, snake-patterned, was hung by Patton himself. More snakery: the snake prints. Owner's invention: gallon jars, bought at an Italian grocery, have tops screwed into cabinets, hold staples for cooking.

No bachelor's clichés here, not a bit of the dour dens of Henry Higgins or Sherlock Holmes. Instead, a bright and debonair room in New York's Kips Bay, a beguiling mix of modern, antiques, and professional do-it-yourself. All not unexpected when the bachelor, John Patton (see page 10), is an inventive Staff Decorator at Bloomingdale's. The only construction necessary was a free-standing screen (see plan), movable when the owner moves, yet strong enough to hold a large painting. It divides the room into a quiet sleep-work area and a most ebullient living-room area.

Left: One of the two rosewood tables, here arranged for four. Frame, chromed steel, matches that of the chair. On the wall, a rosewood shelf, with two useful drawers. Painting, "Reds on Red" by Mackey Jeffries. All furniture pieces selected from Founders CDP series. Below: In the living area, two couch-day beds, one with back bolsters. Surrounding the couch, bookcase-cabinets tied together with a cornice unit to make an architectural whole. Similar units make the storage wall opposite. These, from Founders "Patterns 14." Opposite: The second table, here working as a desk, a second wall shelf handy. Rugs, Karastan's "Camineau."

BLUEPRINT FOR FURNISHING

The originality of designers—and the versatility of the furniture they produce—was nowhere better illustrated than in this proposal for a one-room apartment, brought into brilliant being by David Parmelee (see page 10), who designed these pieces. Using furniture from two Founders series, he planned a boldly colored apartment for one (or two) with ample space for living, entertaining, storing. Many of the pieces serve two purposes: the couches are day beds: the storage wall, a combination of open shelves, cabinets, and drawers: the two card-size tables join to seat six, separate to seat four or eight.

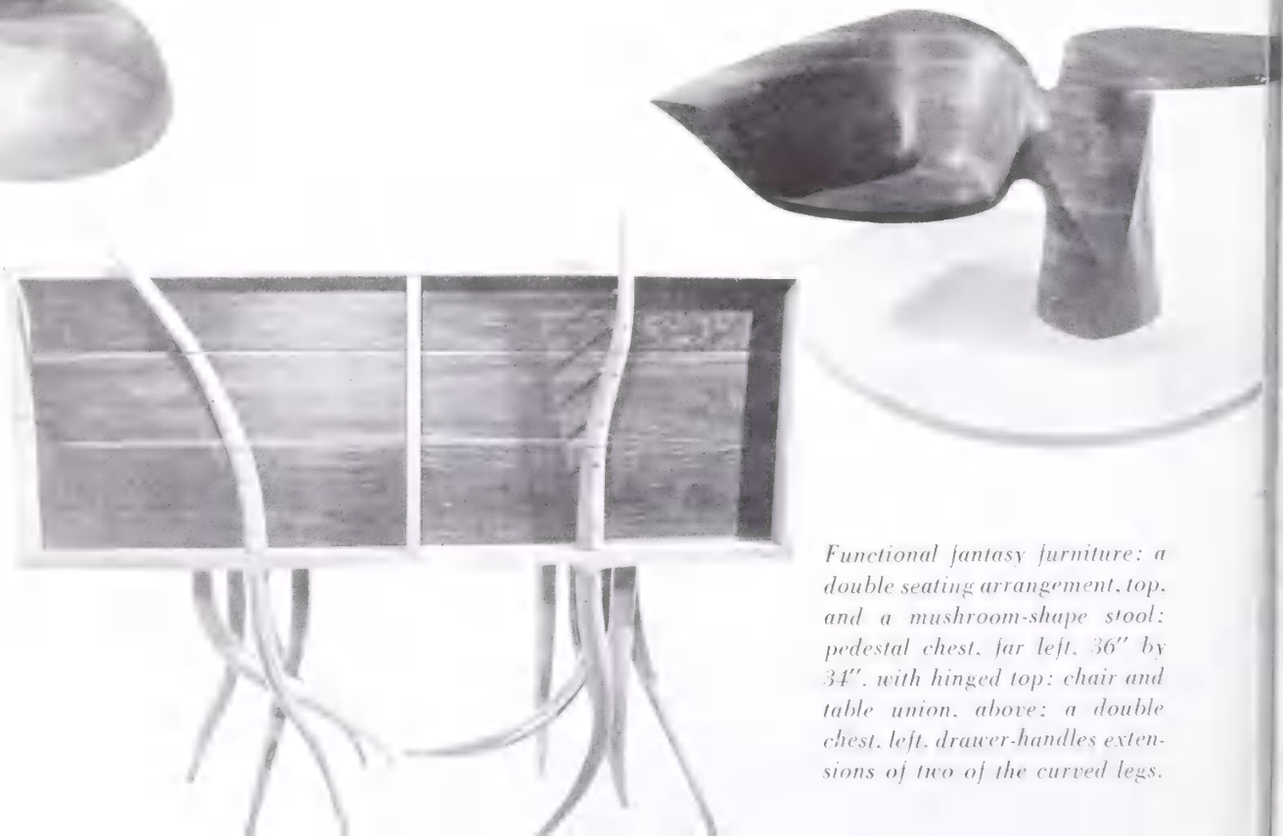
3 DESIGNERS: RISING STARS

Each, shown here with examples of his talent, is young, ablaze about his work, already honored in his field, variously involved in furniture design



SCULPTURING IN WOOD

Wendell Castle, 33, Kansas-born, well schooled in sculpture and industrial design, is famed for the originality of his furniture, which shows a strong sculptural quality and fulfills his aim to be "inventive and playful." His work has been widely exhibited, and examples of it are owned by galleries and museums. Currently his schedule includes teaching design at the School of American Craftsmen, Rochester Institute of Technology.

TURNING THE CLOCK UP

W. Michael Blocker, 29, Florida-born, whose goal is "to achieve excellence within the limitations of the particular working experience," graduated from Parsons after university work, and is now Design Director and Fashion Coordinator of model rooms and windows at B. Altman. There, part of his ability is exercised on updating and adapting furniture patterns of the past for present needs, but keeping the charm of the traditional.

ATTUNED TO TOMORROW

Nicos Zographos, 34, was born in Athens, Greece, has degrees in Fine Arts and Design from the State University of Iowa, is now freelancing architectural, interior, and furniture design. He says: "I see my work primarily in terms of economy of form, correct proportions, and fine detailing." All evidenced in the forward-looking examples, above and below, executed in metal, leather, and oak, for Zographos Designs Ltd., within the year.

BEAUJOLAIS

Wine for young tastes, young budgets

By NAN ICKERINGILL

A writer for the women's pages of The New York Times, Miss Ickeringill has specialized in stories on food and drink.

A wine with all the openness and generosity of youth, Beaujolais is certainly one of the best-loved wines in the world. It is completely without pretense, giving its all at the first sip and asking in return no agonized analysis of balance and finesse or a dozen other wine words that few people really understand. It is a wine for drinking in good, hearty swallows with good, hearty food. It is as appropriate with a pâté as it is with a picnic.

Beaujolais is ideal for the person who is just beginning to discover the joys of wine and has more enthusiasm than knowledge, for it is possible to talk intelligently about Beaujolais after half a dozen tastings without first spending hours poring over vintage charts and long lists of unpronounceable names.

Beaujolais comes from the relatively small district of that name in France. It is situated at the southernmost tip of Burgundy and extends virtually to the gates of Lyon, often considered the culinary capital of the world. In this region, where chalk gives way to granite, the Gamay grape, a generously fruitful vine that is looked down upon further north, achieves its height of glory.

The bulk of Beaujolais—and it is quite a bulk—does not travel well, but this is an academic problem, because most of it never sees a bottle. Much of it, indeed, lives only a couple of months in the cask, which is as long as the thirsty Lyonnais will wait for the wine they consider their own. They drink so much of it that it is said that three rivers, not two, course through Lyon—the Rhone, the Saône, and the "Beaujolais"—and it is a wonder that there is any Beaujolais left for the rest of the world.

Fortunately for thirsty Americans, however, some of it does escape and reach these shores. Although it may not be quite the same wine that is consumed with such gusto on the spot (few wines are), it is a wine to be relished, generally within two years of its birth.

One of the great advantages of Beaujolais, as mentioned, is that there are no names—beyond Beaujolais itself, of course—that must be remembered and relatively few that even exist. The buyer who can remember only the name Beaujolais and knows enough to look for the words "Appellation Controlée"—the nearest thing to a guarantee of authenticity—can be confident of getting a wine that is fresh and fruity. Wines labeled Beaujolais Supérieur are just that: wines slightly superior to plain Beaujolais, with a slightly higher alcoholic content.

If you want a wine that's a little fancier, it is helpful to know the designation "Beaujolais-Villages—" which means that the wine came from one of the 35 Beaujolais communes—or the names of some of the leading communes themselves. Moulin-à-Vent, Fleurie, Juliénas (vigorous, brilliantly red wines), Morgon, Brouilly (rich, deep-colored, less delicate than Morgon or Fleurie), Chénas, Chiroubles, and St. Amour are the most important—and these names are not very hard to pronounce.

Then, if you decide to get fancier still, you can always rattle off a few estate names—and quite a few extra pennies. For example, in Moulin-à-Vent: Les Carquelains, Le Moulin-à-Vent, and Le Champ de Cour. In Morgon: Les Gaudets and Les Grands Cras. In Brouilly: Le Pavé, Château Thirin, and Les Bussières. In Juliénas: Les Capitans, Les Mouilles, and La Vieille Église.

This quality sequence is typical of all the regions of France—the wine bearing the district name being generally less fine than one bearing a commune or village name which, in turn, is generally less fine than one bearing a vineyard name. In other words, as a rough rule of thumb, the more delimited the area, the better, and more expensive, the wine will generally be. But in Beaujolais it isn't (Please turn to page 109)

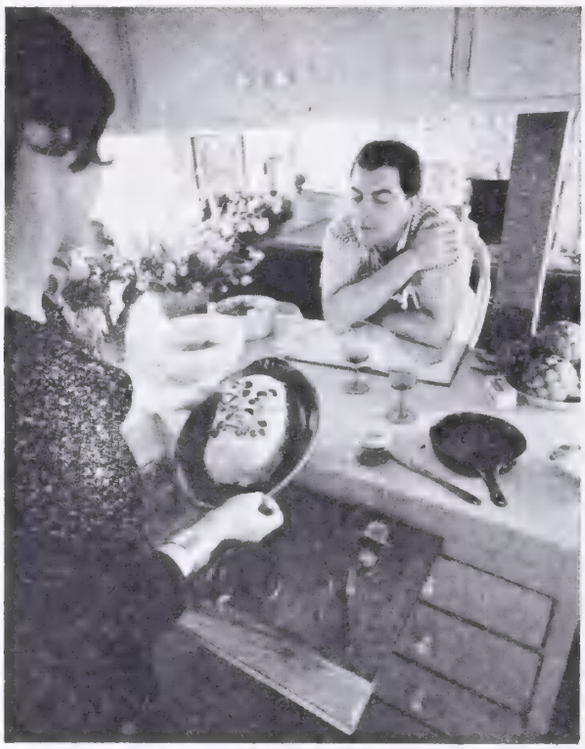
YOUTH OF AN OLD BARN

Editor: JACK L. HENDRIX



HOWARD GRAFF

Here you see one of the ways in which youth will be served these days. Its owners are the young Cameron Hoppers, lovers of land, spurners of the commonplace and, of course, on a budget. But they got what they wanted by joining with three other couples in the purchase of a great past-century estate in Greenwich, Connecticut. The Hopper share: ten acres of meadow and wildwood, a perfect environment in which to raise four little boys, and the dairy barn, the walls of which provide the shell of a house to be built by degrees. Architects Elder and Angell designed it. Completed to date, and shown here: the contemporaneous family room, which joins glass walls with antique brick and weathered lumber. In character with this modern yet nostalgic stylishness, furnishings chosen by Decorator G. Frederick Kuhn have an Early American flavor. The furniture, gold-hued as Indian-summer maples, is from the Pioneer Treasury of Temple-Stuart Co. Details of furnishings on page 116.

Four hands are better than two, especially when one pair belongs to Dinah, who will obviously follow in Mama's footsteps.

With Mr. Groucho Marx at her right, Mrs. Thompson serves the potage: TV star Mark Miller pours the wine.

Born, almost literally, with a silver fouet in her hand, Sylvia Vaughn Thompson was taught to cook "from the time I could balance a breakfast tray" by her mother, famous film star and noted hostess, Gloria Stuart. Fostered in this, the best cooking school, her natural aptitude was further nurtured by a year in Paris (at the Sorbonne) and exposure to the great French cuisine. Young and beautiful, it was a foregone conclusion she would marry a handsome man and live happily ever after. Now Mrs. Eugene Thompson, coauthor of four beguiling youngsters, author of Economy Gastronomy, a superb cookbook, she is currently engaged in writing her second. The Thompsons entertain constantly. Gay, wonderful parties, with friends from the film community: parties that belie the behind-the-scenes "planning and agonizing—as much over the guests as over the menu."

Although Mrs. Chamby is inclined to deprecate her cooking talent her modesty is part of her enormous charm—she will tell you she still has on her mind "a recipe I tasted fifteen years ago." Like so many European women, she knows food almost instinctively and learned to cook "in French" from her mother-in-law. A splendid cook, Mr. Chamby, French to his very marrow, refutes his heritage somewhat by a love for [illegible] food. Said Mrs. Chamby: "He will eat a sharp curry until tears run down his cheeks, then die of thirst for days.

Mr. Allen E. Bulley, Jr., is an active member of six Chicago groups dedicated to the proposition that "dining is an art and that good food and wine stimulate conversation." He is the youngest member of the Wine and Food Society, proudest of his membership in the George F. Anderson Society. His interest in wine and its companion, food, dates from his bachelor days, when it was piqued by many trips to France where, as have millions before him, he "fell in love with Burgundy." His wife Sallie, a tyro in the wine world—"but I'm learning"—gave him a fine wine cellar last Christmas.

On every cook a little rain must fall, and so it was when Mr. Bulley started to broil his leg of lamb.

"Three meals a day is all I cook," laughs blonde Mrs. Smith, as she arranges the flowers. Her perfectionist husband kibitzes.

Four factors conspired to turn Mr. Haviland Smith, Jr., into a fine cook. His background (his mother is Charlotte Adams, cookbook author); his travels in France as a student; his job with the State Department (he has lived in Germany and Czechoslovakia and will shortly be stationed in Beirut); an innate interest in food, combined with an inquisitive, experimental mind. "Next to my job"—he is attached to the Bureau of Economic Affairs—"which is so great I feel guilty every time I take a pay check. I love cooking. It's creative and helps me unwind." Like most representatives of the United States abroad, the Smiths are called upon to do a good bit of entertaining. When fatigue sets in, they pack up their camper-equipped Ford Travel Wagon, which sleeps the whole family ("a tight squeeze," according to Mrs. Smith), and climb a mountain to ski and hunt and blow the cobwebs away.

YOUTH WILL BE HEARD

The sound of the new music—what it is, where it came from, and where it's going

By JOHN S. WILSON
Popular music and jazz reviewer for The New York Times and High Fidelity magazine

Young musicians, young songwriters, and young singers are sending a whole world of fresh, exciting, new sounds coursing through today's popular music. The musical sound of the sixties is a startling mixture of exotic accents from India, Mexico, and Brazil, of basic, down-home rhythms and melodies, of occasional touches of the classics, of the growing electronic invasion of music and, in the lyrics, of a need to face something more realistic than the fact that "June" and "moon" rhyme with "croon."

"Sound" is the key—a third factor added to the melody and rhythm that once stood as the primary characteristics of our music. There is "Nashville sound" and "Detroit sound," "Soul music" and "folk-rock" each has its own distinctive character.

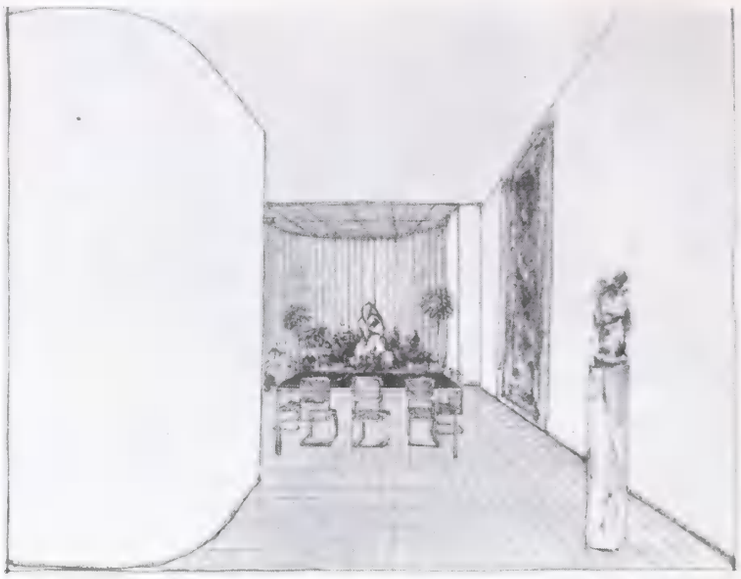
Many of these sounds are themselves a compound of others brought together by young musicians who are reaching out eagerly beyond the limitations of musical style and lyrical content traditionally associated with popular music.

Electric instruments — organ, bass, guitar—are part of the new sound. Harmonies, rhythms, and instruments of other cultures—the Indian raga, African drumming, the classical guitar of Spain—are being drawn into the new music. The direct, insistent, emotional beat of gospel music can be heard in its rhythms along with explorations in exotic time signatures. There are voices that never use words and voices with words that are as devoid of sentimentality as the traditional popular song has been full of it.

Early this year, a Parisian designer chose, as the ideal background for a showing of his spring-summer collection, the brassily rhythmic fusion of Mexican folk music (mariachi), with American jazz pulsations played by Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass.

"That music matches my clothes exactly," exclaimed Louis Feraud, as Alpert's "Whipped Cream and Other Delights" crackled through the normally hushed salon.

French haute couture, Mexican folk music, American jazz—this blend of seemingly disparate elements is typical of the invigorating curiosity which has led today's young creative talents to cut through the relatively provincial categorization which once designated a song as "popular," "folk," "gospel," or, the most esoteric type, "foreign." It is an international melting pot approach which, significantly, is very similar to the process which earlier helped to create the two most distinctively American forms of music —jazz and country music.



Jazz took shape in the uniquely cosmopolitan milieu of New Orleans at the end of the 19th Century when strains of formal European music from the French Opera House, European dance music such as the polka and the quadrille, stark Protestant hymns, rousing marches played by street bands, sensuous Creole songs, and tribal chants from Africa were all drawn together by musicians so unaffected by traditional dicta that they used anything they heard that appealed to them. Similarly, our country music was built on an amalgam of Scottish and Irish folk songs, the Elizabethan madrigal, spirituals, cowboy songs, back-country blues.

Both of these basic strains provided a foundation on which numerous variations have grown, some of which have developed into independent offshoots. Styles in jazz have changed from decade to decade. Dixieland, swing, bop have come and gone. A swinging instrumental development of the blues became identified as "rhythm and blues." Country music broke down into hillbilly, pure folk, and the commercial vein of wail-and-twang identified as "country and western." Popular music continued to be pigeonholed by (Please turn to page 107) origin until the emphasis on "sound" made origin of secondary importance. Even before the advent of the Big Beat a decade ago, sound had begun to become an influencing factor. In the late forties and early fifties, songs and performers once designated as "country and western" and supposedly of interest only to the country-and-western audience became the most popular form of "popular" music. Led by the songs of Hank Williams ("Cold, Cold Heart," "Jamabalaya") and such performers as Williams and Eddy Arnold, the country-and-western sound became so dominant that even so previously popular a singer as Perry Como had to resort to it.

Rhythm and Blues and Rock and Roll

This sound was soon joined to another new sound—rhythm and blues — to produce rock 'n' roll. With the consequent arrival of the Big Beat, "sound" was in the musical saddle. From then on, it was largely a question of escaping from the banality and oversimplicity of the first ventures into this new kind of music.

Searching young musicians began digging into the possibilities that could be found in new technological developments, in musical forms of other eras and other cultures, in our own native musical idioms.

Electricity provided one such avenue. Guitars became louder and twangier as the wattage was turned up. The electric organ made itself felt as one of the most versatile instruments of the new era. Not only could the organ add tremendous "body" to a small group sound, but in the hands of such a contemporary electric-organ virtuoso as Dick Hyman, it could make a medium-size group sound like a big band, make a big band even bigger, and achieve startling effects that would previously have been all but impossible even with several instruments. In jazz, spearheaded by the nerve-shattering explosions of Jimmy Smith, the organ became a staple in places which previously had a choice between hiring a minimum of three musicians or resorting to a jukebox.

Another new sound began to filter into jazz when Yusef Lateef, nominally a saxophonist, added the oboe to his arsenal and extracted musical sounds from 7-Up bottles, from balloons (both by scratching and letting them exhale), and from something he called an "earthboard." But the most persuasive sound that Lateef brought forward was a droning wail that seemed to derive from Eastern music, in general, and, more specifically, the music of India.

Ever since, jazz musicians have been paying particular attention to the work of Ravi Shankar, the Indian sitar virtuoso. The Indian tradition of improvisation—paralleling that of jazz but with a totally different set of rhythmic and chordal values—has proved a great attraction to jazzmen.

John Coltrane, already established as one of the most influential of contemporary jazz saxophonists, is drawing with increasing frequency on the sound and style of the raga, the traditional Hindu musical form in which Shankar specializes.

Through Shankar and Coltrane, Eastern music has been brought into the pop area, primarily by The Byrds. This group uses its basically rock 'n' roll instrumentation, heavy on guitars, to simulate the drone sound of the Hindu raga and to blend it with the organ music of Bach. In doing this, The Byrds have managed to encompass most of the dominant "sound" influences in contemporary music: Hindu, rock, folk, and classic.

Classical influence

The influence of classical music on contemporary sounds has been largely peripheral, much as it was in the swing era when Alec Templeton wrote "Bach Goes to Town," and the idea of swinging the classics with Larry Clinton or Freddy Martin seemed fascinatingly enticing. This time the motivating factor has been the Swingle Singers, a French vocal group organized and led by an adoptive Frenchman from Alabama, Ward Swingle. The Swingle Singers hit on their sound when they used jazz vocalese—the "dabba-dabba-dabba" scat style—as a vehicle for singing the works of Bach, Mozart, and other 18th-century composers more or less as written but with jazz rhythm accompaniment. The classical invasion began to be felt in pop music when an adaptation of a Bach composition, "A Lover's Concerto," hit the pinnacle of the Top 40 popularity charts. By the time The Byrds got around to Bach, it was already open season on him.

Nashville, Detroit, and Folk

The development of the folk line has been longer and more resolute. The folk elements that contributed to both the contemporary "Nashville sound" and folk-rock go back roughly 40 years.

Nashville sound is a polished outgrowth of the hillbilly and country music which was the foundation of "Grand Old Op'ry," the radio program which began in 1925 on WSM, Nashville, and has been going ever since. At first the program was aimed primarily at a rural audience. It was deliberately hayseed, corny, and, vocally, full of nasal twang. In the 20 years since country music rose to a dominant position in the popular field, Nashville's singers have lost their nasal qualities (which had often been contrived for local coloration), and its instrumentalists have become increasingly adept. Despite this, neither singers nor instrumentalists have lost the sincerity and relaxed simplicity which gave them their original identity. As a result, Nashville's resident professionals have created an identifiable idiom that is so much in demand that most of the large record companies and several small ones have established headquarters there simply to take advantage of this special quality. This has led to an air of mystique that is more apparent to outsiders than to insiders. Chet Atkins, a guitarist who has played a prominent role in the development of the Nashville sound and is now a recording company executive there, sees nothing mysterious about it.

"Actually," he says, "it's a state of mind reflected in the spontaneous enthusiasm of the product."

"Detroit sound," which is most successfully represented by The Supremes, a trio of girl singers, has been developed largely by one recording entrepreneur, Berry Gordy, Jr. It is based on a strong gospel and blues feeling carried on a heavy, rocking beat.

The most viable of current sounds, folk-rock, lies in a mid-area between the Nashville sound and the Detroit sound. Both Nashville and Detroit have moved on to a slickly commercialized version of the folk and gospel music which are their roots. The folk song emergence of the early sixties, as represented by Bob Dylan, is the product of a line of minstrels that goes back to Jimmie Rodgers, the Singing Brakeman of the twenties. Its sturdiest foundation rock was Woody Guthrie with his songs of the dust bowl in the thirties, and it was kept alive by The Weavers and Pete Seeger until Dylan arrived. Dylan's primary contribution to the sound of the sixties was a lyric content that struck directly to the immediate outlook of young people. His songs and those of Joan Baez, his female counterpart, said things to them that they had rarely found in earlier folk or pop songs.

But almost as soon as Dylan's approach had penetrated to the extent of being imitated by lesser writers and performers, he moved himself into an even more central position in the sound of the sixties. He backed up the point of view of his lyrics with the rock 'n' roll beat which is the sound not just of the sixties but of post-World War II music. The result was folk-rock, which first came to attention when The Byrds recorded Dylan's "Mr. Tambourine Man" and, subsequently, when Dylan, to very divided audience reaction, turned from his soft, acoustical folk guitar to a noisily amplified guitar and the attack of the rock groups as a basis for his performances.

While Dylan and such other writing performers as Simon and Garfunkel and The Lovin' Spoonful have been bringing their fresh and positive sociopolitical insights to the lyrics of folk, rock, and folk-rock tunes, the lyrics of contemporary songs in the more traditional popular music line—the boy-girl songs—have also been taking on a new realism, and this, too, is part of the distinctive sound of the music of the sixties. Sex has come of age in the songs of the Alsatian-born French singer-composer Charles Aznavour. "Who is kidding who?" Aznavour asks in one of his songs, "Like Strangers." And the answer, in the lyrics of his songs and those of others, is that nobody is kidding anybody any more than usual but the rationalizing is now being done in recognizable, everyday terms instead of in the never-never land of pink poesy, which was once the common vehicle for the popular song.

Whither jazz?

And where do such signs of rebellion leave jazz, which was, a generation or more ago, the great sound of self-expression, the noise of rebellious youth? Jazz is, if anything, more vibrant with the noise of rebellion than ever before but, in the face of sounds that speak so directly to the mass of young listeners, the rebellious sounds of jazz are, in effect, being played in a closet. The rampant squawks and squeals of the jazz avant-garde may possibly be one of the sounds of the seventies but in the sixties they are just a curiosity. Classically oriented Third Stream music decked out with French horns, tubas, and exotic woodwinds, which appeared to some listeners to be leading toward new directions in jazz in the fifties, has faded into oblivion.

Today a jazz group, like every other musical group, must be an alert participant in the search for new sounds if it wants to be part of the youthful mainstream of music. The Ramsey Lewis Trio found how to move into that mainstream when it applied its polished jazz technique to a rock 'n' roll tune, "The In Crowd," creating a new sound that caught the attention of audiences that had been unaware of the group during the nine years it had focused intently on jazz.

But one such breakthrough is no guarantee of continued acceptance. Things are moving fast in today's music—so fast that as new ideas continue to flow into it, today's "in" sound can be replaced tomorrow morning by some fresh, provocative, and completely unexpected blend of rhythm, melody, harmony, and sound. Or will a totally new element be added? That is part of the young excitement that is bubbling all through popular music.

as easy to go far wrong as it is in other, larger wine-growing areas. In fact, such refinements as knowing vineyard names are almost unnecessary—almost a waste of effort, since not many of the wines are estate-bottled, and those that are lose the great appeal of budget prices. Beaujolais ordinaire should run about $1.30 a bottle: Beaujolais Supérieur will be about $1.50: Beaujolais-Villages and the commune-labeled wines (Moulin-à-Vent, Fleurie, etc.) will be between $2 and $2.50.

Vintages, on the whole, do not mean a great deal in Beaujolais, where the weather and the wines are seldom harsh. But there are occasional disasters, and both 1963 and 1965 came close to falling into this category. On the other hand, 1964 was a big year both in quantity and quality, and New Yorkers were so impatient to get at it that a small quantity was flown in as early as January 1965. The '65's, which were not considered worth so much fuss and rush, are only now beginning to trickle in. Consequently, the customer is still more or less dependent on the plentiful '64's, plus an occasional '62 and '65.

In general, once they have passed the ripe old age of four, it is best to view the wines of Beaujolais with suspicion. But again there are exceptions, the chief ones being wines from the commune of Morgon, considered the longest-lived wines of the Beaujolais region.

It has been said that the wines that ship best are those of Fleurie, but probably the best known and most popular are the wines from Moulin-à-Vent. The windmill that gives the commune its name may have lost its vanes, but the wines have not lost their charms for most Beaujolais fans in this country.

Even the problem of color is simplified by the fact that Beaujolais basically comes in any color as long as it's red. A small quantity of white wine is made, but Beaujolais blanc is something of a rarity, though a pleasant one.

There have been reports recently of French vintners being fined for mixing red and white Beaujolais and calling it rosé (rosé wine is properly produced by using black grapes and leaving the skins in the juice only long enough to give a pink tint). This was an obvious bid to cater to the rosé craze. Yet red Beaujolais is probably as versatile as rosés will ever be, especially if it is served at cellar temperature (or slightly chilled if the "cellar" is a warmish closet). And a lot of people consider it to be vastly superior. ■

On Massachusetts' Cape Cod, some 40,000 acres of beach and sand dune, beach plum, beach pea, woods, marsh, cranberry bog, marine life, and seaside fauna in a state as wild and untrammeled as man can leave it; Cape Hatteras in North Carolina, a treasury of great beaches and a wildlife preserve; Fire Island, off Long Island, New York, wild dunes and marshes in surprising proximity to the metropolis; Padre Island, Texas, a Gulf Coast great barrier island of broad beaches and inestimable riches for fishermen and aficionados of marine life and wild birds; Point Reyes, California, 50,000 acres north of San Francisco, a matter of sea-sprayed caverns, lagoons, beaches, and offshore colonies of sea lions and ocean birds. All offer vacation adventures that would be sheer paradise for lovers of the briny and all things connected with it, but not of the blue jeans and Stetson genre associated with the National Parks.

SIMILARLY, in Acadia National Park, which incorporates most of Mount Desert Island off the coast of Maine, the nearest thing to a bronco would be a cruise boat bobbing in a choppy sea, and your real "podner", the National Park Ranger with his olive drab uniform, World War I hat, and inexhaustible supply of save-the-day information. Forty thousand acres of sunbaked rock and pines and huckleberry, it's a living laboratory of marine zoology and glacial geology and the highest spot on the eastern seaboard. It's a perfect place for hiking, fishing, camping, with the Park Service offering guided excursions through tidewater, trails and waterways. If that's not enough entertainment or education for one holiday, Bar Harbor, that fascinating resort of the last century, is on Mount Desert Island. It is said that its man-made transformation from unpretentious simplicity to a status symbol suggested that the rest of the island be "frozen" in its natural beauty before it too went the same way.

National Parks exist not merely because they are beautiful to look at. Their primary raison d'etre is conservation, their existence to be encouraged in its natural condition, protected, within reason, from artificial encroachment of all kinds, ugly or otherwise. In their maintenance, only the most essential clean-up is done—trees fall and remain fallen, floods, droughts, blights, and erosions pursue their inevitable course so that earth's living cycle is undisturbed. In these places hunting is forbidden, and the use of fire stringently supervised, although in many areas one may fish, swim, use motor vehicles, camp out, and even, as in the more extensive parks, put up in considerable luxury in inns, motels, or trailer camps.

IN all our parks the wilds are always a short distance away off the marked trails and roads. But for a pure primeval experience—where even the trails are merely ticketed and supplies are usually toted—there is Isle Royale National Park, an island wilderness in Lake Superior, available by boat from Copper Harbor or Hancock in Michigan, or from Duluth or Grand Portage in Minnesota. More deluxe approach might be via charter seaplane. Anyone wilderness-minded will love this place where one falls asleep to bird song, awakes to the splash of the beaver—or the bull moose—taking his morning dip. It's a sine qua non vacation for Father and the boys, and if we were making the arrangements we'd put Mother up at the island's Rock Harbor Lodge or the Windigo Inn while the men of the family hiked these 540,000 acres of rock and woodland, putting in each night at one of the very simple campsites that are made available. Fishing is said to be beyond belief, and there are boats to hire. This largest island in Lake Superior has pre-Columbian copper mines, the rock itself being close to pure copper.

Wind Cave National Park, in the Black Hills of South Dakota, is similarly an area that encourages campers—a great windswept prairie of June grass, needlegrass, and wheatgrasses, dedicated to roaming herds of bison, elk, and pronghorn, the fast-moving antelope. Naturalists find it fascinating because here east meets west, mingling their trees and wildflowers and fauna. The prairie is only half the show. Underground there are caves of crystalline calcite. One approaches this park via Custer or Hot Springs where there are normal hotel accommodations, and to the north, so close by that one shouldn't miss it, is the Mount Rushmore National Memorial.

Everglades National Park encompasses the very toe-tip of Florida and furnishes us with a tropical park within the continental U.S.A., which could also be called a warm-water marine park. There are jungle trails through mahogany forests and almost endless water trails through a hundred keys, through mangrove swamps and sudden bays. Alligators yawn, turtles gather in moonlight convocations, and birds you've never seen before put on their fishing shows for you—the cormorant, and the anhinga, who gets so drenched in the process of spearing his fish that he must sit in the sun with his wings spread out to dry. Here are the romantic ibis, the egret, the little blue heron, and those wonderful clowns, the pelicans, who like to see how close they can get to you and then swoop off when you think you might touch them. There are orchids and bromeliads and lush tropical vines, marine plants, and marsh lilies, a strange world of bright sun and dusky jungle, best explored by available boats. For private skippers, the Park Service organizes "Boatacades" through the park, sight-seeing convoys that safeguard you against floating off and up the wrong creek. By land the park is approached via a turnoff in the Tamiami Trail to Florida City, or from Miami.

THERE are well over 200 separate and distinct units under the aegis of the National Park Service's arrowhead symbol. Our advice would be: don't make a move to any before writing to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402, for a list of the copius literature which is available on each. Then send for what seems appropriate. There is usually a small fee involved.

Be aware, too, that there is often an entrance fee involved for a visit to a national park or monument or any federally operated recreational area. We are informed that you may now buy for $7 a wallet-size annual pass—a Federal Recreation Entrance Permit. This is available from the Department of the Interior, or through branches of the American Automobile Association. ■

Dinner at the Chambys'

Hors D'oeuvres Assortis

The hors d'oeuvres at the Chambys' are usually a combination of French and Danish tastes, reflecting both their backgrounds.

Champignons à la Bourguignonne

Allow at least 6 mushrooms per person. Wipe with a damp cloth, and break off the stems. Chop the stems fine. Combine softened sweet butter with minced garlic (allow two small cloves to ½ cup —one stick—of sweet butter), parsley and the chopped mushroom stems, salt and pepper to taste—a sufficient quantity to fill the mushroom caps generously. Place in a preheated 450° F. oven and bake for 15 minutes. Serve as a first course with French bread.

Jambon au Madère

Cut off ham rind and use it as a bed for the ham in the roasting pan. Sprinkle the fat on top with crushed tarragon. If half a ham is used, butter the cut side generously to keep it from drying out. Place in a preheated 300° F. oven for 1½ to 2 hours. At the end of the first hour, pour about one cup of Madeira over the ham and begin to baste regularly for the remainder of the cooking time. If the top begins to brown too much, cover with a piece of foil.

Place the baked ham on a hot serving platter and allow it to rest for 20 minutes or so. Meanwhile, skim off all the fat from the sauce in the pan, bring up to a boil again, add a bit more Madeira to taste, then pour into a hot gravy boat.

Pommes de Terre Gratinées

Peel 2 pounds California "long white" potatoes, slice about ⅛ inch thick, and place in a bowl of cold water. Before using, drain and dry thoroughly in a towel.

Layer the potatoes in a wide, shallow (about 2 inches deep) casserole with lots of freshly grated Swiss cheese, salt and freshly ground white pepper to taste between the layers. Finish the top with more cheese and dot with sweet butter.

Beat 2 whole eggs with about 1½ cups heavy cream. Pour over the potatoes and bake in a preheated 350° F. oven for one hour or until potatoes are tender when pierced with the point of a sharp knife.

Salade de Fruit au Grand Marnier

A mixture of fresh fruits such as pears, apples, peaches, melons, pared and cubed, marinated in white wine and Grand Marnier.

Serve with Crème Danoise. Known in Denmark as Raw Cream, this is a marvelous, rich sauce over fresh fruit (except citrus fruits) and can also be used to finish light cakes.

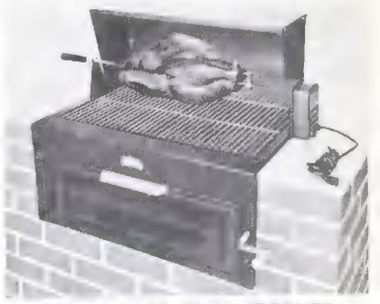
To make: Whip 2 egg yolks with 2-3 tablespoons sugar. Fold in one cup of heavy cream, whipped. Add a sprinkling of sugar and a dash of vanilla to taste.

Dinner at the Smiths'

Gulas
(Goulash)

1 loin of pork (boned)
1 pound bacon (in strips)
2 medium onions, coarsely chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced or crushed
3 tablespoons sweet paprika
2 tablespoons hot paprika
8 juniper berries
1½ teaspoons caraway seeds
Salt to taste
2 cups dry white wine
2 cups sauerkraut
3 cups sour cream at room temperature

Bone the pork, or have the butcher bone it for you. Set the tenderloin aside. Cut up the remainder of the meat into 1-inch cubes: the odds and ends can be frozen and used some other way. Cut the bacon into small pieces and fry until crisp. Drain on paper towels. Drain off all but a film of the bacon fat from the skillet, then brown the cubes of pork on all sides. Lift the meat out and set aside for the moment. Add the onions and garlic and cook until limp but not brown. Stir in the two paprikas first and then all the remaining ingredients except the sour cream and bacon. Add the browned meat. Simmer, covered, for about half an hour or until meat is very tender.



Goulash can be prepared to this point early in the day or even a couple of days ahead. Most cooks think it is at its best when it has had time to mellow. In which case you may refrigerate it.

Just before serving, stir in the sour cream and bacon. Serves 8.

About the paprika: Czechoslovaks always use both types of paprika in their goulash because, correctly, it should be quite sharp. Hot paprika is usually available in specialty food stores and always in stores specializing in Hungarian foods. Sweet paprika can be bought everywhere.

Knedliky
(Dumplings)

4 cups flour
1¾ cups milk
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup croutons*

Combine the flour, milk, egg yolks, and salt in a bowl and work together thoroughly with your hands. Then work in the croutons. Divide the dough into three parts, then roll each into a tube about 2½ inches thick. Drop into boiling water and cook for 30 minutes, counting after the water comes to a boil again. They will have a slight glaze when properly cooked. Give the pan an occasional shake to make sure the dumplings don't stick to the bottom of the pan. Once they start to cook, they will float to the top.

Drain off the water, taking care not to break the dumplings or lift them out with two small plates. They can be made early in the day and heated at serving time in a steamer over hot water. To serve, slice the "tubes" about half an inch thick.

Croutons*: Take half a loaf of sliced, firm bread and cut it into small cubes. Brown in hot butter. Any croutons left over can be stored and used later.

Marta's Sfingi

½ cup (1 stick) butter
1 cup water
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
4 eggs
1 teaspoon sugar

Combine butter and water in a saucepan and bring to boiling point. Take off the heat, add the flour, and beat with a wooden spoon until the mixture leaves the sides of the pan and forms a ball. Allow dough to rest for 10 minutes.

Add the eggs, one at a time, beating them in vigorously. With the last egg, beat in the sugar.

Heat vegetable oil in a deep pan to 380° F. on a thermometer. Drop the batter by teaspoonfuls into the oil, pushing it off the spoon with your finger. Deep-fry for about 12 minutes each, turn them over (if they don't do it themselves) after 6 or 7 minutes. Lift out of the fat with a slotted spoon and drain on paper towels. They look like little golden balloons. Makes about 40.

The sfingi can be cooked early in the day and heated up in an oven just before serving—about 10 minutes at 350° F.

Serve with this sauce: Combine 1 cup of honey, ½ cup of water, a dash of cinnamon, and the juice of half a lemon. Bring up to a simmer slowly. Place three of the hot "balloons" on each dessert plate, and spoon some of the hot sauce over them.

Dinner at the Thompsons'

Mr. Thompson's Very Own Potage Crème d'Artichauts
(Cream of Artichoke Soup)

2 9-ounce packages frozen artichoke hearts
1½ cans (10½-ounce size) condensed mushroom soup, undiluted
1 cup heavy cream
¼ cup chicken broth
¼ cup dry white wine

Cook the artichokes according to package directions. Combine with all remaining ingredients and purée in an electric blender or push through a food mill. Taste for seasoning. Chill thoroughly in the refrigerator. Serve in chilled bouillon cups. Serves 10.

Ballottine de Veau Glacé Sauce Collioure
(Cold Ballottine of Veal)

"Not nearly so difficult as such lengthy instructions would have it seem, and the end result is absolutely fabulous," cookbook-author Mrs. Thompson tells us. Organization, as is true in much cooking, is the secret. HOUSE BEAUTIFUL suggests you make the broth and forcemeat one day, finish the Ballottine the next, and give your party on the third. Net: A real spectacular in nice, easy stages.

Broth:

1 knuckle of veal, cracked
The bone from the Ballottine
Several sprigs parsley
1 onion, skin on
2 carrots
2 stalks of celery with leaves
3 tablespoons instant chicken broth
2 cups dry white wine

Combine all ingredients in a large, heavy kettle with 4 quarts of cold water. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer 4 to 5 hours, skimming off any scum that rises to the surface. Strain through a very fine sieve into a clean kettle. Set aside.

Forcemeat:

1 pound lean veal, ground 3 times
1 pound fat pork, ground 3 times
¼ pound hot Italian sausage
2 eggs
½ cup shelled, peeled pistachio nuts
¼ cup sherry (dry or sweet)
½ teaspoon salt

Mix all the ingredients together thoroughly with your hands. Refrigerate if not using immediately.

Mosaic:

½ pound cooked beef tongue
2 strips bacon
1 small can whole black truffles

Corned beef tongue is traditional, but any beef tongue can be used. Skin, then cut into 1-inch squares; slice 2 of the truffles into about 8 thin slices. Reserve the third truffle.

Buy the top and bottom round of a leg of top-quality veal, all in one piece, weighing about 5 pounds. Have the butcher "butterfly" the meat twice, first against the grain; second with the grain. As he prepares the meat, have him trim away any bits of bone, sinews, the skin and fat. Be sure to ask for the bone to use in the broth. This will give you a piece of meat all of about the same thickness, measuring approximately 15 inches by 12. Any small pieces that come off in the cutting can be used to fill in the empty spaces. Now proceed as follows:

Wring out a dish towel in cold water. Place the piece of veal, lengthwise, at one end, parallel with the towel, allowing the remainder of the towel to hang down from your worktable. Smooth half the forcemeat over the surface of the meat with a spatula, leaving a generous two inches all around the edges.

To make the mosaic: Lay the strips of bacon across the center of the meat, place the truffle slices on the strips, then lap the bacon over the truffles to cover completely and make a sort of tube. Halfway between the ends of the meat and the bacon, arrange the pieces of tongue on both sides, in strips. Smooth the remaining forcemeat over the entire surface carefully so as not to disturb the mosaic. Roll the meat up toward you, jelly-roll style. Next, roll the meat up in the towel as tightly as possible: tie both ends securely, then tie the roll with string, in 5 or 6 places, to hold the shape.

Bring the broth to a boil, reduce to simmer, then "ease" the Ballottine into the simmering liquid. (It must be completely immersed in the broth.) Cover and simmer gently for 1¾ hours. Lift out of the broth and allow it to set for 15 minutes. Unroll with care, rinse the towel well, wring out, and rewrap the Ballottine as before. Place on a cake rack, seam side down, over a pan to catch any drippings. Weight it by placing a pan on top filled with any heavy objects—up to 3 or 4 pounds. Refrigerate at least 12 hours.

To clarify the broth: Beat 3 egg whites until stiff, then stir into the broth with the crushed egg shells. Place over the heat, bring up to a boil, then simmer, whisking constantly with a wire whip, for 10 minutes. Take off the heat and allow to stand undisturbed for 20 minutes. Then strain through a colander lined with a clean linen cloth wrung out in cold water. Do not pour in the dregs and do not press the cloth. When it has cooled somewhat, refrigerate until the aspic reaches the syrupy stage. If it "gels" before you are ready to use it, simply melt it down over low heat and refrigerate again until syrupy.

To finish the Ballottine: Have to hand the truffle left from the mosaic, sliced thin, 1 or 2 whole canned pimientos, sliced thin, a few anchovy fillets stuffed with capers, and some fresh parsley curls.

Unwrap the Ballottine carefully. Trim ends if necessary. Place on cold serving platter.

Now make the Sauce Collioure:

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 tablespoon anchovy paste
1 large clove garlic, pressed
3 cups homemade mayonnaise

Sprinkle the gelatin over ½ cup cold water to soften, then stir over low heat until dissolved.

Mix the anchovy paste and garlic into the mayonnaise thoroughly, then stir in the dissolved gelatin.

Frost the Ballottine completely with the Sauce Collioure, smoothing it with a rubber spatula. Work quickly, or the sauce will set before you finish.

Spoon the syrupy aspic over the frosted Ballottine to coat it completely. Refrigerate until aspic is firm but still sticky to the touch. Add another coat of the aspic and refrigerate again to the sticky stage. Now, decorate with the truffle, pimiento slices, and the anchovy fillets. Dip first into the aspic, then place on the top and sides to make a design. Finish by spooning another coat of the aspic glaze over the entire Ballottine. Refrigerate. When firm, cover with Saran. Pour remaining aspic into a pan to a depth of about ¼ inch and chill until firm. Just before serving, chop the jelly into tiny cubes or whip with whisk. Surround the Ballottine and border the base with ruffles of parsley.

To serve, slice with a sharp, wet knife and heap some of the delicious aspic on each person's plate. Serves 10 to 12. Any left over keeps well refrigerated.

Pêches Rose-Chéri en Anana
(Champagne Peaches and Strawberries in Pineapple)

6 firm ripe peaches
⅓ cup sugar
¾ cup water
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 ripe pineapples, chilled
3 boxes fresh strawberries, washed, drained, and dried California champagne
Fresh ferns and flowers

Blanch the peaches in boiling water. Peel, cut in half, and remove the pits.

Combine sugar, water, and vanilla and bring to a boil. Turn to simmer, add the peach halves, and cook just long enough so a toothpick slips into the flesh fairly easily. Chill. Cut the pineapples in half from the tip of the "feather" to the stem. Cut or scoop out all the flesh and turn pineapple halves upside down to drain. Cut the core from the pineapple, then cut the fruit into fine pieces and purée in an electric blender.

Place 3 peach halves in each of the pineapple halves. Scatter unhulled strawberries around and over the peaches, spooning some of the pineapple purée over the top. Cover with Saran or foil and chill.

To serve, place on a large platter, tray, or board. Decorate with sprays of fresh ferns or leaves and small, delicate flowers. Uncork the champagne and splash some over each pineapple shell before serving. Serves 12.

Dinner at the Bulleys'

Jellied Madrilène, Kenilworth

Spoon well-chilled madrilène into each soup cup, add a dollop of sour cream, a bouquet of black caviar in the center and garnish with sieved, hard-cooked egg yolks. Serve with lemon wedges.

Charcoal Broiled Leg of Lamb

1 6- to 7-pound leg of lamb

Marinade:

2 cups dry red wine (Rhône or Beaujolais)
½ cup chopped parsley
3 onions, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon peppercorns, crushed
2 to 3 bay leaves, crumbled

Have the butcher bone the lamb and split the meat apart at the heaviest section. Then flatten the meat with a heavy cleaver to make it as uniformly thick as possible.

Place the meat in a large enameled pan, add the marinade, and turn the meat several times so it is completely covered. Cover securely and refrigerate a minimum of 12 hours but, better, 24. Turn meat occasionally.

Prepare the fire, and when the coals are glowing and encrusted with a white ash, begin to cook the lamb. Brush it first all over with a good olive oil.

Broil over the hot coals, 4 to 5 inches from the heat about 6 minutes on each side for the rare stage, 8 on each side for "pink," and 10 for well-done. Lamb, like steak, is at its most succulent when rare or pink, rather than well-done. Place the meat on a carving board, pour a few tablespoons of melted butter over it, and carve across the grain in thin slices. If cooked outdoors, serve direct from the board; otherwise place on a hot serving platter and garnish with a bunch of watercress. Serves 8.

Poires Desirée

1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter
Juice 1 orange Juice 2 lemons
6 jiggers Grand Marnier
8 to 10 canned pear halves
1 cup walnuts, coarsely chopped
Vanilla ice cream
Poire William (pear brandy)
Instant powdered coffee

Pour the sugar into a large, heavy, enameled skillet and stir over moderate heat until it melts and just begins to turn from yellow to light brown. Add the butter, orange and lemon juice, and Grand Marnier. Simmer over low heat for 5 minutes or so, stirring constantly. Add the pear halves and walnuts. Cook for 8 minutes, turning once with a spoon, taking care not to break the pears.

Have ready 8 deep serving bowls, each with a serving of ice cream. Place a pear half on top of each.

Warm 6 or 8 tablespoons of pear brandy, add to the sauce, and ignite. When flames die out, spoon brandy over the pears and sprinkle with a pinch of powdered coffee. Serves 8. ■

Armstrong introduces the new vinyl floor with cushioned comfort beautiful Cambrian Corlon

Cushions your step. Armstrong Cambrian Corlon is a vinyl floor with a new kind of foamed vinyl cushion underneath. It's delightfully comfortable to walk on because it gives under your feet.

Takes a beating—doesn't show it. For all its light-footed comfort, Cambrian Vinyl Corlon is as tough and durable as any floor Armstrong has ever made for your home. Even spike heels won't leave dents in it. It gives under your heel, then comes right back.

Smothers noise. Another virtue of Cambrian Corlon: its ability to absorb the noise of footsteps—the clatter of children at play. In addition, a floor of Cambrian Corlon dramatically reduces the noise of footsteps transmitted to a room below.

Beautiful design. New Cambrian Corlon has a warm, dappled design and comes in many beautiful colorings. It's perfect for the family room, entrance hall, children's bedrooms, kitchen—all the active rooms of your home.

Cambrian Vinyl Corlon is designed for active rooms like this: a family room.

Sealed seams for easy care. Cambrian c in wide rolls that install with scar a seam. Where there is a seam, it's s —spilled water can't seep in.

Warmer underfoot. Cambrian Corlon's ion base makes this floor warmer unde than most other floors.

Culligan soft water is a bare essential

For bringing up baby, to begin with. Bathing in Culligan soft water is not only gentler, it's actually safer. There are no hardness minerals to cause dryness and irritation. No deposits to hold dirt and bacteria. (You can recognize these deposits as the "ring" in the bathtub.) But that's only the beginning of soft water's many benefits. For example. Your laundry washes brighter, whiter, fresher and fluffier. Glassware and china dry spot-free without towelling. Shampoos leave your hair naturally lustrous. You enjoy better-tasting coffee and tea. Even shaving is faster and smoother. To have unlimited soft water, automatically, just call and say, "Hey Culligan Man!" He can tell you the naked truth about its essential benefits.

Automatic Models—you can buy or rent them. Portable Exchange Service with no investment, popular rates

Everybody needs a third set of "dishes"...

Some dishes are for every day. Others are for company. Freezettes are a "third set of dishes" that keep food fresh. In a freezer, a refrigerator or even a lunch box.

Freezettes won't chip, crack, peel, break or leak. Virtually indestructible. There are 15 shapes and sizes, all with press-on seal-tight lids that seal in flavor. Made to exacting Food and Drug Administration Regulations.

New! with Freezettes you can drop a Freezette straight from the freezer into boiling water. Use it as a serving dish. Wash and use again. And again. No waiting to thaw. No flavor loss. No pot to clean.

FREEZE! BOIL! SERVE!

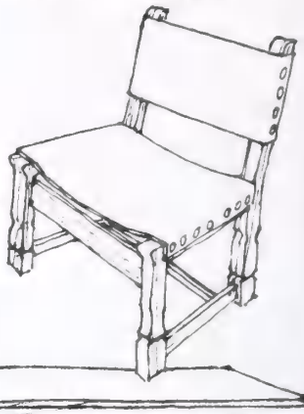
Then remove cover and... Place directly in boiling water... Right from container



Buy economical Freezettes... your "third set of dishes"... in housewares sections of leading department and hardware stores.

Behind her hand is a built-in you've probably never thought about.

AN RCA WHIRLPOOL CENTRAL VACUUM SYSTEM. It can save you more work and add more value to your home than almost anything else you build in.

Here's how it works: Handy cleaning outlets are placed throughout your home so that you simply attach a lightweight hose and wand to the outlet, clean away, then unplug the hose and hang it up. No heavy machinery to haul around, no messy bags to empty.

A powerful vacuum system removes the dirt and funnels it through the outlets into a dirt receptacle in your basement, utility room, or garage. This system cleans with more suction power than any home cannister or upright vacuum. And it's a cleaner kind of vacuuming, because dusty air is vented outside the house rather than recirculated inside your home. There's practically no noise, either, because the motor is located outside of your living areas.

An RCA WHIRLPOOL central vacuum system is engineered for long-life durability and service. There is a full range of models to choose from, EVEN A SELF-CLEANING MODEL.

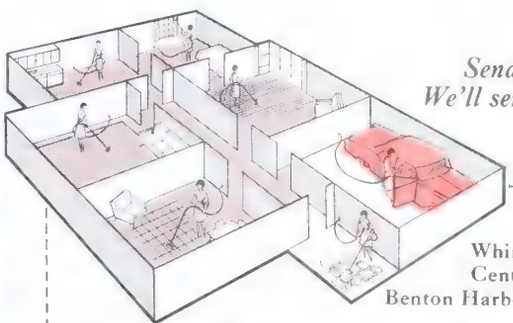
New home or old, you can install the system without expensive alterations.



Plugs in like a lamp.

Silent as a breeze.

No machinery to carry, no cord to tangle.

Trying to buy a home without professional help is like cooking with your hands tied.

You're liable to wind up in a stew.

Don't stir without a Realtor®

Looking at house after house after house that turns out to be the wrong recipe for your life is no fun. You'll get boiling mad when you realize you're wasting all your time and energy and getting nowhere. A fine kettle of fish.

But simmer down: You can save you and your husband headaches and heartaches by simply taking advantage of all a Realtor has to offer.

A Realtor is a professional in real estate who subscribes to a strict Code of Ethics as a member of the local board and of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Just tell him what you're looking for. He'll take care of the trimmings.

When you're ready to buy a home, see a Realtor. Look for this seal, which only Realtors may display. The rest will be gravy.

NEW RECORD CLUB PURCHASE PLAN

This amazing trial membership plan lets you choose seven records you want now for only $1 and order current hit albums as you want them over the coming months. In this way you can obtain the very latest albums on top labels for an average of $2.19 each plus shipping. Then, if you continue as a member, you may even obtain records for an average of $1.99 each plus shipping. Here's how:

First of all, as a trial member, you get 7 records for only $1 if you buy one now and agree to purchase 7 more within the next year. It adds up to 15 records for barely more than the price of 8. Averaged out, it brings the cost of $3.98 records, for example, down to only $2.19 plus shipping.

And now, in addition, a new bonus plan, bringing your average cost per record down even lower! For every record you buy after you have fulfilled your trial membership you receive a valuable bonus certificate. Save six of these and exchange them for another six records free. Averaged out, this brings the cost of records down to as little as $1.99 plus shipping.

Many other benefits too! A new big Club magazine filled with news and pictures of top stars. A wide range of choice—over 300 records a month to choose from. Charge privileges. No dues or enrollment fees; no contests to enter. Read more about these benefits on the stub of the bound-in card. Then indicate your 7 records on the postpaid reply card, detach, and mail.

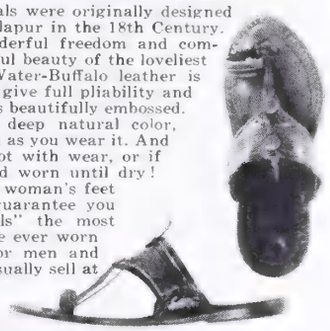
Beautiful "Kohlapuri Chappals"

INDIAN SANDALS



FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Hand-Made of Water-Buffalo Leather

These famous sandals were originally designed in the town of Kohlapur in the 18th Century. They combine wonderful freedom and comfort with the graceful beauty of the loveliest of India. Strong Water-Buffalo leather is worked carefully to give full pliability and long wear. Then it is beautifully embossed. Leather is a rich, deep natural color, looks more beautiful as you wear it. And it molds to your foot with wear, or if soaked in water and worn until dry!

This classic design flatters a woman's feet—is handsome on men. We guarantee you will find "Kohlapuri Chappals" the most comfortable and handsome sandals you have ever worn—or seen. Order in sizes from 5 to 12 for men and women. A remarkable bargain, too. These usually sell at $12 to $15.

There is a way to hit long, straight balls AUTOMATICALLY every time

NEW TRU-DRIVE TEES

5 for $1.98

You have to try this to see for yourself! And you can do it on our money-back guarantee. This tee gives you almost unbelievable results. Long straight drives every time!
It's simple—because the tee is based on aero-dynamic principles that prevent the lateral spin which causes hooks or slicing. The tee cups your ball (see illustration). When the club hits the tee all the power behind it goes into getting the ball away—and no matter where the club connects, the power goes behind the ball—gets it away faster, straighter. You may hit a few yards to right or left BUT YOU WON'T HOOK OR SLICE.
You'll get off drives that will amaze you for distance. You'll hit truer shots—this tee makes golfers out of beginners and club-champs out of week-end golfers. What's more, it saves you money on balls. You don't mark them up, you don't cut or mar them. You don't lose them so easily—and it speeds up your game.
Of course you have to try them for yourself. Order at our risk. If you are not completely satisfied—if you are not absolutely delighted with what it does for your game—return for a full refund.
Tru-Drive Golf Tees are only $1.98 for pkg. of 5. (They last for years if you don't lose them). But get enough for your partners and friends. Special offer for 3 sets—$5.75 postpaid. Order now—impress your golf partners next week-end!

f you like to draw, ou may have a God-given talent nerica's best-loved artist almost quit painting his youth because he was uncertain of his ability. ere's his advice to people who may be neglecting natural gift that could change their lives.

PHOTOGRAPH BY LOUIS LAMONE

/ Norman Rockwell

CAN'T THINK of a greater waste in the world than being blessed with a natural ability . . . and doing thing about it. A talent for drawing, for example, a wonderful gift. It can bring you such a rich and varding life that it just doesn't seem right not to e it a chance to develop and grow.

Nobody knows this better than I. I was born in a ibby tenement in New York City. I guess I always nted to be an artist. I remember, when I was six, ;wing pictures on old cardboard to amuse my ends. At fifteen, I had earned enough money from l jobs to go to art school. Then, over my parents' ections, I left high school after my first year so t I could attend two art schools at once.

Many times I became terribly discouraged and nted to give up art school to start earning money. my instructors encouraged me to continue and me work to tide me over. One day a cartoonist nd urged me to submit my work to The Saturday ening Post. To my surprise, they bought the first ee pictures I showed them and asked me to do ee more. I didn't know it then, but this sale ted me toward the realization of my dream . . . king the most of the talent I was born with.

story is not unique . . . other artists overcame ater hardships. Albert Dorne left school at 13 to port his family, but studied art at home in spare e. At 22 he was earning $500 a week. He went on become one of the highest-paid commercial sts in America.

tevan Dohanos, famous cover artist, drove a k and worked in a mill before turning to art. old Von Schmidt was orphaned at five. Robert cett, "the illustrator's illustrator," left school at Austin Briggs struggled to support his family in old-water flat when he first broke into art.

As I progressed in my career, hundreds of promising artists came to me for help. I gave them as much time as I could. But what they really needed was an effective way to master the trade secrets and professional know-how of many successful artists.

A plan to help others

Albert Dorne found the way. One day over 18 years ago, he asked me to meet him in his studio. There I found Dohanos, Von Schmidt, Fawcett and Briggs. With them were Al Parker, Jon Whitcomb, Fred Ludekens, Ben Stahl, Peter Helck and John Atherton. Dorne pointed out the growing need for trained artists that existed. Then he asked, "Why can't we develop a way to share our art experience and knowledge with all who have talent . . . no matter where they live or who they are?"

All twelve of us loved the idea. Taking time off from our own careers, we poured all our knowledge of art — all our hard-won trade secrets into a unique series of home-study lessons. We made over 5,000 special drawings for a magnificent set of textbooks. After we had covered the fundamentals of art, each man contributed his own specialty. For example, Jon Whitcomb showed how to draw his famous "glamour girls." Dorne showed step-by-step ways to achieve animation and humor. I devised a simple way to explain characterization and the secrets of color.

New methods devised

Finally, we spent three years working out a revolutionary new way to correct a student's work. For each assignment the student would send in, his instructor would actually draw in black and white or paint in full color his detailed corrections. Then the instructor would dictate a letter of criticism and advice. This way, there would be no misunderstanding. And the student would have a permanent record of his progress.

And so we started the Famous Artists Schools. Our classrooms are the students' own homes; our faculty totals hundreds of years of professional experience. The School started in a converted old barn in Westport, Conn. Today it occupies its own modern buildings and has thousands of students. All of us with the School are extremely proud of what our students everywhere have accomplished.

Our students succeed

James Ryan of Los Angeles, Calif., is a good example. If his God-given talent for drawing had gone undeveloped, he might still be a clerk, unhappy with his low-paying, routine job. Taking our Course radically changed his future. Today he's an illustrator at Hughes Aircraft — and pours out a steady stream of free-lance art work in his spare time.

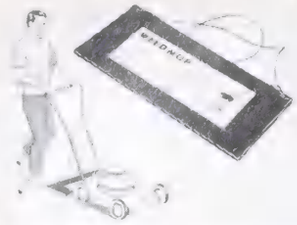
Virginia Bartter, a housewife from Ohio, found that our training helped her earn extra income for her family. Last year she received over $1,000 for paintings she did in her spare time and is now holding art classes in her home.

To Dean Brinkley of Arlington, Tex., the Course opened a new world of accomplishment. He's had growing success as an illustrator, doing important free-lance art work for firms like Texas Refining Corp. And last year he participated in nine art exhibitions and had his own one-man show.

Since taking our Course, Felcie Wells, a Charlotte, N. C., housewife, has sold every painting she's finished. And she's made valuable contributions to her church — painting murals and handling the other art work.

And an elderly woman from California told me her doctors stated many times that all the medicine they could administer would never replace what the Course has done for her health. She has found contentment in painting.

I am not at all surprised by the success of our students. Opportunities open to trained artists today are enormous. The School continually gets requests from art buyers all over the country asking us for practical, well-trained students — not geniuses — who can step into full-time or part-time art jobs.



Do you like to draw? Do you have the desire to train toward a full- or part-time career in commercial art or fine art? If your answer is even a tentative yes to either, I urge you to take steps to develop your God-given talent to its fullest. You owe it to yourself not to waste it.

UNIQUE ART TALENT TEST. Norman Rockwell, and the other Famous Artists have created a revealing 12-page Talent Test, designed to discover people who have art talent worth developing. Formerly, they charged for the test. But now it is offered free and graded free by a member of the school's staff.

Men and women who do well on the test — or can offer other evidence of art talent — may enroll in the School. But there's no obligation.

To get your free Talent Test, fill out and mail the attached postage-paid card. (If the card is missing, write Famous Artists Schools, Studio 5192, Westport, Conn. Give name, address, age, and ask for Art Talent Test.)

NOW YOU CAN START TO

SHED POUND AFTER POUND QUICKLY AND EASILY —THROUGH THE MAGIC OF "PUSH-BUTTON" SELF-HYPNOTISM!

HERE—FOR THE FIRST TIME—IS A SIMPLE, SAFE, SANE WAY TO REDUCE AND CONTROL YOUR WEIGHT!

YES, your weight problem is solved! An amazing method has been devised to rid your body of excess weight as no amount of pills, Turkish baths or starvation can. Called "Push-Button" Self-Hypnotism, this remarkable method helps your body use up excess fat—SO YOU LOSE WEIGHT WITHOUT WILLPOWER OR EXERCISE!

And once you attain your normal weight, there's no diet to stop, no chance of gaining it all back again. You stay slim—naturally! It's as simple as that!

HOW TO REDUCE AND CONTROL YOUR WEIGHT THROUGH SELF-HYPNOTISM

This book gives you 3 simple "Push-Button" steps that enable you to achieve a deep state of self-hypnotism in a matter of seconds.

In this state you are able to give yourself a special suggestion that helps your body use up excess fat for the rest of the day!

In as little as one day you start to see results! And—because this is an automatic "Push-Button" process, you need no special abilities of any kind!

What this means to you is this: though you still eat and drink all you want of a wide variety of delicious foods and beverages—you never gain an ounce!

THE MIRACLE YOU CAN PERFORM IN ONLY A FEW MINUTES A DAY!

It takes only a few minutes to perform the magic of "Push-Button" Self-Hypnotism. Yes, it's as simple as A-B-C.

That's why I say that in only one or two days you'll see:

- How to have youthful slenderness without strict dieting, exercise or heavy smoking!
- How to smoothe away aches and pains!
- How to relieve tensions and seemingly rejuvenate every muscle, gland and organ in your body!
- How to put new drive in your legs, new spring in your step!
- How to eat and drink practically anything under the sun without upset stomach or excess weight!
- How to resist colds, flu and respiratory troubles!
- How to restore muscle and skin tone, wipe away wrinkles!

. . . and much, much more!

In less than a quarter of an hour you may start to perform a miracle in your life!

You will be more alive, more erect, more attractive to the opposite sex, able to do all that needs to be done, during the day with energy and ambition to spare! You'll boast a splendid physique—and, though you eat all you like, you'll never gain weight!

SPECIAL REWARD FEATURE!

This method will do a lot more for you than just help you lose weight. It gives you:

- A more dynamic, commanding personality!
- Sharpened eyesight and hearing!
- A steel-shutter memory!
- Improved speech!
- Rapid learning! . . . and much more!

AMAZING TECHNIQUE HAS HELPED THOUSANDS

For example, in this book you'll see how:

- Jean J. lost all her excess weight after pills, exercises and hospital care had failed. She says, "It has all the earmarks of a miracle."
- David O., a 47-year-old editor, writes: "Losing 10 pounds was like losing 10 years off my age."
- Rev. Charles W. lost 100 pounds easily!
- Wanda D., went from 320 to 135 pounds—has never once had to pass up a morsel of food!

SEND FOR YOUR NO RISK COPY!

There is no limit to the weight you can safely lose this way, as compared to other more difficult methods.

And once you attain your normal weight, you stay slim—naturally!

To find out more about this new method of reducing, simply clip and mail the coupon below. You'll receive a copy of HOW TO REDUCE AND CONTROL YOUR WEIGHT THROUGH SELF-HYPNOTISM to use for 10 full days at no risk.

SIDNEY PETRIE pictured at left, is a world famous hypnotogist and consultant to doctors. He recently appeared on a CBS documentary on hypnotism, and has lectured widely to professional and lay audiences on the uses of hypnotism and auto-suggestion. He perfected the remarkable technique of "Push-Button" Self-Hypnosis after 8 years of private practice involving difficult obesity cases referred to him by physicians and other medical specialists. For nearly 20 years, he has been helping thousands of people to master unwanted habits such as excessive drinking and speech defects. He is a member of the International Association of Hypnologists.

Electronic MESSAGE MINDER

Why waste time scrawling a hurriedly written note that may prove difficult for someone else to read? Merely flipping a button and speaking into Message Minder creates a sharp & clear voice message on a continuous tape that never needs changing. When the absentee returns he merely turns the switch which automatically causes the message to repeat continually. Another flip of the button erases the message clearing it for the next. Compact, attractive, completely portable and simple to operate. Works on standard batteries. Batteries & tape included. 6" tall x 3" x 2" $14.95

NOBODY EVER TELLS YOU

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some of the common but often puzzling questions in cookery

By HELEN McCULLY

What is kosher salt? A highly purified, evaporated salt with large, jewel-like crystals. Very pretty and sparkly. The name kosher is a misnomer that probably comes from the fact the salt is inspected by a rabbi and conforms to Jewish dietary laws. You perhaps know that the dining table symbolizes the altar in the temple, and it is written in the Bible: "On all thy offerings shalt thou have salt." That is why it is an accepted custom in all Jewish homes to put salt on the table when it is set for a meal, so that the first piece of bread can be sprinkled with salt for the blessing. Historically, salt and bread have always been the traditional gift for a housewarming with people everywhere. Most good cooks of our acquaintance use both kosher salt and regular table salt, keeping an open, wide-mouth jar (for easy access) of each right on their worktables. Because the large crystals absorb moisture very slowly, if at all, kosher salt is nothing short of marvelous in high-humidity weather and, for the same reason, ideal, and elegant, if you serve it from saltcellars at your table. As an ingredient, kosher salt is perfect for salads, since the greens are less apt to wilt, and for meats and fresh fruits because they stay juicier. French people living in this country say it is an excellent substitute for gros sel (coarse salt), used widely by chefs and home cooks in France. Kosher salt should not be confused with ice-cream salt, a heavy, really coarse salt, made specifically to use in freezing ice cream.

What is Irish coffee? A combination of strong, black coffee, a dash of sugar, and Irish whisky, with a dollop of whipped cream floating on top.

What is a bain marie? The French word for double boiler.

Is there any way to build a backlog of ice cubes? Sure. Empty ice trays and place cubes in a polyethylene bag at once—before they have begun to melt and are still dry. Place in the freezer or freezing compartment of your refrigerator. This won't work, by the way, if you haven't a freezer that maintains zero temperature.

Are bananas and plantains the same thing? They are both members of the banana family, but there the resemblance ends. Bananas, as you must know, are a fruit that can be eaten out of the hand, or cooked; plantains, which resemble the banana in shape, are considerably larger—up to a foot long. Sometimes called the "cooking banana," plantains are coarser and less sweet and must be cooked to be eaten. In Sturtevant's Notes on Edible Plants, he says, "The plantain was probably cultivated in South America before Columbus." Like the banana, the plantain has three main stages of ripeness. First green, turning to yellow as it ripens, and deep black when fully ripe. It can be cooked in all three stages but is best when fully ripe. Plantains can be cooked in many ways, including baked, in or out of the peel (see page 126); boiled; or peeled, sliced and deep-fat fried. ■

TRAVEL TREASURES OF THE ANDES

Colombia. Peru. Ecuador—why-hasn't-someone-told-me countries—only a few hours away. Part I

We have framed this text in symbols—a sampling of souvenirs that unfailingly tempt all comers to Colombia, Peru, and Ecuador. They are tokens of the inherited folk art of Andean Indians whose ancestral civilizations were as complex as the Romans' when the Picts of Britain were painting themselves blue. They are merest suggestions of the surprisingly indigenous artistry to be found in these countries. We spotlight them because, like the South American lands they represent, there is nothing quite like them in the world. Then, to compound the differentness, history has overlayered them with the manners and mores of old Spain, a distant echo of the Arab Orient, and the vigorous look of today.

North Americans, looking for new fields of travel to explore, to say nothing of new friends to make, could well take note. And the most surprising note of all—it is all so casually close by, a matter of mere hours away. Braniff International Airlines, who lately carried us to Colombia aboard one of their bright-hued jets (its palette was green, with stewardesses Pucci-ized to match) flies nonstop New York to Bogotá, Colombia, in five hours and 15 minutes. From New York to Lima, Peru, the flight takes seven hours and 35 minutes, and there is no change in time zone to either city.

To beguile the hours, short as they are, one can always study the patterns and textures of Alexander Girard's cannily composed decorative scheme and the advertised "Air Strip" as the crew members vary their conversation-making uniforms. Braniff also has flights with stopovers (Please turn to page 128)

PHOTOGRAPHED IN PERU FOR HOUSE BEAUTIFUL BY EZRA STOLLER

Doors on the Costa Brava, in Mexico City, in Lima and Bogotá and Quito have swung open for House Beautiful's editors and photographers, whose quest has been tracking the immortal Spanish character in architecture, gardening, and décor...which has persisted ever since the wedding of Rome and Mecca no matter how many transmigrations or generations or transoceanic crossings.

Our conviction: That this strong, massive, structural architecture—struck through with thunderous contrasts of black shadow and white light, of austere discipline and incredible private luxury, of almost peasant simplicity and palace grandeur—is strikingly relevant today.

We hope you will look closely into these photographs and see the unusual treatment of windows, of stoves and fireplaces, of tiles and stone, of marvelously woven fabrics and rugs, of the sense of space and water, the curious flights of stairs.

We have visited architects, designers, decorators, weavers, artists, and cordial people whose homes are so beautiful that their reputation brought our staff ascending stern mountainsides and into lush and magical valleys . . . for your pleasure and illumination and quickening interest.

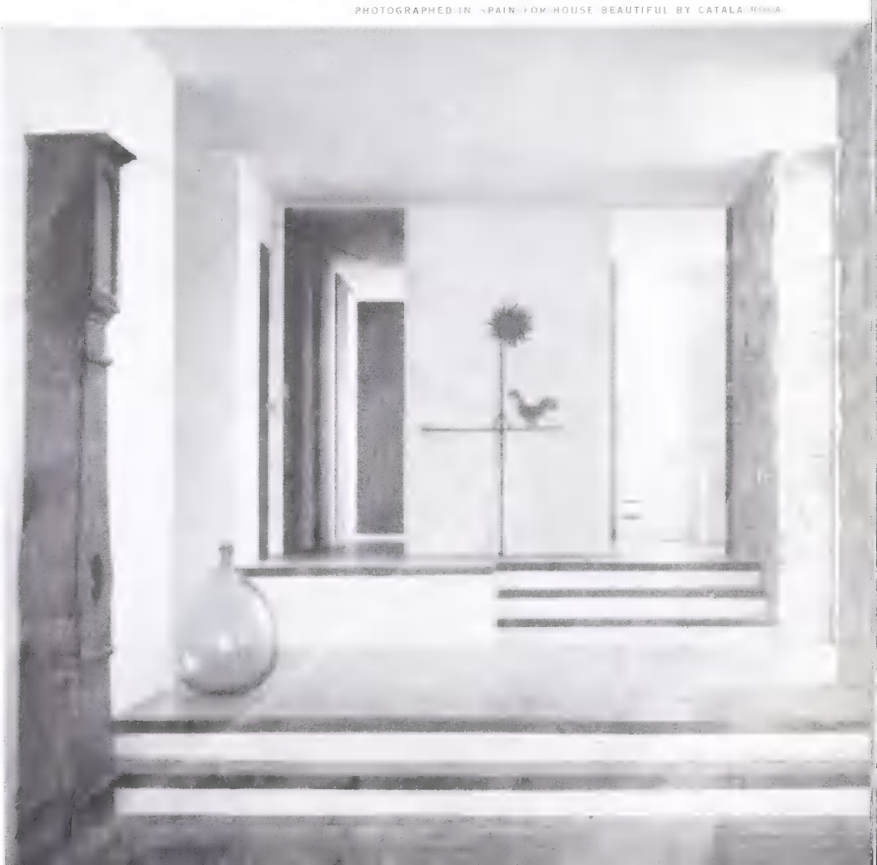
A SPACIOUS PAVILION LOOKS TO THE SEA



As you leave Palafrugell and drive up the hill away from the sea through the tiny, quiet village of Montras, you hardly notice The House at all. Its tiled roof sweeps down like a brow, like all the others; its retaining walls are ancient stones piled frugally into new usefulness—like all the others. When you finally arrive, The House before you is a marvel. And a contemporary marvel. It is nearly invisible, yet it is a spacious pavilion of light, almost 5,000 square feet under roof. It couldn't be more Spanish. Yet its architect is an American, Peter Harnden—brought up all over the world, with an office now in Barcelona—who designed it for an English architect-designer, Wyndham Goodden, and his family. (Architect Goodden is no doubt following the physician's philosophy in appointing an architect for his own house.) In spite of its Anglo-American forebears, the house has within it the eternal verities of Spanish architecture: shining vistas of tiles, fired in nearby kilns. High, thick walls of stone quarried from these hills. Patios. Terraces. Dramatic severity, strength, and scale that provide a great sense of luxury and serenity.

In the deep shade of its red clay tiled roof, sliding glass doors face the terrace facing the sea. Behind them, an extensive living-dining room. Above: A view of the gallery on the side of The House. Notice the vaulted ceiling, a design repeated on the covered porch and in the living room. Vaults are glazed terra-cotta tiles set in cement. The last opening on the left is the main entry. Right: Entry vestibule, seen from the living room. NEW IDEAS REVIVE AN ANCIENT HOUSE

Arches lift in an arcade as wide as the old dwelling. Indoors, a reprise of arches, varied in rise and curve, medievalisms to be treasured, whitened, used as striking backgrounds for contemporary furnishings. So decided Architect José Antonio Coderch, of Barcelona, when, four years ago, he rediscovered and bought back Mas del Puig, left, a house in Espolle, Catalonia, that had for centuries belonged to his ancestors. Since then the ground-floor restoration has been completed, as shown here and on the next two pages. Work on the second story, an 18th-century afterthought, will come later. To keep the character of the original building, structural changes have been minimal and only old local materials used for repairs. Major innovations, the masonry built-ins, whitewashed like the walls, are so logically designed and disposed that they seem to have been there always. And the new furnishings, being sturdy, simple, quiet-colored, quicken and contribute to the ages-old impression of strength and composure.

PHOTOGRAPHED IN SPAIN FOR HOUSE BEAUTIFUL BY CATALA ROCA

Left: The main entrance, glimpsed at the end of the old Romanesque archway. Inside the ancient walls are modern, whitewashed rooms with furnishings anachronistic in that they are all contemporary pieces by Spanish designers, yet completely apropos in effect.

Right: The living room. For the most part the materials are long-familiar ones. Iron for the fireplace designed by the owner. Leather and wood for the new-version officer's chairs designed by Jesus de la Sota, with gray wool covering the seat pads. On the banquettes, natural burlap and gray wool pillows. Hemp for the rug. But there are pluckings, too, from later times: the top of the lacquered cocktail table is black plastic; an electric lamp at the right height, hung on an old wood post. And there is an occasional divergence from the earthy tones—cushions of oxblood corduroy and rich velvets.

NEW IDEAS REVIVE AN ANCIENT HOUSE

continued

Architect-owner Coderch aimed at restoring rather than transforming the old Catalonian country house that had been the home of his ancestors. But wherever convenience would be served by changes, they were made, even when, as shown here, they involved different uses of the fine medieval arches that are the beauty marks.

Opposite, top: In the small sitting room, a favorite gathering place for the Coderch children, one arch is divided to allow for a new doorway and for storing firewood near the slim iron stove designed by Architects Coderch, Alfonso Milá, and Federico Correa.

Opposite, below: Again an ancient arch is interrupted for good reason—to make way for the door to the master bath, an addendum to the big triple-purpose room that was originally a stable. The double desk in this new sitting room-studio-bedroom is seen in the photograph at the right. The new built-ins here, as elsewhere on the completed main floor, blend in with the walls as if they were coeval extensions of them. The construction materials are indeed the same: old brick covered with rough plaster, then given a whitewash coat. Effective accents for the masonry built-ins: the tawny tile stair treads; wood tops to make end tables of the sofa arms.

VACATION LIFE UNDER 3 ROOFS

On the Spanish coast just 12 miles south of France lies the picture-postcard village of Cadaqués. High on a bluff between the village and the sea, its hexagonal faces designed to see both, stands a most extraordinary house. Walled in slate carved from the bluff itself, roofed with classic Mediterranean tiles, floored in typical terra cotta—it is nevertheless completely of today, proof that a new architectural wind is rising. Designed by Alfonso Milá and Federico Correa as a vacation house for a family with eight children, it is based on the hexagon, a geometric form unusual in architecture, except in the work of Frank Lloyd Wright. Here, three hexagons are side by side, each under a low-spreading tile roof. This provides a natural separation of living spaces within, and a variety of sheltered outdoor spaces. The interiors include many built-in and freestanding pieces designed by the architects; the fabrics and rugs are indigenous to the area.

Right: Speaking of the hexagonal form, Frank Lloyd Wright said: "I am convinced that a cross section of honeycomb has more fertility and flexibility where human movement is concerned than the square. The obtuse angle (120°) is more suited to human 'to and fro' than the right angle." The plan of this Spanish house reveals the intricate and interesting spaces developed out of the six-sided figure. One unit is devoted entirely to living room, dining space, and outdoor terrace—each at different levels, partly as a concession to the sloping ground, partly to divide what is a single large space. The other two hexagons hold the four family bedrooms—one a large dormitory for the girls—the kitchen, the baths, and the maid's quarters.

SHERRY

Spain's widely traveled wine

By FRANK SCHOONMAKER, Author of "Frank Schoonmaker's Encyclopedia of Wine"

It is sometimes said of certain wines that they "do not travel." On investigation, as often as not, this proves to be nonsense, perhaps even put out by the growers themselves, who sensibly prefer to drink their own best vintages rather than ship them abroad. In any case, no one ever made such a charge with respect to Sherry, which has been a distinguished Spanish seafarer, a consistent world traveler, for something over 500 years. It was famous in London when it was still almost unknown in Madrid, and two centuries ago it was certainly more readily procurable in Baltimore than in Barcelona. Casks or butts of Sherry, in the days of sailing ships, were often sent from Spain to the East Indies and back, for the wine was thought to be greatly improved by a sea voyage, and even today more than half of Spain's annual production, some ten million gallons, is exported.

Sherry, which is pronounced hair-eth in Spanish, takes its name from a prosperous, white, attractive little city—southwest of Seville and a dozen miles from the Atlantic in southern Spain—called Jerez de la Frontera. The Frontera or "frontier" in question was, in the 14th Century, the line that separated Christian from Moorish Spain, but the original vineyards were far older, and Roman coins have been dug up nearby, stamped, quite appropriately, with a bunch of grapes.

Originally and properly, therefore, Sherry is a Spanish wine—or, more precisely, a family of Spanish wines. Even according to American law, non-Spanish Sherries have to show their origin (California, New York State, South Africa, Australia) next to the word "Sherry" on their labels. Many of these, however, if made and aged as they should be, are remarkably good today—worthy cousins to their Spanish originals.

It is almost impossible for any fair-minded person to say with any shadow of justification at all that he dislikes Sherry: Chablis, perhaps, as too dry for his personal palate; Port, as too sweet; Châteauneuf-du-Pape, as too full-bodied; the average Moselle, as too light and tart. But to say that one dislikes Sherry is like saying that one dislikes books or children or music or fresh fruit—some, doubtless; most, conceivably; but surely not all. The large Sherry family aims to please, and its immensely wide range includes wines as pale and dry as the driest Martini, salty and appetizing as a wind off the sea; yet other wines are as brown as mahogany, sweet, nutty, warming, comforting, and cheering when drunk before an open fire on a winter evening. Somewhere between the two extremes there is a wine for nearly every occasion and for nearly everybody.

The very fact that such a wide range of Sherries exists has perhaps been as much of a handicap as a help to Sherry's wider popularity in America. We would hardly insist on giving Bourbon to those of our friends who are confirmed Scotch drinkers, nor on pouring our Dubonnet for lovers of vodka Martinis; yet when a guest asks for Sherry, he generally gets a glassful (a glass not much larger than a barman's jigger) out of whatever bottle of Sherry we happen to have handy—maybe an ounce and a half of a warm, brown, sweet, long-since-opened wine—when what he expected was three ounces (served, preferably, in a five- or six-ounce glass) of something pale, fresh, ice-cold, and appetizing. (Please turn to page 131)

THE IRRESISTIBLE RHYTHMS

By RICHARD FREED

OF SPAIN

The Hispanic infatuation is one of the great stories of music. In its directness, immediacy, and impact there is the very surge of life itself. It is the sound of a people meant to dance—imperious, impetuous, fiery, and sensuous music, reflecting the mercurial Spanish moods, from mysticism to abandon.

The full flavor of the Spanish character is found only in the music of the Spaniards themselves, but its irresistible qualities have worked their magic on composers of every land and age, inspiring many of the great treasures of Western music. "Spanish" music no longer belongs to one country. It's an international style, adopted by Ravel, Debussy, Rimsky-Korsakov, Glinka, Scarlatti, Boccherini, Chabrier, and others.

Its deepest roots are too far in the past to trace. There are echoes of the Orient and Byzantium, of Greece, Islam, and Israel. But above all there is the exceptional vitality of the Spanish folk tradition.

The strongest tradition is flamenco. More than song, dance, hand-clapping, and virtuoso guitar playing, it is a well of deep emotions. The Spanish word has two meanings—"Flemish" and "flamingo"—and is doubly appropriate. The Flemings at the court of Carlos V, in the 16th Century, were known for their gaudy dress and were compared to colorful strutting peacocks and flamingos. Their mannerisms in music, dress, and style were admired by the gypsies, who adopted them with flair. The art form that has evolved, mostly among the gypsy tribes of Andalusia, still carries the name.

There is humor in flamenco, and an easygoing charm. But its soul is cante jondo (or hondo), the plaintive chant-like song described by the brilliant guitarist Carlos Montoya as "the music the gypsies play for themselves when the tourists go home." Cante jondo means "deep singing" in the sense of deep from within, intensely personal and suffused with haunting, melancholy sound.

This is in contrast to the color and sparkle of the gay boleros, the fierce, primitive rhythmic exhilaration of the palmas (hand-clapping) and zapateado (foot-stamping), the alegrías, bulerías, soleares, and zambrillas.

But what of the world-wide influence of this wellspring of traditional song and dance? There is no doubt that some of the most effective Spanish music has been written by Frenchmen, notably Debussy, whose only visit to Spain was an afternoon spent in the border town of San Sebastián. His orchestral masterpiece Ibéria and the piano works, Soirée dans Grenade and La Puerta del Vino led Manuel de Falla to observe that Debussy "created spontaneously such Spanish music as might be envied him—who did not really know Spain—by many others who knew her too well."

Ravel, who was born in the Basque country not far from the Spanish border, cast many of his finest works in the Spanish style. These include the infectious Alborada del Gracioso, the Pièce en forme de Habanera, the enchanting little opera, L'Heure Espagnole, and the Rapsodie Espagnole and Boléro.

Emmanuel Chabrier's strongest hold on immortality is his sparkling orchestral rhapsody España, and Édouard Lalo is remembered almost exclusively as the composer of the Symphonie Espagnole. In the engaging ballet music from Jules Massenet's Le Cid, there are half a dozen characteristic Spanish regional dances. Jacques Ibert concluded his Escales with a rousing evocation of Valencia; Léo Delibes's Les Filles de Cadix became almost as popular as his ballet music and, as if it needed saying, there was Georges Bizet, whose Carmen may be mock-Spanish but, for many, the essence of Spain. Vincent Sheean's words, though written in another context, might be applied to Carmen: ". . . it has suffered the fate of excessive popularity . . . and yet, performed as written, it still has the power to excite a wholehearted enjoyment which makes us forget all the times we have heard it badly."

AN ELOQUENT STATEMENT

A master of ornament arrested, Luis Barragán is a multifaceted builder in the classic sense—architect, city planner, landscape designer, real-estate developer. His use of rough stone, mortar, and flat planes of brilliant color combines avant-garde assurance with a look of timeless Hispanic elegance and serenity. In describing his own house, shown on these six pages, he speaks of it as "an emotional piece of architecture rather than a cold convenience for living." Emotion, however, always rigidly controlled, without the slightest trace of sentimentality, its idiom translated into terms of space, light, and tactile versatility—elements he used with equal success in a quite different project, a chapel built for an order of Franciscan nuns. Barragán emphasizes materials in their near-natural state—plaster, concrete, volcanic rock, wood, homespuns. He uses natural daylight as if it were a sculptural medium. Color and texture are consistently contrapuntal, pleasurably insistent. He believes "primitive people and the very cultivated are concerned with beauty; the rest are content with comfort, order, alikeness."

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THIS HOUSE BY JOHN NAAR

Right: In the entrance hall, the floor is gray volcanic rock, but the rough plaster walls are painted and sing with color—vibrant pink combined with stark white above the stair well.

Famed and controversial, the floating stairs, an elegance of natural pine, seem to expect the flutter of winged feet.

The huge living area: Its 15-foot ceilings and its revealed partitions, juxtaposed, confirm each other, creating an ambiance of intimacy without constraint—separate spaces in a library and living room, but in complete agreement.

Luis Barragán looks on today's "intemperate use of glass" with profound skepticism as the tangible reflection of a loss of privacy that he believes threatens the current way of life. Only in the living room, right, does he use a large glass opening—a ten-foot-square window set flush in heavy concrete without visible hardware—providing a romantic view of a wild garden edged by coarse volcanic paving stones, its tangle of grasses, shrubs, and pirul trees carefully encouraged into a jungle of precisely planned disarray. Throughout the house, there is much the same theme—nothing is left to chance or overtidied. The furniture, largely made to Barragán's design, contrives an air of being contemporary, as ageless as the Moors who might well have appreciated the combination of cowhide and native sabeña wood. In spite of international acclaim, Barragán admits to no architectural degree. He made a fortune out of real-estate developments like the Pedregal Gardens, where he transformed a wasteland of thousand-year-old lava fields into imaginative, unique residences, cutting parts of houses, gardens, and swimming pools out of the natural grotesqueries of volcanic rock. Free of economic pressures, he has been able to build "only what I believe in." In the 19th Century, John Ruskin wrote: "No architecture is so haughty as that which is simple." Barragán's work confirms and contradicts—haughty, yes, but provocative, warm, enticing.

Above: The feathery look of the wild garden, counterpoint to the rough plaster walls. The ten-foot window in the living room normally has cream-colored half-curtains on the inside, full-length ones outside, providing a chance at varying landscape in keeping with Barragán's theory that "discovery promotes life."

THE ANDEAN IDEA

Now follows a 26-page scanning of contemporary domestic design in South America as we have found it in Colombia, Peru, Ecuador. Vigorous, often experimental, amazingly youthful architecture and interiors combine an alertness to the world at large with a mature pride in the rich design heritage of these Andean countries. You will be aware of a lively generation throwing off formula, seeking new solutions while it examines its roots, cherishing the best of its past to apply to mid-20th-century living. That is why, though there be much glass, brick, concrete, steel, and electronic cleverness, you will see through it all a sure reverberation of the grace and strength of Old Spain.

IN COLOMBIA, A THREE-STORY CASA DE FAMILIA

In Bogotá, eight thousand feet above the sea, the city's heights overlook a vast and placid tableland savanna, perennially lighted by strange and luminous skies, gray-opal clouds shafted by palest sunshine. Below the equator, its climate is still temperate, although its foliage is lush, the city tempo brisk, the traffic dense, the population ascending like the high-rise towers that push up above the highways. As everywhere else on earth, the city is spreading out, and land (lately nationally redistributed) is precious. So it was that Architect Enrique Triana, young, energetic, imaginative, chose this narrow, almost vertical plot on a hillside as the site for his own home. Here live Mr. and Mrs. Triana, a darkly beautiful young daughter, and three towheaded little sons in a three-story house which from its roadside entrance level has the look of a one-story white stucco caseta. Its streetside is as noncommittal and private as the blank wall of any house in Seville or Granada.

In a dramatic descent down the hillside, the house culminates esthetically in the lofty salón, or living room, shown opposite, trussed and beamed in native cedar, cedro, its brick wall finished in the soft, sensual texture of thrown plaster and the pleasing irregularity of local white stone. The room's architectural ornaments are its high-reaching window wall—24 feet high—draped in 200 yards of poplin raincoat fabric. Furnishings: a typically youthful, consistently neo-South American design medley of inherited Spanish Colonial, like the fireside vargueño traveling box; mid-Victorian, like the low "Isabellina" armchair; and modern, like the marble table, leather floor cushions, abstract Colombian art. (Please turn the page)

The logic of this country retreat—which was laid out by drawing the floor plan on the ground with a stick—is the logic of a woman who knew what she wanted and how to get it. Lola Obregón de Echavarría had designed several other homes, but found in this commission the ultimate challenge of wedding an exquisite natural topography to the simple, cultivated tastes of a world-educated owner. Not an architect but a gifted and perceptive judge of what architecture really is—knowing why and where to begin and then knowing exactly when to stop—she has produced here a remarkable example of native, domestic architecture. The environment and the rationale are pure Colombian, but the building itself is a primer lesson in the universal principles of good design.

The primitive, basic ingredients of the structure—unhewn eucalyptus framing logs, sculptured surfaces of plain plaster, whispering roof-grasses scythed right out of the windswept, Breughelesque landscape—all belie the shrewd precision of placement that makes this house seem so casually at one with its 20-mile vista of harlequined, cloud-torn savanna.

Señora Echavarría states her purpose very simply: "The important point I worked on was that each room should have a special view. The three tower rooms, for instance, although standing on the same spot of ground, are all different because of varying levels and seating arrangements. The top looks over the trees into the savanna, the middle through the trees to nearby hills, and the bottom sees mostly a huge rock full of orchids—but all are of equal importance."

1. In the master bedroom, paisley-patterned cotton cloth is used as wall paneling to conceal the closet and bathroom doors. 2. The bedspread is made of the same cloth, but the owner has given it a raised texture by embroidering around the leaf motif with crewelwork. The carpet is similar to that in the library but is woven of white wool and dyed burnt-orange. The headboard behind the bed is a Spanish carved door turned on its side. 3. In the intimately scaled living room, the hearth flows past the sculptured fireplace to become the raised floor of the sequestered middle level of the tower. (See the floor plan at the far left.) The woolen carpet is made of gualdrapas—square Colombian saddle blankets that have been stitched together.

THE ANDEAN IDEA

Abode of a Bogotá bachelor

Fernando Martinez' high-rise apartment illustrates his modern approach to space and his feeling for Bogotá's local ladrillo, or brick. His own bachelor flat reflects an additional talent for giving an apartment the dimension of a private house. From the duskiness of his wood-ceilinged living room, a terrace garden opens beyond the glass wall. Like the traditional Iberian patio, it feeds light and a fresh green aspect to the snug interiors.

PHOTOGRAPHED IN COLOMBIA FOR HOUSE BEAUTIFUL BY EZRA STOLLER

The Martinez apartment exhibits the contemporary cosmopolite's far-flung tastes and unruffled individual choice. In among a Swedish birch chair, an Italian marble table, a built-in sofa flung with modern and antique Colombian textiles and a vicuña rug from the Andean highlands, is a collection of nacimiento carvings (Christmas crib figures from Colonial churches) and a select group of pre-Columbian artifacts. These are framed in a series of inside windows between the major rooms.

THE WAY TWO ARCHITECTS LIVE

A designing couple lives here

Colombian Architect Guillermo Bermudez designed this very contemporary house in Bogotá for his family, harking back, albeit with the greatest of subtlety, to certain traditional Hispanicisms: in the double-level, two-story living room, juxtaposition of warm, dark woods and stark white plaster; thick masonry walls; the ever-so-slightly arched ceiling. Eclectically, art and furnishings span the centuries from sixteenth to twentieth.

Mrs. Bermudez is the gifted artist-weaver, Graciela Semper de Bermudez, director of XUE, a workshop for custom-designed, hand-woven textiles, sampled here in rugs, draperies, upholstery, cushions, bedspread. Cantilevered stairway leads to bedrooms for three youngsters. Master bedroom, cozily, rosily cavelike, is near at hand yet a self-sustaining private world for the elders—with its own hearthside sitting area, its walled garden, and a loom on which this "working mother" frequently works.

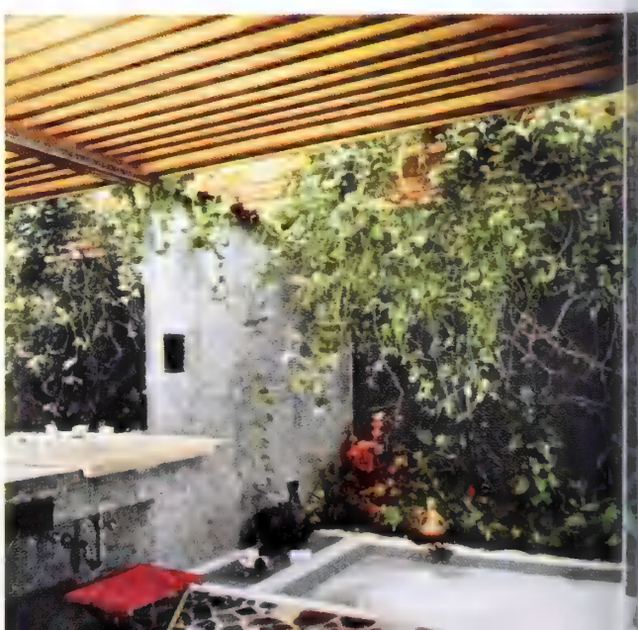
A PARKLIKE GARDEN OFF A QUIET STREET IN BOGOTÁ

By CARROLL C. CALKINS

This private, personal haven is a blend of many lands and many cultures reflecting the world-ranging interests of the owners, Mr. and Mrs. Eduardo de Shaio. Here are touches of Spain, the Orient, the South American jungle, blue reminders of a sailor's sea, water in placid pools and running freely over rock.

At left is the view that greets the day from the master bedroom. A door opens to the deck with an invitation to stroll over the bridge, across the rolling lawn of Kikuyu grass (Pennisetum clandestinum) to the waterfall, which is seen and heard from here, and beyond to a little lake with an island.

The site, which is just under two acres, was flat, dry, and uninteresting. With the help of the architect, Rafael Obregón, the pool and lake were dug, slopes and mounds made, and tremendous rocks put in place. The whole was conceived as a piece of sculpture, each part designed to accent another, each a pleasure in itself yet related to the larger scene and to the house.



Mrs. Shaio, an accomplished gardener with the eye of an artist, brought in many different plants for color, texture, and fragrance. There are species from the jungles below and mountains above, species that will grow at this elevation—about 8,000 feet. Some combinations not to be found in nature are thriving here. The tall, linear plant at far left is the papyrus used by the Egyptians for paper (Cyperus papyrus). The tree behind it with the light bark is eucalyptus.

The garden is mostly trees and shrubs of related shades of green with accents of blue foliage and yellow blossoms, such as the African Canary tree (Canarium) above the rock on the facing page. Nothing is overdone. All is quiet, cool, and serene.

The little island in the lake and the lovely waterfall were dreams to be fulfilled even before the land was bought—and here they are on this Colombian plateau. The handsome plumes of pampas grass and the willows are surrounded by mimosa, acacia, and eucalyptus trees. A garden inside, in the bathroom, right, has a lush planting of jungle plants that grow beautifully in the moist air and the light from the glass roof over the tub. The striped-leaf plant at right is a maranta. Brown tendrils are aerial roots of philodendron. Here, too, are cup-of-gold vine (Solandra guttata), malanga (Xanthosoma lindeni), and various native ferns. The patterned floor is made of broken marble pieces.

DRAWING BY MADELAINE THATCHER

This lovely place-apart, enclosed with trees and shrubs on every side, is on a residential street, as shown on the plan. In the back of the house, outside the master bedroom, is the pool seen on the preceding two pages. Decorative rocks in pool and garden were all brought in. The inside-outside swimming pool, in photograph at right and plan above, is a part of the playroom that runs from the front to the back of the house. The glass door swings down to water level to keep out the cold night air. Pool is heated and, in this mild climate, can be used the year around. The Datura vine over the pool is magnificent in bloom. The house was designed by Architects Obregón and Valenzuela.

Right: Dining-room foyer, the mood astonishingly sedate and worldly compared to the unmanicured earthiness outside. Walls, pure white; carpeting, a deep blue; the magnificent china collection and accessories are international—Old Chelsea, and Meissen—in shades of both. Closer to home, circa 1810, rare Colombian plates. Bird-cage centerpiece on dining table and porcelain chandelier, not shown, are French. Ribbon-back chairs are Italian versions of Louis XVI. Inset in door panels are French wallpaper cutouts, simulating antique blue and white Portuguese tiles.

Opposite: Patio, an enchanting retreat, where the working water tower conceals a small circular library on the first floor. Stairs, romantically stepped with flowers, lead up to a tiny room. Chairs, Colonial Spanish. Plaque an inset of tiles in yellow, blue, white—in the Hispanic tradition. A lavish mass of bougainvillea grows effortlessly over the wall. All about: marguerites, geraniums, roses, alyssum. Above: Corredor, a sheltered, columned porch, looking out on the patio. Potfuls of flowers everywhere are part of the Spanish "garden in a jar" tradition.

URBANE HACIENDA

Near the small town of Fontibón, just outside of Bogotá, is the hacienda of one of South America's most important designers, Antonio Angél, who divides his time between this farm and the cosmopolitan cities of Bogotá, Paris, and New York. Called "El Portal de San Antonio" (The Gate of St. Anthony), its fields are planted with hops and wheat, crops indigenous to this area. As in all South America, contrast and contradiction are in clear evidence. Inside the sturdy, rural exterior, typical of Colonial Spain, are refined interiors furnished with the elegance and excellence of both the Old and New Worlds. A true hacienda—low and wide, with a deep veranda, thick walls, and terra-cotta tile roof—it is a house complete even to its own chapel, where today, even as in days past, neighboring families come to attend Mass.

THE OASIS— A TREASURE BROUGHT FROM SPAIN

Here in the desert-beige foothills of the Peruvian Andes are two oases, one in the suburbs of Lima, the other about 30 miles north of the city. In their stark, sere surroundings they are cool, verdant, shade-dappled, and bright with water—in a tradition directly traceable to Spain.

At left: The dramatic contrast between the barren mountain and the tropical verdure that water can bring. This is a corner of a lovely 2½-acre garden created by Señora Mary Tweddle de Fariña, in the first range of the mountains, the Cordillera de los Andes. The Rimac River sweeps along the edge of her land, and its water supports this miracle of growth. There are plants from Ecuador, Colombia, Peru, and, behind the diving board, the towering eucalyptus, originally from Australia.

At right: The patio garden of Mr. and Mrs. Jorge Dibós in Monterrico, a suburb of Lima. The beige background in the top picture is a steep, dry slope, typical of the lower Andes. In the garden and the house there are gentle echoes of Spain: grillwork of graceful spindles, dramatic shadow patterns, contrast of light and dark woods, plants in pots, and old tile set in gravel. The L-shape house is one room deep, the garden a part of every room.

A trellis and bougainvillea-covered pergola are reminiscent of the Spanish ramada —sapling poles overhead for shade. The architect, Ortiz de Zevallos, of old Spanish descent, is a student and connoisseur of the antique tile and woods used here.

Many young Peruvians like the Cruchagas have become connoisseurs of Indian folk art and adept at using it with modern furniture and Spanish-Colonial antiques. Left: A gallery above the Cruchaga living room houses stereo and an excellent collection of plainsong. On its balustrade, a pottery horse from Pucará, where craftsmen are famous for making pre-Incan pottery bulls. THE YOUNG VIEW IN PERU

This duplex apartment in Lima, the first home of an architect and his bride, reveals that, in Peru, the approach of the young to contemporary living is as good-humoredly rebellious as elsewhere. Miguel Cruchaga de Belaunde planned the interiors with his wife, Doña Cecilia, who gave up a potential career in interior decoration and draughtsmanship when she married. (She designs her own table linens and on occasion lends a draughting hand in her husband's office.) Both are of old Limeño families (he is a nephew of Peru's President Fernando Belaunde Tery), and in another era might have been expected to perpetuate a stately traditional South American preference for French and Spanish baroque, silk damask, and Old World opulence.

To the startling and significant contrary, their three rooms are enlivened with the most knowingly chosen Peruvian folk handcrafts—Indian pop art, if you will—modern in date but as timeless in traditional techniques as the pre-Columbian artifacts that astonish all comers to Lima's Museum of Anthropology. All have been sought out in the local markets of the high Andean plains where they were made. Here they are freely, beguilingly accompanied by sophisticated avant-garde art and furniture and an offbeat collection of lamps and lanterns.

THE ART OF THE ANDES

Editor: FRANCES HEARD

Now, on these four pages, the very latest yet the very oldest of the New World's creative wealth. It is the Andean Collection, Jack Lenor Larsen's contemporary reprise of memorable weaves and figured patterns that had their beginnings in the ancient Indian civilizations of Colombia, Bolivia, Ecuador, and Peru. Mr. Larsen, artist-weaver, textile technologist, and amateur anthropologist, has been a long-time scholar of pre-Columbian cultures. Prophetically, his student thesis bore the title, "Some Contemporary Implications of Ancient Peruvian Textiles." Here the implication is clear—these fabrics, whose fabulous prototypes can be seen in the glass cases of great museums and in jealously cherished private collections, offer aficionados of excellence a fresh choice of textures, colors, and patterns with which to put substantial elegance into modern rooms, whether avant-garde or traditional. The Andean Collection, which will tour museums, is available at Lord and Taylor.

THE WORLD'S MOST SOPHISTICATED TEXTILES

The weaving expertise of the pre-Columbian Indian civilizations has never been surpassed anywhere in the world. It had its dawning 4,000 years ago in the fishnets and basketry of coastal Peru, reached its sophisticated zenith in the complex knits and double weaves of Paracas (100 B.C.) and the finer-than-Aubusson slit tapestries of the Tiahuanaco Empire, which flourished mightily before the mighty Incas. So cunning and varied were these weaves—ranging from crepey gauzes to the intricate, warming ruana and poncho cloths of the chilly, rarefied mountains—that modern textile mills can duplicate no more than one-third of them. Reflecting this beauty, the new Larsen collection offers 13 different weaves and patterns in a wide color choice. We sample eight of them on these four pages. Far left: Weaving Larsen fabrics in the Colombia workshop. Left: "Tiahuanaco," ancient pattern on a Victorian chair.

UN BOCADITO

— a little taste —

of South American cooking

By HELEN McCULLY

South Americans have been singularly blessed by the "fruits" of the earth. Their cuisines reflect, as do our own, the influence of the many peoples from other lands who have made their homes there. If you were to visit a South American home, you would discover, as have many before you, how beautifully they use their native foods. A purée of black beans, those rich little nuggets—with the spice of hot sausage—becomes something more than Black Bean Soup (Sopa de Frijoles Negros); chicken breasts, in a bed of whipped cream cheese, dressed with a fresh coconut sauce, are far more fascinating than the long name, Pollo en Salsa de Guesco; and a custard takes on new dimensions when fresh orange juice is combined with eggs and thick cream to make Postre de Naranja. We invite you to take these recipes into the kitchen with you and enjoy un bocadito—a delicious little taste—of the individual cooking of our neighbors to the south.

EDITOR'S NOTE: HOUSE BEAUTIFUL is grateful to Doña Helma, of the Casa Brasil Restaurant, 440 East 86th Street, New York City, who gave us free access to her file of South American recipes. Her little restaurant (it seats only 20 guests), one of the most attractive in New York, has beautifully cooked food at modest prices. Reservations are essential.

Postre de Naranja
(Orange Custard)

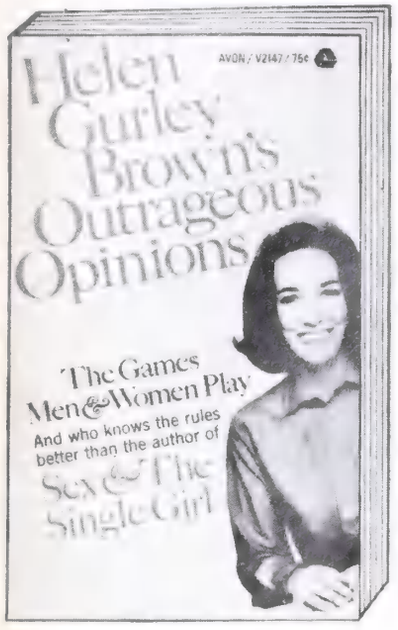
1½ cups sugar
5 eggs
3 egg yolks
Grated rind from 2 oranges
1½ cups fresh orange juice, strained (about 5 juicy oranges)
1 cup heavy cream

Place ¾ cup of the sugar in a large, heavy skillet, over high heat, and cook, stirring constantly with a wooden spatula, until the sugar has caramelized. Pour immediately into a 2-quart casserole (a soufflé dish is nice), tipping the dish back and forth until the bottom is completely covered. Work quickly or the syrup will harden. Set aside to cool.

Combine eggs, egg yolks, and remaining sugar and beat vigorously with an electric beater or in an electric mixer until thick and creamy. Stir in the orange rind, juice, and heavy cream thoroughly. Pour into the cold prepared casserole and place in a large pan. Add enough hot water to reach to about two-thirds the depth of the mold. Bake in a preheated 400° F. oven 1 hour or until a silver knife comes out clean when plunged into the custard toward the outer edge. The center will still "shiver," but the custard goes on cooking after it comes from the oven. If, as it cooks, it seems to be browning too much, cover lightly with a piece of aluminum foil. Cool, then refrigerate until cold. Serves 6.

Gazpacho

1 clove garlic, peeled and chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
1 cucumber, chopped
3 ripe tomatoes, peeled and chopped
1 green pepper, seeded and chopped
¼ cup vinegar
¾ cup tomato juice
Good dash salt
Good dash cayenne
¼ cup olive oil
4 eggs, well beaten



Combine the vegetables with all the ingredients, except the eggs, and purée in an electric blender. Mix in the well-beaten eggs. Taste for seasoning. Chill. Serve with the following garnishes, each in a separate bowl: croutons (HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, July issue), diced cucumber, chopped scallions, chopped green pepper, chopped ripe tomato. Serves 8.

THE IRRESISTIBLE RHYTHMS OF SPAIN

The spirit of Spain deeply impressed the sensitive Slavic composers: Rimsky-Korsakov, whose Capriccio espagnol is one of the most glittering of all orchestral showpieces, acknowledged in his autobiography the stunning effect of Glinka's Jota aragonesa, which he first heard as a boy of fifteen. Glinka, the father of Russian music, wrote another charming Spanish piece called Summer Night in Madrid. Moritz Moszkowski, a Pole, made a career of writing Spanish music. His reputation rests primarily on the ingratiating set of Spanish Dances (Op. 12) and the ballet music from the opera, Boabdil. Moszkowski also had a hand in the development of "genuine" Spanish music, through his strong influence on his piano pupil, Joaquín Turina.

"Spanish" influence

Domenico Scarlatti and Luigi Boccherini could hardly be called Spaniards, but they spent most of their creative years in Spain and were probably the outstanding "Spanish" composers of the Eighteenth Century.

Scarlatti wrote more than five hundred harpsichord sonatas. The flamenco rhythms and the sound of the guitar dance through most of them. It's no wonder that Andrés Segovia has transcribed many for his instrument. Boccherini actually wrote for the guitar in both orchestral and chamber music, and the Spanish flavor of much of his music is unmistakable.

The Spanish influence was so strong before Boccherini got to Spain that hardly any serious composer failed to acknowledge it in his work. Many of the Baroque masters were particularly attracted to an old, virtually untraceable tune called La Folía, now thought to be originally Portuguese, and not Spanish. Among those composers who wrote variations on the theme of La Folía were Corelli, who stretched them into a whole sonata, Tartini, Vivaldi—the "Who's Who" of the Italian Baroque.

Many others quoted or embellished the tune, sometimes offering it under the French title Folies d'Espagne. Liszt used this and the same Jota aragonesa favored by Glinka as the basis of his Spanish Rhapsody.

Even the solemn Hebraic chant Kol Nidrei, which ushers in Yom Kippur, the holiest day in the Jewish year, is said to derive from La Folía. This is a reasonable surmise since Kol Nidrei originated in Spain. On the other hand, Spanish music, especially cante jondo and cante flamenco was indebted in the beginning to Moorish and Jewish music.

In the distant past, Spain produced the towering polyphonist Tomás Luis de Victoria (1549-1611), the peer of Palestrina. But, except for the keyboard music of Padre Antonio Soler (1729-1783), there was little in the following three centuries to command similar attention.

Juan Crisóstomo de Arriaga, the remarkable "Spanish Mozart," died in his twentieth year in 1826. Although his music is more Mozartian than Spanish, it is overdue for rediscovery. There are some fine recordings of his superb string quartets. Unfortunately the compositions of Pablo de Sarasate, the legendary 19th-century violinist for whom Lalo composed the Symphonie espagnole, are limited to nothing more than a few virtuoso trifles.

As in the musical history of so many other cultures, Spanish composers of stature began to emerge only when they turned their attention to the folk and traditional music of their own people. In Spain, this was slow in coming.

New musical glories

The Spanish musical renaissance began in earnest about seventy-five years ago with the piano music of Isaac Albéniz, parts of whose Ibéria are more familiar in the classic orchestral transcriptions of Enrique Fernández Arbós. It continued with Enrique Granados, whose most significant contributions were his Spanish Dances and the Goyescas for piano. Several of the dances have been orchestrated (No. 5, called Andaluza or Playera, is the best known), and the Intermezzo from Granados' "other" Goyescas (a one-act opera) is a popular encore piece for both orchestras and cellists.

Then came the great Manuel de Falla, with his ballets El Amor Brujo and The Three-Cornered Hat, the opera La Vida Breve, and the atmospheric fantasy for piano and orchestra called Nights in the Gardens of Spain. Falla directed a large festival of cante jondo in 1922, and his own works are filled with authentic dances—The Three-Cornered Hat in particular. The famous Miller's Dance is a superb example of the masculine farruca: the Miller's Wife dances a fandango, and the scintillating Final Dance is a splendid jota. El Amor Brujo, of course, is best known for the Ritual Fire Dance, but it also includes parts for a female vocal soloist, approximating cante jondo.

With Falla came Joaquín Turina, composer of the Danzas Fantásticas, La Procesión del Rocío, and La Oración del Torero ("The Bullfighter's Prayer," a subtly striking stylized pasadoble for strings), and Jesús Guridi with his imaginative settings of Basque melodies. Today, Ernesto and Rodolfo Halffter and Federico Mompou are still active, and Joaquín Rodrigo and Xavier Montsalvatge are adding new glories to the musical heritage of Spain.

Zarzuelas

There is another unique variety of Spanish music that must be accounted for—the zarzuela. This is a light opera or operetta form, generally brief enough for three or four to be given on the same program. They are usually humorous and sentimental, frequently based on popular plays or novels, with toreros (not unexpectedly) figuring in many. The musical level does not rise to that of Gilbert and Sullivan, Johann Strauss, or Franz Lehár, but it is invariably bright and colorful. The preludes and interludes from the classic zarzuelas turn up regularly in Spanish concerts of light music, and Rafael Frühbeck de Burgos, the rising Spanish conductor of the moment, conducts sixteen prime examples on two recent London records.

Frühbeck and his illustrious predecessor, the late Ataulfo Argenta, may be heard in several splendid recordings of music by Spanish composers, and Argenta's London disc of the Rimsky-Korsakov, Moszkowski, and Chabrier pieces is not to be missed.

The new soprano sensation, Montserrat Caballé, follows her recent songs by Rodrigo and Montsalvatge (Odeon import) with a selection of zarzuelas (RCA Victor). She joins Victoria de los Angeles and Teresa Berganza to complete the ABC of great singers who have recorded traditional Spanish music with beauty and affection.

The pianists Alicia De Larrocha and Gonzalo Soriano explore the works of Falla, Granados, Albéniz, Montsalvatge, Rodrigo, and Oscar Esplá with similar authority. Folk and flamenco artists such as Carmen Amaya, Sabicas, Mario Escudero, Carlos Montoya, and Juan Serrano are also well represented on records. And don't forget Segovia, for whom some of the outstanding recent works were composed.

The following record list is far from complete. But it gives a broad and satisfying sampling of music primarily of Spanish origin.

There are dozens of other records of Spanish folk music, and at least two dozen zarzuelas (on the Montilla label). Stereo numbers are given, where available, in parentheses after the monophonic number.

A LITTLE TASTE OF SOUTH AMERICAN COOKING

Sopa de Frijoles Negros
(Black Bean Soup)

1 cup black beans
4 cups beef broth
Ham bone
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 onion, chopped fine
½ hot sausage, chopped fine
1 small bay leaf
Salt

Soak the beans overnight. The following day drain, place in a large, heavy kettle with the beef broth and ham bone. Heat the olive oil in a skillet, add the onion, sausage, and bay leaf, and sauté until nicely brown all over. Add to the soup kettle, cover, bring up to a boil, then simmer for about 45 minutes, stirring occasionally to keep beans from sticking to the bottom. Taste for seasoning. Add salt, if necessary, and continue to cook until beans are completely soft. If the broth seems to be boiling away too much, add more hot broth. Remove the ham bone and bay leaf. Then purée the soup in an electric blender, or push through a sieve. Bring up to a boil again and serve immediately with croutons (see HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, July issue).

Lomo con Higado de Ganso
(Beef Tenderloin with Pâté de Foie Gras)

2 or 2½-pound tenderloin of beef
Garlic
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
¼ pound (1 stick) butter, softened
1 can (5¼ ounce size) pâté de foie gras at room temperature
Handful fresh, fine bread crumbs

Have the butcher tie a nice, thick piece of beef fat on the bottom of the tenderloin.

Rub the meat with a cut clove of garlic; sprinkle generously with salt and freshly ground pepper, rubbing them in well. Now cut the meat (between the strings) in ¾-inch slices right down to the fat. Take half the butter and rub all over the meat and into the cuts. Place in a preheated 450° F. oven for 5 minutes to melt the butter.

Take out of the oven, cool slightly, and spread each side of the cuts in the meat heavily with the foie gras. (If there is any left over, eat it up on toast.)

Melt the remaining butter and stir in the bread crumbs. Sprinkle the crumbs over the crown of the tenderloin. Return to the oven (same high heat), and roast for 20 minutes or until meat reaches 140° F. on a thermometer. Tenderloin should be served rare.

Serve with boiled potatoes dressed with parsley butter. Serves 6.

Pollo al Whiskey
(Chicken with Bourbon)

3 2½-pound frying chickens
Butter
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
Sauce:
¼ pound small white mushrooms
Juice 1 fresh lemon
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups chicken broth
1 tablespoon (or to taste) Dijon mustard
½ cup heavy cream
3 egg yolks
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
Bourbon or brandy

Have the chickens quartered and the backs removed. Brush all over well with melted butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and place in a roasting pan, in a preheated 500° F. oven, for 20 to 25 minutes or until golden and flesh is tender when pierced with a fork. Baste occasionally with more melted butter.

Wipe the mushroom caps with a fresh, damp cloth; break off the stems; slice the caps very thin. Place in a flat dish and sprinkle with the lemon juice. Set aside.

Melt the butter, stir in the flour until smooth. When foaming, add the broth. Whip with a wire whisk, over a moderate heat, until smooth. Cook, whipping constantly, until sauce has a light consistency. Whip in the mustard until well combined. Stir in the cream, taking care not to allow the sauce to boil. Beat the egg yolks lightly, add a little of the hot sauce, then combine the two, beating constantly. Bring almost to a boil. Add the mushrooms and all the lemon juice. Bring almost to a boil again. Take off the heat, add salt and freshly ground white pepper to taste.

Take the chicken out of the oven, pour half a cup of warmed Bourbon over the pieces, and ignite. When flames die out, arrange chicken on a warm serving platter. Stir the pan juices into the sauce, scraping down any particles that cling to the pan. Pour the sauce over the chicken, garnish with a bouquet of parsley. Serves 6.

Pollo en Salsa de Guesco
(Chicken with Cream Cheese)

3 whole chicken breasts
1 fresh coconut
Flour
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
¼ pound (1 stick) clarified* butter
2 medium onions, chopped very fine
1 small clove garlic, chopped very fine
1 cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon arrowroot
2 cartons (8-ounce size) whipped cream cheese, at room temperature
Parsley

Have the butcher split, bone, and skin the breasts.

Puncture one or two of the eyes of the coconut and drain the milk into a cup. Place the coconut in a 300° F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes, so it will crack open. Take out of the oven and drop, from a good height, onto the floor to break it completely open. Remove the shell and pare off the skin. Run the pieces under cold water to clean them thoroughly. Break half the coconut meat into small pieces and grate or, preferably, grind in the electric blender with some of the coconut milk. Combine with all the milk and set aside. (Use remaining coconut some other way.)

Dust each of the six chicken breast pieces with flour, then sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour half the clarified butter into a large, heavy saucepan, place over a moderate heat. When butter is hot and just beginning to color, add the breasts, a few at a time (do not crowd the pan). Sauté for 3 minutes, then turn and sauté 2 minutes on the other side. Perfectly cooked, the chicken should feel springy when touched with a finger. Set aside and allow to cool.

Add the remainder of the butter to the saucepan. When hot, add the onions and garlic. Cook, stirring constantly, over a moderate heat until limp and slightly golden; add the coconut, its milk, and cream; bring up to a boil. Reduce heat, and simmer, stirring constantly with a wooden spatula, for 5 minutes. Taste for seasoning.

Mix the arrowroot with enough water to make a smooth paste. Stir into the coconut sauce thoroughly and cook, stirring, about 2 more minutes. Take off the heat.

Slice the chicken breasts into long slivers (julienne) about ¼ inch wide.

With a rubber spatula, spread half the cream cheese over the bottom of a large (approximately 8 by 12 inches) shallow baking dish. Arrange the sliced chicken on top. Pour the coconut sauce over all. Then, with a spoon, make little mounds over the top with the remaining cheese.

To serve, place in a preheated 300° F. oven for half an hour or until piping-hot through. Sprinkle with minced parsley before serving. Serves 6.

This dish can be made up early in the day, or the day before, and refrigerated. An exciting idea to show off at your next buffet.

To clarify butter*: Melt the butter in a saucepan. Then strain through two layers of cheesecloth wrung out in cold water, to catch the white milky residue, which you discard.

Rajas de Pescado con Bananas
(Fish Fillets with Bananas)

Allow ½ pound fillet of sole and one firm banana for each person.

Peel the bananas and cut on the bias in fairly large pieces.

Butter a large, flat baking pan generously. Place the fillets, skin side down, in the pan; top with the banana slices. Sprinkle with salt and fresh lemon juice and dot all over with butter.

Broil 3 inches from tip of flame, in a preheated 450° F. oven, for about 6 to 8 minutes or until the fish flakes easily with a fork or a toothpick pierces the flesh with ease. Do not attempt to turn the fish.

Serve on a heated platter, garnished with parsley and Lemon Butter on the side.

Lemon Butter: Allow about 3 tablespoons of melted butter per person and add fresh lemon juice to taste. Serve hot.

Caserola de Maiz y Calabaza
(Fresh Corn and Zucchini Casserole)

4 ears fresh corn
3 medium-size ripe tomatoes
6 or 7 small zucchini
½ large sweet green pepper
2 medium onions
¼ cup (½ stick) butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon chili powder
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon sugar
6 or 8 grinds of the peppermill (white pepper)

Husk the corn, remove the silks, then cut the corn off the cob with a heavy, sharp knife. Using a tablespoon, scrape the cob well. Cut the stem end out of the tomatoes, then cut them in large dice. Cut the ends off the zucchini and slice about ¼ inch thick. Remove ribs and seeds from green pepper, and cut into small dice. Slice the onions very thin, then pull into rings. Combine all in a large bowl and mix thoroughly. Pour into a 1½ quart baking casserole.

Melt the butter, stir in the flour until smooth, then stir in all remaining ingredients. Pour over the vegetables. Place in a preheated 325° F. oven and bake for 1 hour and 20 minutes. Serves 6 generously.

Purée de Frijoles Verdes
(Puréed Green Beans)

3 pounds fresh string beans
1 large white potato
A little onion juice
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
Heavy cream

Plunge the washed beans into a very large kettle of boiling, salted water. Boil rapidly, uncovered, until beans are barely tender when pierced with the point of a sharp knife. They should be somewhat crisp to the taste. Drain and refresh immediately in cold water. This stops the cooking and helps to keep the fresh, green color.

Boil the potato separately until tender. Dry quickly over a high heat, peel, and mash. Purée the beans through a food mill or push through a sieve. Mix the potato and puréed beans together, stir in a little bit of fresh onion juice, salt and pepper to taste. Then add enough heavy cream.

whipped or not, as you like, to bring the purée to a smooth consistency. Heat up over boiling water in a double boiler. Serves 4 to 6.

Platanos Asados
(Plantains Baked in the Shell)

6 small ripe plantains
Salt
¼ cup (½ stick) butter

Cut off both ends of each plantain. Slit the peel, lengthwise, with a sharp knife. Place in a baking pan and bake in a preheated 350° F. oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until plantains are very tender when pierced with the point of a small, sharp knife. Separate the peel, sprinkle with salt and the melted butter.

Serve very hot, one to a person, with pork, lamb, or chicken.

Torta de Almendras
(Almond Cake)

3 cups (3 cans 4½-ounce size) whole, blanched almonds*
10 eggs, separated
1¾ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
Dash salt
2 tablespoons brandy
2 tablespoons bread crumbs

Filling:
1½ cups day-old heavy cream
3 tablespoons sifted confectioners' sugar
1 tablespoon (or to taste) rum

Grate the almonds in an electric blender until very fine. Beat the egg yolks in a very large bowl until thick and creamy, then beat in the confectioners' sugar, 3 or 4 tablespoons at a time, beating constantly. When all the sugar is incorporated, beat in the nuts, salt, brandy, and bread crumbs with a sturdy wire whisk or wooden spatula.

Whip the egg whites until they stand in shiny peaks when you hold the beater straight up. Vigorously whip a third of the beaten whites into the batter. Then, with a spatula, fold in the remainder, thoroughly but carefully. Pour into a 10-inch tube pan.

Place cake in a preheated 350° F. oven and bake for 45 minutes, or until cake springs back when touched lightly with your finger. Turn off the heat, open the oven door, and leave the cake for 5 minutes. Remove from the oven, invert on a cake rack, and allow to hang for 2 hours, or until cake is cold, before turning out.

To make the filling: Combine the cream, sugar, and rum, and whip until cream is thick.

Split the cold cake across, in the center. Spread half the filling on top of the bottom layer, and cover with second layer. Finish the top with the remaining cream. Sprinkle with chopped, toasted almonds, if you wish.

*Walnuts or Brazil nuts may be substituted in the same amount.

Papel d'Angel
(Angel Paper)

Butter
6 egg yolks
1½ cups sugar
1 cup water
3 or 4 whole cloves

Butter 6 custard cups well. Beat the egg yolks vigorously until very thick and creamy. Divide the beaten yolks evenly between the little cups. Place in the center of a preheated 375° F. oven and bake for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, combine the sugar, water, and cloves in a heavy saucepan at least 8 inches in diameter. Stir until the sugar has dissolved and mixture comes to a boil. Allow it to simmer for a few minutes.

Turn the cooked yolks into the bubbling syrup, bring the heat up to moderate, and cook 2 minutes, basting with the syrup.

THE PARADORES OF SPAIN

How to be an unofficial guest of the Spanish government

On the crest of a hill, beside an ancient cathedral on the road from Madrid to Cádiz, is the new parador at Andújar in the province of Jaén.

By GEORGIA ELIZALDE

On a visit to Spain you can relive its historic past in an unusual series of government-owned and operated inns called paradores. Within the framework of castles, monasteries, and palaces are full-service hotels, run in such a graceful manner that you feel more like a personal than a paying guest.

Designed to treat you to an unofficial red-carpet reception on the part of the Spanish government, they dot the roads and countryside of Spain from one coast to another, and are truly stopover delights for travelers who are touring the country by car or bus.

Instead of being confined to Barcelona, Madrid, and Seville, it is now possible for the traveler to see a Spain that is neither simply flamenco dancing nor the sombreness of Holy Week. A trip through the provinces will be a surprise for those who believe that Spain is just a rocky countryside—actually it is a country of startling contrasts, with pine forests, majestic mountains, vast plains, beautiful coasts, and hundreds of captivating towns.

The parador is a very old institution. They were originally situated to accommodate noble families on pilgrimage to a sanctuary or going to their country seats. Until 1929, they had no official character, but in that year the Spanish government inaugurated the National Parador of Gredos, situated in the mountains near Madrid, still considered by many to be one of the most charming. Since then they have yearly added to their national chain, until now there are 33, 31 of which are open all year round. And they are rushing the conversion of 19 other historical sites to be ready in 1967 for the fast-growing parador aficionados.

The paradores are not solely hotels, although they can compare with any in the world. Most of them are, in themselves, sites of interest. Placed in historical spots, they make accessible fascinating places that would before have been impractical to visit. While the towns in which they are situated retain all their charm and individuality, the parador is an island of quiet Old World luxury in the bustle of modern Spain.

It may be a medieval castle, a 14th-century monastery, or an Arab palace, but those who appreciate beauty and authenticity will marvel at the way the paradores have blended the past with the conveniences that people demand today—and at reasonable cost. The prices range from $8.50 for two people in a double room with a private bath, down to $3. There is air conditioning when it is needed, heating, comfortable beds, adequate lighting for those who like to read in bed (no more 20-watt bulbs hanging from the ceiling), really hot water, towels in quantities, and service bells that are answered promptly. In the morning, breakfast is served in the rooms until eleven o'clock.

Despite the historic origin of many of the paradores, the rooms are comfortable and not forbidding. Many are breath-taking, with their spacious, high-ceilinged rooms opening to beautiful views. There are always various large salons and reading rooms (well-stocked with magazines and books about Spain or the region in which you are staying), card rooms, bars, and beautiful dining rooms, opening to terraces overlooking well-tended gardens.

Food varies from one parador to another. Often you are offered things that you cannot get in the large cities. The breakfast is Continental style. Menus for lunch and dinner are printed in both French and English and offer a wide selection. In most paradores, you will be able to eat classic provincial dishes, such as fresh mountain trout in Jarandilla or Cazaleta Extremeña in Merida. The wine lists are long and reasonable, but I always prefer to try the vino de la region, the local wine. Although the rooms at some paradores are more expensive than at others, the price of the food doesn't vary greatly and dinner ranges from $3 at the most expensive to $2 at the most reasonable ones. This is for a four-course meal and includes tax and service charges. Although you don't have to eat all your meals at the parador, you will discover that they are usually far better than any in the vicinity.

In selecting a parador, there are always special interests to consider. For sportsmen there is the Riaño in the famous Picos de Europa, or the Cazorla in Jaen, where you can hunt mountain bear, chamois, and the roe deer, and at the same time enjoy the trout fishing. In Pontevedra there are salmon and trout, while Valencia is well known for duck shooting. In Cordova, after sightseeing, the director of the para- dor can arrange an invitation to a montería, a private hunt for bear, deer, and chamois in the Sierra Moreno (Oct. to Feb.). Near Madrid, in the mountans of Gredás, you can bag the Pyrenees mountain goat that can be found nowhere else.

If you feel the lure of the imperial past, you will be interested in little-known Mérida, which was one of the capitals of the Roman Empire, where excavations are a joy to visit. If you plan your trip ahead, you can see one of the highlights of the Spanish Summer Festivals, the presentation of Greek tragedies in the teatro romano. Here the parador is a 15th-century convent, which for charm and beauty is surely one of the most unforgettable.

If the Moorish period is your dish, you might choose that loveliest and most romantic of Arab palaces, the Alhambra, with all of Granada and the caves of Sacramonte at your feet. Fortunately, for romantics who still yearn for "castles in Spain"—but don't want to get too far from Madrid—there are the castles of Oropesa, Jarandilla, Alarcon, or Madrigal de las Altas Torres. Oropesa and Alarcon are on main roads, the former to Portugal and the latter to Valencia, while Jarandilla and Madrigal are both just a short drive off the main highways to Portugal and La Coruña.

Out of the Renaissance period are Ubeda, Ciudad Rodrigo and Santillana del Mar, which should captivate the historians. These paradores are situated in perfect gems of medieval towns that are preserved as national monuments and are administered by the Board of Fine Arts. In Ubeda and Santillana, the paradores are both Renaissance palaces, and in Ciudad Rodrigo, you stay in a massive 14th-century fortress from whose balconies you can see Portugal, less than 20 miles away.

Spain is almost an island, and along its lengthy coastline are numerous seaside paradores. Javea is one of the newest and loveliest, while Norja, outside Málaga, offers the added attraction of the well-known summer ballets, held in its caves. Both these have warm weather all year around. In the Canary Islands, land of tropical weather and snow-capped mountains, there are two paradores, one at Las Palmas and two on Tenerife.

For a list of paradores and albergues (modern inns), write to the Spanish National Tourist Office, 589 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. For a more comprehensive list, with descriptions of facilities and prices, send a 25-cent International Postage Coupon (from any post office) to: Libreria Editora Nacional, Av. de José Antonio 51, Madrid 13, Spain, asking for "Guia de Hoteles, Albergues y Paradores."

Reservations may be made directly or through travel agents. ■

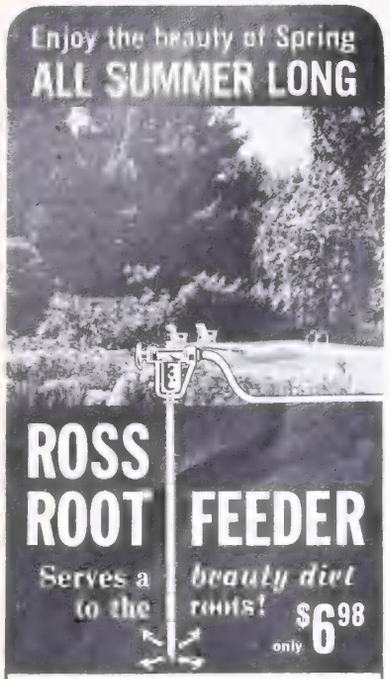
in Miami and sometimes Panama City.



In-flight eating, that notorious whiler-away of airborne hours, is planned by Braniff's Board of International Chefs. (A member of the board, Swiss-born Roger Piaget, is the mastermind and owner of Lima's Le Pavillon, a restaurant that must rank among the Continent's greatest. A shrimp dish here, Camerones Chef, is almost worth the trip.)

Cost of a round trip from New York to Bogotá is $458 first class and $352 economy. Cost of round trip from New York to Lima is $676 first class and $521 economy. There is also a 30-day excursion rate to Bogotá of $400 for first class and $280 for tourist.

Braniff flies also to Guayaquil in Ecuador, La Paz in Bolivia, Asunción in Paraguay, Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro in Brazil, and Buenos Aires in Argentina. For one astonishing extra dollar in fare you can extend a trip to Lima, on the west coast, to take in Sao Paulo and Rio, on the east coast.

We limited our itinerary to big-city Colombia, Peru and Ecuador, and our surprise at finding them all so different betrays our ignorance. If any sure-fire generalizations can be made, here they are: in language and customs, all are descended from Spain, the conqueror and ruler of this area from the early 16th through the early 19th Century, when Simón Bolívar and his ilk led the rebellion against the mother country; all are republics, currently attempting economic and social reorganization; all have fast-growing populations with a high percentage of Indians in high-plane agricultural areas, where the old crafts are perpetuated. In many fields, from medical assistance to the merchandising of products, Peace Corps volunteers are active here—and though they rarely sample the high life of these parts, they are usually articulate enthusiasts of the people, climate, and cultures they have learned to know.

Another similarity: All three countries are curiously triple-leveled, their climate and landscape varying from torrid seashore or jungle to vast, temperate plains from eight to twelve thousand feet high, to towering mountains. Except for sea-level Lima, surrounded by rainless desert, travelers will usually find themselves in high altitudes in cool, springlike, even chilly temperatures, even with the equator a few miles away. ■

For the high places—Bogotá, Cuzco, Machu Picchu, Quito—take a springtime wardrobe—with jackets and sweaters that can be peeled off as the day warms up—and rainy-day togs. For warm, rainless Lima include some really cool summer things. Wise ones go equipped with low-heeled "sensible" walking shoes for rough walking, climbing, and cobblestones. Be prepared for treacherous potholes in city streets.

Bogotá

Landing in Bogotá, 8,000 feet high, is like coming down on a 75-mile-square, touch-the-sky mountaintop. The growing city sprawls up even higher hills—ascend the peak Monserrate in a cable car to look down at it all—and out to the rich agricultural savanna or plains. The city has a strong echo of the U.S.A.—traffic problems, clover-leaf circles, new sky-scraping office buildings, and, fairly novel to Colombians, high-rise apartments, and the Tequendama Hotel, an Intercontinental hotel which indeed lives up to its name.

Center of the old town—the town you really expected—is the Plaza de Bolivar, and in its surrounding narrow streets lined with balconied Colonial houses you see why Colombia was once known as Old Granada. Sights we enjoyed here: the Museum of Colonial Arts, a 1610 city mansion conserving furnishings and art of early days around a flowering patio in the shadow of the Church of San Francisco; The Mint, an unbelievably charming early house, with marvelously turned woodwork, a curious trompe-l'oeil ceiling, an inner garden, and a chapel to San Elois, the patron saint of money. Then, up the street, an incredible stroll from old to new, the Biblioteca Luis Angel Arango, Bogotá's avant-garde and very beautiful library, equipped with a museum of modern art, a record library and listening room, and its adjacent mahogany concert hall, which is probably the most elegant little theater for organ and chamber music in the hemisphere.

The Quinta de Bolivar, shrine for history buffs of all republican countries, is the preserved Colonial home of the great Liberator, furnished with his possessions and certainly an indication that upper-cut Colombians of the early 19th Century lived in sophisticated luxury.

Bogotá has its share of splendid Colonial churches where wood carvings, gilding, and art represent old Spanish design interpreted with the characteristic artistry of local Indians. There is also, a 30-mile drive away and a good chance to see the countryside en route, the underground cathedral of Zipaquira carved out of a mountain of salt large enough to accommodate 10,000.

But of all the sight-seeing eye-openers, the greatest dazzler is the Gold Collection in the Bank of the Republic. The vault contains 8,000 pieces of exquisitely worked pre-Columbian gold artifacts made by the ancient Indians, dating from 300 B.C. (Some of these overwhelming pieces will be displayed in New York during this summer at the Colombia National Tourist Board.)

This is a reminder that Colombia is a good place to buy gold. It is also the greatest source of emeralds in the world, a place where serious gem-shoppers can pick up bargains. Shops of good repute: Bauer, Dita's, Krauss & Co., Chivor. Duty on cut but unset stones is three percent; set in gold, silver, or platinum, 24 percent; on raw, uncut stones, no duty. But it's wise to make a study of emeralds by shopping around at home before your trip.

Colombia is a land of great weaving, and the national shawl-like wool ruana is a favorite souvenir. The native variety is usually gray but colors have now been styled to please "foreign" fashionables. Gualdrapas bright saddle covers about 39 inches square, are good, tough weaves, and can be joined to make stunning carpets. Serious, handsome, modern weavings of rugs, room dividers, and wall tapestries are done by artist craftsmen in their own workshops. Notable: Raquel Vivas of Telas Huatay; Olga Amaral whose work has been exhibited in museums; Graciela Bermudez of XUE.

The shop of Martha Bauer has a range of merchandise from lacily made Indian basketwork and jungle-made stools carved out of one piece of wood to emeralds and good replicas of the jewelry in the Gold Museum. For Colonial furniture and artifacts and religious art, try the museumlike shop, Antiquidades, on the Plaza de Bolivar.

The National Museum, once a prison, is a good morning's indoctrination in the complexity of the Indian beginnings of Colombia; the corrida or bullfight is a national sport; there is surely the distant sound of castanets in the atmosphere, and yet for it all one feels that the North American way is very strong here—in the attitudes of the people, in their tempo, and surely in the manner of living among the young marrieds.

Food—coffee, naturally, is great, coming as it does from the cool mountains. The restaurants in the Hotel Tequendama offer typical Colombian as well as international dishes, including ajiaco con pollo, a chicken and potato stew afloat with slices of corn, and "roasted milk," a very sweet sweet usually served with figs. Near the Continental Hotel, which has an excellent restaurant, there's the quaint little "Old House" which specializes in country foods accompanied by blackberry juice.

The monetary unit in Colombia is the peso, worth about 7¾ cents U.S. Let your travel agent help you plan. Lima, Cuzco, Machu Picchu

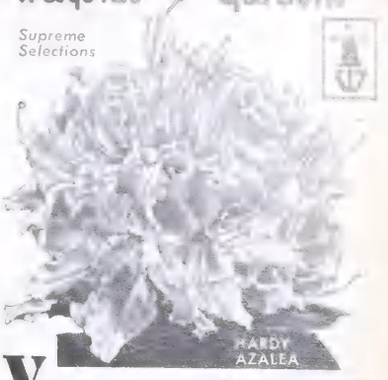
Once you've seen it, you can well believe that Lima was the most magnificently Baroque city in the New World in the 16th and 17th Centuries, but you would hardly guess this upon arrival at its slick, new, automated glass airport terminal, or in the Swedish Modern purlieus of an air-conditioned room at the Crillon Hotel. (The Bolivar, up the street, is more on the Edwardian Grand Hotel genre.) This curious constantly windswept seaside city is distinguished by residential suburbs like San Isidro and Miraflores, which burgeon with jasmine-hung gardens, greenswarded golf courses, past-century mansions, and modern villas—yet almost feet away from lush parks the land turns suddenly into desert, and stark dry hills rise like umber walls.



Sight-seeing in the city begins at the Plaza de Armas, the original center in the days of Pizarro, the controversial gold seeker who overcame the too-gentle, highly civilized Incas and claimed this land for Spain. (The play, The Royal Hunt of the Sun, is good preparation in this touching history.) Here are the cathedral and the graceful old stone buildings hung with dark wood miradores over the street—lattice, grilled balconies where ladies, Moorish fashion, observed the passing scene without being observed. Here also is the President's Palace where a mighty colorful, red-coated, goose-stepping changing of the guard occurs at 8:30 each morning.

It's a good stroll across a bridge over the Rimac River to the Paséo de Aguas, a charming alameda or formal garden promenade built by a Colonial viceroy for his lady love, La Perrichola, who figures in Thornton Wilder's story of Lima, The Bridge of San Luis Rey. Across the river is also a teeming, lively native barrio market, buses, children, dogs, all going strong, an example of the slums Peru is hoping to eliminate. Also here is the great, marvelously vigorous Plaza de Acho, or bull ring, pale pink, thick-walled, deep-shadowed, and powerfully Spanish. An excellent restaurant here, La Mesón, serves typically Peruvian foods—anticuchos, skewered and grilled meats, hearts and livers; all kinds of seafood, especially shrimps and scallops; causa limeño, a potato and cheese dish; ceviche, which is white fish "cooked" in lime juice and served as an appetizer.

In fact, you can do considerable sight-seeing in Lima while you eat. Las Trece Monedas, a very grand restaurant indeed, is in a restored and magnificently furnished Colonial mansion of impressive proportions. Its owner, Mr. Schuler, also gives you a look at the rural side of Colonial Peru in his out-of-town restored hacienda-restaurant, La Granja Azul, which specializes in whole grilled chickens and a museumlike assemblage of antique carved wood doors, native prints, and artifacts.

In San Isidro, in, of all things, a newly developing shopping center, the restaurant, La Calesa, depends for its decoration on a charming collection of native Indian hats and cooking utensils. The décor is the inspiration of Doña Lucia Alvarez Calderon, one of Lima's most gifted decorators. Its specialties are Peruvian, including Pisco Sours (lime and native grape liquor) and choda, giant-kernel corn in a sauce of cheese, oil, and parsley.

Unquestionably a traveler's meeting with the Incas is the most memorable part of a Peruvian adventure. The great confrontation occurs in the high, thin air of Cuzco, once the capital of the Inca empire, 11,500 feet in the Andes. Average, casually informed North Americans will be surprized that the Incas were the last of a long line of great Indian civilizations. Before setting out from Lima, prepare yourself by visiting three great museums in particular. At the Rafael Larco Herrera Museum, the collection covers artifacts from 2000 B.C. to the Incas of 1500 A.D. The Museum of Anthropology and Archeology samples a vast array of cultures, emphasizing pottery and textiles which will actually familiarize you with the modern crafts techniques you'll encounter in the markets of Indian villages. The Museum of Art takes you back 5,000 years into Peruvian art: Indian, Colonial and a fusion of both called mestizo.

Both Lansa and Faucett Airlines carry you to Cuzco in two hours or less. Faucett feeding oxygen much of the way in non-pressurized planes. On arrival, the first thing you do—at the Hotel Cuzco or the newer Savoy—is to rest a few hours as you get used to the altitude. Slow and easy does it in the cobbled, hilly Inca town where houses built of 20-ton stone blocks and once garnished in pure gold were made into foundations for the gorgeous, bejewelled churches of Colonial Spain. These strangely are open only from 8:00 to 11:00 A.M. or by very special permission.

Questions about Peruvian travel may be directed to the Peruvian Consulate General, 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. ■

(To be concluded next month)

espite Sherry's reputation as a ractically indestructible, unoilable all-purpose wine, there re a few rules governing its servce that a thoughtful host should nder no circumstances ignore:

First. A well-stocked home bar ould include at least two sorts f Sherry, just as it should inlude both sweet and dry vermouth and for no less obvious easons.

Second. Despite whatever you ay be told to the contrary, herry, once opened, does not eep indefinitely. It spoils less apidly than table wine, to be ire, when exposed to the air, nd much less obviously than ilk or beer, but even the best ry Sherry will "wither" percepbly within 48 hours and lose its ouquet and charm. The sweeter nd heavier wines have a life erhaps twice as long, but they o deteriorate, and there is nothng much worse and less appetizng than a stale one. A bottle of herry, furthermore, once unorked, should be kept in a refigerator, not on a sideboard.

Third. Unless served as a desert wine, which is not often, herry should be drunk very cold. ven the British, who prefer heir Scotch-and-water without ce and their beer at room temerature, now generally go along ith us here: before dinner, dry herry, iced like dry Champagne, nd even sweeter sorts wellhilled.

Fourth. Most of the people ho know and love fine Sherry isapprove categorically of the ecent vogue for "Sherry-on-theocks." Water, whether or not in he form of ice, may render a arsh, cheap vin ordinaire a little nore tolerable, but it can only njure any wine that can be decribed as good. Nature itself determines the alcoholic content of nost wines, and fortified wines uch as Sherry are shipped at the precise strength that suits them. They lose this special equilibrium when they are diluted. Serve, herefore, an iced Sherry, not a Sherry-with-ice, if you have knowing guests.

Fifth. Sherry, being a wine, should be served in a wine glass, nd being much lower in alcohol han an average cocktail, should e poured quite generously. The absurd little inverted cones known as "Sherry glasses" were designed for the dinner tables of our great-grandfathers, when one sat down to a six- or seven-course meal with five or six wines; they were something to toy with when the inevitable turtle soup arrived. They have no place at a cocktail party, when Sherry is served as a drink. Give your guests at least three ounces in a tulip-shaped, clear crystal glass. Make sure they get a very dry wine or a somewhat sweeter one, as they prefer, and freshly opened, very cold. Your reputation as a Sherry connoisseur will be made at once.

Sixth, and last. Unlike almost all French apéritifs and far more than most cocktails, Sherry almost demands that something edible be served with it. Little appetizing trifles, called tapas, arrive automatically with it when you order Sherry on a café terrace in Spain. The simpler these are, in general, the better: olives, almonds, shrimps, smoked salmon —all designed to stimulate, not cloy, one's appetite for the meal to follow.

All Sherries, like all Champagnes, are dry wines to begin with, pale-straw in color. With practically no exceptions, they are blended, and their degree of sweetness is what their shipper wants it to be and what he feels will best please the consumer. In the case of Sherry, this is also true of the color, which comes from an admixture of old sweet wine, made from sun-dried grapes or reduced by concentration to a caramelized quintessence of wine. Although many are sold simply under brand names, the main classifications of Sherry, as we know it, are these:

Manzanilla. Palest and dryest of all. Strictly speaking, not a Sherry, but a closely related wine made in vineyards near Jerez. Too bone-dry for most palates.

Fino. The Sherry most Spaniards drink—pale, dry, appetizing.

Amontillado. A shade softer and fuller-bodied.

Oloroso. Heavier, fuller—anywhere from dry to sweet.

Cream. A sweet Oloroso, generally an old and expensive one. ■

After we make the finest bone china possible, then we really get to work.

It's hard enough being perfectionists about our fine English bone china. But on top of that we've got 150 patterns to be finicky about.

So: to get the look of a hand-painted pattern, we paint it by hand.

Whenever we put gold on Wedgwood, it's pure gold. Burnished by hand. (It's even purer gold than your wedding ring.)

All gold rims are brushed on by hand.

For that matter, each and every pattern is applied by hand. Not just the intricate ones like these Florentines. We get just as involved with simple things.

The only man at Wedgwood who has an easy time of it is Mr. Meredith. His job is smashing. He throws Wedgwood rejects into a barrel to break them. So they can't ever end up in your home.

Now, that's easy. Especially since the rest of us work so hard, we don't have many rejects.

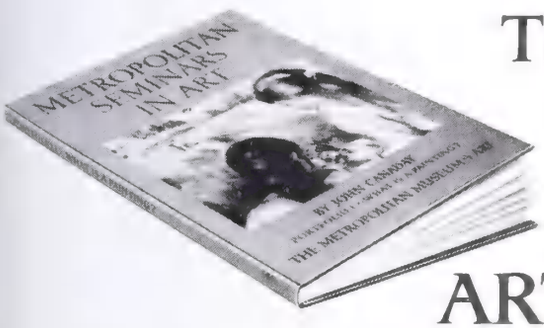
Are you one of many who admire the Mona Lisa for the wrong reasons?



MONA LISA by Leonardo da Vinci

PERHAPS, like so many people, you attribute the Mona Lisa's greatness to her enigmatic expression—to the fact that she "begins to smile," if looked at long enough. Or perhaps you are intrigued because her eyes seem to "follow you around the room" through some technique known only to Leonardo.

Both of these common reactions are discussed in the very first portfolio of the Metropolitan Museum's Seminars in Art as prime examples of the superficial fashion in which most people look at paintings. As the portfolio points out, anyone who admires a painting solely because of its technical competence or the appeal of its subject matter is probably missing what the artist is really trying to convey. A surprising number of otherwise cultivated persons have this blind spot when they stand before a work of art. Either they admire it for the wrong reasons or, if the work is the slightest bit "abstract," they are completely baffled.

Those who suffer from this form of bafflement probably have never had the opportunity to take a good art-appreciation course at a university or attend a clarifying series of lectures at a museum. It was to remedy this situation that the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York devised an unusual program of assisted self-education in the understanding and appreciation of art. The invitation below is made to acquaint you with the thoroughness of the program and its unique method of learning by comparison among great paintings.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art

FOR TWO WEEKS' EXAMINATION

THE FIRST PORTFOLIO OF

ART SEMINARS IN THE HOME

PUBLISHED AND ADMINISTERED BY BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB, INC.

THE IDEA: A well-rounded and comprehensive course of lectures in the appreciation of art in which the whole family can participate. You learn by comparison among paintings, utilizing no fewer than 144 large full-color prints of great works. . . . It is like being conducted over a period of time through all the world's museums by experienced lecturers who make clear the fundamental things to look for in whatever paintings you may ever see.

EACH LESSON comes in the form of a portfolio, the core of which is the lecture. But in each portfolio is a pocket containing twelve large full-color reproductions. These pictures are provided separately so that they can be compared side by side with one another to clarify whatever points the lecture aims to illuminate. They have a great advantage, however, over reproductions thrown upon a screen in a lecture hall. They can be more faithful to the originals, can be studied for as long as one wants and can be referred to again and again. Another advantage is that members of a family can "take the course" either separately or simultaneously—husband and wife, parent and teen-age child. Reading each portfolio aloud, and examining the reproductions together, is like visiting a museum together, pointing out to one another something to be appreciated and enjoyed.

HOW THE COURSE OPERATES: One can enroll in this program of twelve portfolios just as one would enroll in a semester course in art at a university—with one important difference. You may, if you wish, drop out of the program at any point without proceeding with the complete course. The portfolios are sent consecutively—one every thirty days—but you may, of course, proceed at whatever rate you choose. The price of each portfolio is $3.75 (plus a small charge for mailing expense). This cost includes the twelve separate full-color reproductions, mat size 9½" by 12½", which come with each portfolio. In most retail stores each set of twelve would sell by itself, in comparable reproductions, for from $6 to $7.50.

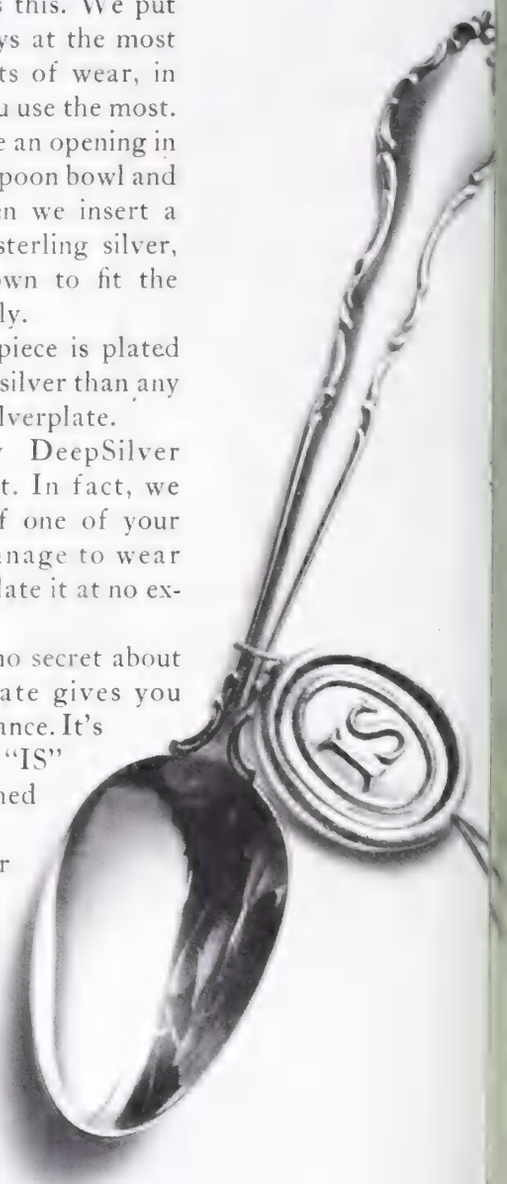
There's a secret ingredient in DeepSilver. Silver.

You'd never know it if we didn't tell you. But if you lived to be about 125 or so, you might finally begin to suspect the unique quality of DeepSilver.

What it is, is this. We put solid silver inlays at the most vulnerable points of wear, in all the pieces you use the most.

First we make an opening in the back of the spoon bowl and fork tines. Then we insert a block of solid sterling silver, and melt it down to fit the opening perfectly.



Finally, the piece is plated with more pure silver than any other leading silverplate.

That's why DeepSilver won't wear out. In fact, we guarantee it. If one of your pieces does manage to wear down, we'll replate it at no extra cost.

And there's no secret about which silverplate gives you this extra assurance. It's the one with the "IS" hallmark attached to it.

Just $100 for a 48-piece service for eight.

Shown here is Wakefield. To get a free color brochure of all our patterns, write to The International Silver Company, Meriden, Connecticut.

Make a bottle. Fill it with dry air.

Seal it. And what do you have?

You have an empty bottle you can put in every window of your house.

You have a piece of Thermopane® insulating glass.

It's made by our GlasSeal® process which fuses glass to glass. This gives us, in effect, a skinny, sealed bottle. We do this to keep the dry air inside and the dirt and moisture out.

It's the only kind of bottle Libbey·Owens·Ford makes.

And after we make it, we etch the name Thermopane in the corner where you can see it.

Thermopane with the GlasSeal edge is available for practically all sizes and styles of windows in your home. (Leading wood window manufacturers already offer it as a standard option.)

It's the most convenient kind of window insulation.

Your builder will probably tell you there are substitutes for Thermopane with the GlasSeal edge.

There are.

There always are, aren't there?

Make every room a bedroom. Englander makes it easy.

Who says a bedroom has to look like a bedroom? Not Englander.

Take this studio. First we surrounded an Englander queen size Tension-Ease mattress and box spring with a massive four-poster. It is a bed... but it doesn't make the room look like a bedroom.

Then we put in the Mediterranean blue Englander Bed 'n Sofa. In seconds, that sofa is ready to sleep two. (Don't let the high-fashion bit fool you... there really is a full length bed inside.)

Read the next four pages for eight new make-every-room-a-bedroom ideas.
And see your Englander dealer for a look at all the decorator Englander Ultra Comfort Bed 'n Sofas... and luxurious Englander Tension-Ease sleep sets.

Gone are the days of shoe-box filing, and cookie-jar accounting. Smart families know that efficient homemaking today needs a business-like approach. Work goes faster and more enjoyably in a well organized family homework center, with storage space and worktop. And, with modern homemaking taking on the aspects of business management, there should certainly be the tools of an efficient business. A new Smith-Corona Electric portable typewriter is an excellent foundation—and then, naturally, a Smith-Corona Figurematic Adding Machine. Dealers are ready now to show you the many 1967 Smith-Corona timesavers that are ready to go to work for you—in your new family-homework center. You are thinking about one, aren't you?

BOOK-DIVIDENDS: A home-library building plan every book-reading family should know about

THE OBVIOUS PURPOSE of this suggested trial is to have you discover, by actual experience, the extraordinary opportunity you will have to acquire a well-rounded library of useful as well as beautiful books at little cost—through the Club's unique Book-Dividend system. If you continue after this trial, with every Club choice you buy you will receive a Book-Dividend Certificate which, together with a nominal sum, can be redeemed for a fine library volume. Most of the volumes call for only one Certificate plus $1 or $1.50—occasionally more for an unusually expensive volume.

✶ HOW CAN THIS BE DONE? A portion of the amount members pay for the books they buy is accumulated and invested in entire editions of valuable books and sets through special contractual arrangements with the publishers in each case. These are the Club's Book-Dividends. Since its inauguration the almost incredible sum of over $362,000,000 worth of books (retail value) has been received by members through this unique plan.

✶ GOOD SENSE • There are three other long-proved benefits of membership. First, members have a wide choice among the best new books—at least 200 a year. Second, the prices to members average 20% below retail prices. Finally, the Club's unique method of operation insures you against missing the new books you fully intend to read, but so often fail to through sheer oversight or overbusyness.

Bloomcraft's Tergal® sheer voile. Why it's worth bringing all the way from France.

You have to admire FRANCE-VOILES® for the way their looms make a faultless sheer voile of 100% Tergal® polyester. For something that looks so delicate and sheer, Tergal is fantastically strong and stable. Enough so that it can hang in either direction (up and down, or sideways).

Picture what all this means if you want to cover a big picture window...or even cover a whole wall with fabric. Instead of having to seam many widths together (as you do with other fabrics) you can have Tergal seamless draperies any width! To finish the picture, consider that Tergal won't shrink, won't stretch, launders beautifully, never sags.

Tergal...it's sheer magic.

Tomlinson is a renaissance

Play the candescent glow of a midnight lamp across the surface of the Grosvenor hock-leg desk. Light and shadow move with the rhythm of the world's most cherished woods. Throw open a sunny Sunday morning window and watch the ruby velvet of a loveseat catch fire. Rich. Regal. A renaissance of color and texture. Or add the étagère to a good room, and see it become a superb room. The Tomlinson renaissance began quietly more than 60 years ago, with great and gorgeous lines, lush finishes, rare woods, supple fabrics, and fresh, brave ways of tailoring a sofa or detailing a cabinet. Today, Tomlinson is creating for dining rooms, living rooms, and bedrooms, the sort of surrounding it's nice to be born into. Good thing that's Herculite® Safety Glass, so strong you don't have to worry about its breaking.

For safety's sake, PPG Herculite K Tempered Safety Glass is made to take the bumps that shatter regular glass.

Look how strong: A "bridge" of 3/16" PPG Herculite K Tempered Safety Glass supports the weight of a wagonload of children (over 200 pounds). They're safe because Herculite is specially treated—heat tempered—to make it many times stronger than regular glass.

Look how safe: If they somehow managed to break the glass, nobody would get hurt. Herculite K would simply crumble into small, rounded pieces that can't cause serious injury.

Look for this PPG Safety Shield on quality patio doors. The difference is a few dollars in the price, and a lot more safety in the home. PPG makes the glass that makes the difference.

AMERICA'S NEW FRONTIERSMEN:

CAREER GYPSIES

By EPSIE KINARD

A resident of Lake Forest, Illinois, looking out of her breakfast-room window while sipping her morning coffee, saw a huge red moving van turning into the next driveway. She wondered who the newcomers were, if there would be children romping on that nicely manicured lawn, how long this family would stay. She knew it wouldn't be long, because that house had been handed back and forth for years by successful executives of a large international research lab in Chicago. In this staid neighborhood of elm-lined streets, these newcomers who dashed across continents and oceans as easily as she could cross her front lawn were a welcome window for peering at the outside world.

Her in-and-out neighbors are a new breed of gypsies, traveling not in Romany tribes but under the aegis of big corporations. Transfers are being made at a feverish rate by companies in the decentralization and expansion of industry.

Because of special employee talents or skills for performing unique services, corporations are moving young executives and their families from job to job and place to place. The all-expenses-paid usually includes air travel and hotel expenses for a two-visit house hunt in the new place for both husband and wife. Some companies add to the $2-3,000 they pay for a cross-country household move a bonus allowance for replacing curtains and rugs that don't fit.

Many corporations take over the vacated house if the employee can't sell or lease.

Why this nomadic life, when many women weep, storm, or go into shock at the mention of the word "move"? What induces them to pull up roots? Where do these families settle? How do they adjust? What do they contribute to a community? What are the good and bad aspects of a migration uprooting one out of every five American families this year in waves so vast almos all of us are affected? If not ac tually ourselves, the members o our families, our close friends o our next-door neighbors are drawn into the migration.

To explore one of the mos fascinating phenomena of ou times, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL took sample of some 50 families of ris ing young executives. Income range from $20,000 up.

Although one family criss crossed the continent 25 times i 20 years, the average number o moves is five to eight. Execu tives are frank to say that transfer means a step up on th corporate ladder, usually with a extra raise. It promises a bette house, a higher standard of liv ing. It may offer a chance to mov to a town with superior school and a richer cultural life for thei families.

These corporate gypsies aren always happy with their move but sometimes luck is with them For instance, George and Ev Spindler and their three childre have just moved to their drea house in New Canaan, Connect cut. "With an 'estate look,' it more than just a house," the say. It is a converted carriag house of 14 rooms, built of whit clapboard and fieldstone, wit white brick chimney and gra slate roof. It is set on 3½ acre of formal rose gardens, gree houses, apple orchard, a mea dering stream, and a swimmin pool gleaming like a cut gem the landscape.

George Spindler (Colgate Un versity, '49) was recently made d rector of marketing of U.S. Ru ber International, which move him from Detroit to New Yo City. New Canaan is only nine minutes' commuting time f George, whose duties keep hi in Europe one-third of the tim and it offers a school system considerable renown.

Evi Spindler, a slim, blond former Powers model, hopes th is their last move. She sa Pianola is a player-piano just for the fun of it. You can have your cake and eat it–to your own piano music. Munch-along, sing-along, sip-along as you play-along. Step right out–on Pianola player pedals–and enjoy piano music, in style.

You can get Aeolian music rolls in everything from fugues to frugs.

Electric play with sensitive volume control is an optional extra—for those who would rather dance or mingle with the guests across the room.

The Transposer Bar lets you dial the right accompaniment key, whether you sing or play another instrument.

In key, too, because Pianola has the right key for every music roll you play. Go ahead, express yourself.

Express yourself with your hands—on the Pianola tempo and tone controls. Or flick a finger and add a honky tonk sound.

Play it with foot pedals. Play it with hand controls. Or plug Pianola in and it plays itself. You can even play it as a regular piano. What more can we say?

When panels are closed, Pianola looks like a piano. It plays like a piano. In fact, it is a piano, but so much more than just a piano. It's a Pianola. Starts at $985.

A letter or postcard will get you all there is to know about Pianola free: full color, full-of-fashion booklet and the words of Morton Gould on "The Player-Piano" and how it helps piano students learn more, faster. Write they've made so many moves she's stopped counting, although she recalls six made in seven years.

She says these new-style gypsies can't afford good furniture: it gets nicked and lost. But she is collecting antiques for her new home, and is herself refinishing old armoires and handsome old captain's chests for a décor that blends the old with the contemporary.

Man-made paradise

Sometimes a transfer evicts a family from its dream house and banishes it from a man-made paradise. Such was Richard Tresise's (Trans World Airlines district sales manager) move from Hawaii to Cleveland some years ago. From an airy sunlit house with a spacious lanai, a breath-catching mountain view, a garden ablaze with hibiscus, oleanders, and orchids, this family with three children was airborne within hours from the swaying palms and giant ferns of Hawaii to the close-cropped lawn and neat hedges of a Cleveland suburb.

Typical of the variety of regional riches some nomadic families enjoy, the Tresises now live in West Concord, Massachusetts, where the understated New England way of life is balanced by a gentle aura of historic and literary charm. Here, the children swim and fish in the pleasant waters of Walden Pond and picnic in a leafy grove near the site of Thoreau's cabin.

In Thoreau Hill, in a four-bedroom house in a unique home colony where Jody Tresise says she likes living, this family has adapted easily. "Because most of the tenants are transients like ourselves, the children, as well as Dick and I, have made friends quickly," she says.

Becoming personally involved in a new town is another corporate wife's way of making friends. Aileen Roth, a breezy, out-spoken blonde and mother of two young daughters, is Colorado-born and a graduate of the state university. Her husband, Henry (University of North Carolina and New York University Law School), is an executive of W. R. Grace & Company. He has moved his family to Greenville, South Carolina, twice and to Denver, Dallas, Cedar Rapids, Lexington (Massachusetts), and Dublin, Ireland, where his company loaned him as a marketing expert to the Irish Government.

The Roths lived the life of Riley in Ireland's largest period house, a palatial spread that overlooks Dublin's Georgian houses and green parks.

Whether it's Dublin or Greenville, U.S.A., where this family now lives, Aileen Roth says she goes into a town more ready to give than to receive. An attitude of responsibility toward your adopted city shows the local people that you want to contribute. She thinks an affiliation with a local church gives a transient a firm foundation to anchor to.

She says the woman with a talent for civic and charitable work—a children's hospital, the Girl Scouts, the Red Cross—to which she can siphon off her spare energies fund-raising, organizing committees, giving charity parties, gets involved in the most satisfying way. But for any personable and adaptable newcomer, there is always some group offering congenial interests. Aileen Roth is especially proud of the bowling trophies she won as a member of the bowling league of Lexington, Massachusetts.

In this area of winning friends, many corporate wives succumb happily to the warm, hospitable overtures and group activities offered by newcomer clubs in various communities.

Newcomers' welcome

Comparable to these are the adult clubs of Scituate, Massachusetts, which the Scituate Newcomers Association sponsors. From the nearby towns of Duxbury, Quincy, Cohasset, Braintree, Norwell, Marshfield, and others within a 30-mile radius of Scituate, newcomers come to join classes that offer avenues of self-expression and fast friendships with others taking courses in gourmet cooking, interior decorating, art and musical expression. Little Theatre activities, and an impressive list of creative crafts. Willard Rosenberger, former president of the sponsoring Art Association, says men and women come to join these clubs from all along the Golden Electronic Highway (Route 128, which circles Boston), where the major electronic companies are based. The corporate crowd from this area...

Isn't it wonderful, Kathryn mused, that such a practical carpet could be so beautiful. It didn't look at all synthetic. Arthur told her how they "naturalized" Polycrest fiber to give it the look and feel of fine wool. It really looks like carpets twice the price.

Arthur interrupted her thoughts.

"Kathryn, my dear, you seem to have an unusual spring in your footstep tonight."

"Well, you know my motto," she answered demurely, "put a little fun in your life. Try dancing on a carpet of Polycrest."

ercent of which is transient, ets happily involved in the Scit- ate classes and winds up feeling s much a part of the community s the most rock-ribbed natives.

Other families take advantage f executive mobility to pursue ollectors' hobbies. Mrs. Barrie ommerfield of Greenwich, Con- ecticut (Vassar, '53), whose hus- and's job as a Saks Fifth Ave- ue merchandise manager has noved his family in and out of half-dozen regions of the coun- y, collects China export porce- ain dating back to the 18th Cen- ury. Her two young sons collect ouvenirs of state capitols, state ags, prints of state flowers, and overnors' handshakes.

Those children who use trans- ers as a new hunting ground for nding antique arms, Indian ar- owheads, old coins, and animal racks unrealistically see moving rom place to place as an unend- ng holiday.

Effects on children

Parents take moves for chil- ren more seriously, especially hildren entering their senior high- hool year. Many say that break- ng off old ties at this period f life can be disastrous. One ouple who feel this way are Mr. nd Mrs. W. Thomas Dawson, the arents of two teen-age daugh- ers, 14 and 16. A vice-president f Columbia Broadcasting Sys- em, 38-year-old Thomas Daw- on, headquartered in New York ity, and his wife, Nita, are Gal- eston-born graduates of the Uni- ersity of Texas.

Their odyssey embraces a long st of moves and types of houses, ncluding a child's playhouse in he backyard of a Los Angeles ome. The Dawsons and their two abies squeezed into this minia- ure house during six months of severe housing shortage. Moves ave taken them from Los An- eles, Galveston, Austin, and Chi- ago to Upper Montclair, N.J., here they now live in an ele- ant four-bedroom, blue-shuttered, hite Colonial, with a patio naded by a grove of leafy hem- ocks.

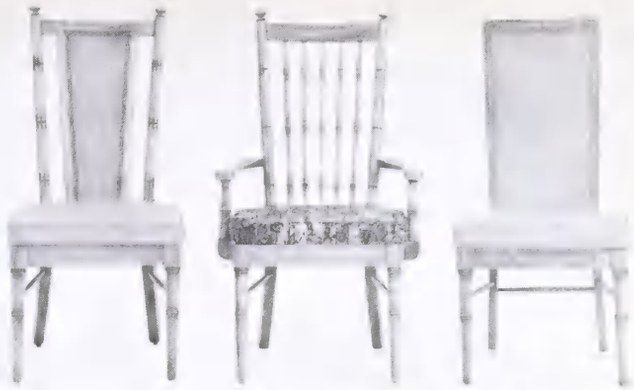
"Such moves," says Tom Daw- on, "can be broadening to chil- ren. They become better in- ormed, less provincial, more daptable. But frequent pulling p of roots can also be unsettling. hildren don't have the advan- ges of staying put. They're al- ways on trial in a new class- room. They can't make as endur- ing friendships as other children can."

Nita Dawson thinks changes of climate, from a health point of view, are bad when you move from a warm and sunny California to a cold, gray Chicago in mid-February, and children for the first time in their lives have to be bundled up like Eskimos. "Mine suffer from colds and other sicknesses for the first year after every move."

Tightly knit bonds

She says moves are also hard on housekeeping, when you shift from a casual year-round way of living to a seasonal ritual of turning carpets and switching from winter to summer curtains. "If you've opened up a terrace or patio, the weather is nice only until October when—bang!—you have to store furniture away and put up the 'storms.'"

Far outweighing these factors, she says, is the strengthening of the family's bonds when you're strangers in a town. Bonds can become as tightly knit as those that tied old patriarchal families together.



"You become very, very close to each other," says Nita Dawson. "This little interlude is like a honeymoon. Every member of the family gives his complete moral support. This alone can make the move worthwhile."

Assignments to posts overseas for many corporate families (there are an estimated 100,000 American families abroad) spell the adventure of exploring and adopting a country, of savoring to the fullest a foreign culture. Other families suffer cultural shock, stay huddled together under a company's wings.

"Some company wives living abroad live within a mental and social compound, if not a physical one," says Francis DeWitt Pratt, an associate of the executive recruitment firm of Ward Howell. "They should make an effort to learn something instead of getting together for Kaffeeklatsches."

The women we interviewed are safe from this indictment. For Gertrude Schweitzer, to whom traveling between Palm Beach, Florida, and Colts Neck, New Jersey, and two homes in France—in Malaucène (in Provence) and Quimperlé (in Brittany), overseas living offered an opportunity to explore in depth and delight a foreign country. To the high calling of diplomacy demanded of her as Mrs. William P. Schweitzer, the wife of the head of Peter J. Schweitzer Division of the Kimberly-Clark Corporation, she responds gracefully, cheerfully, and stylishly. A small, slender, dark-haired artist, whose paintings have been shown in leading galleries, she helps her husband entertain local French officials, aids village charities, and performs other public functions that have helped the Schweitzers to adapt easily.

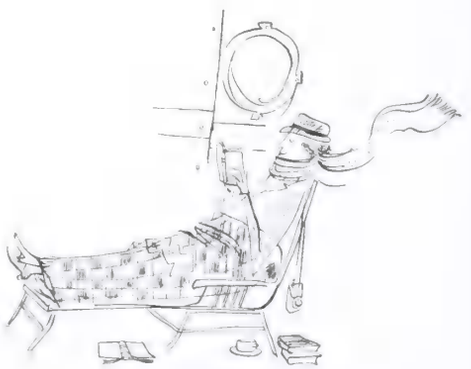
Proof of her success is that her two children, who grew up abroad, are completely bilingual, and feel as much at home in two culturally rich regions of France as they do in their own country.



"One of the secrets of adapting," says Gertrude Schweitzer, "is to try to learn why people do what they do.

"Following the customs of the country," she recalls, "we kept poultry in the kitchen (I finally got accustomed to it), and, as other mothers did, I gave my babies goat's milk until they refused to drink it. Only then did I install a scrawny little cow for milking.

"I marketed in the village, as other housewives did, and bought fish from vendors who came from Marseille once a week to set up their catch in tents, offering us the wonderful makings of bouillabaisse, which a neighbor taught me how to make. I also learned to cook frog's legs—from frogs we caught that were rain-washed down from the Alps into our local ponds."

Another American woman going with her engineer-husband and four children from Oakland, California, for a tour of duty abroad, convinced me that she wouldn't land in a company "compound" either. Phyllis Goelzenleuchter, a willowy young woman with brown hair, lively hazel eyes, and an avowed love of adventure, on her way to Kennedy airport to take off for her new home in Accra, Ghana, spoke of her hopes. She has been told that they will live in a palatial house staffed by six servants, one a Moslem gate-guard who turns toward Mecca twice a day to kneel and pray, but who, for the remainder of his waking hours, will keep vigil over her family.

While her husband, Fritz, is directing the safety of a new plant Kaiser Aluminum is building, and while her children are in class at an international school for the Kaiser management and other expatriates, Phyllis Goelzenleuchter, a Texas University graduate, expects to study a native language. For these serious courses, she'll enroll in the University of Ghana. Asked which of the six native languages she'll learn, she replied, "The one my houseboy speaks." She hopes it's also the one that turns the key to Ghana's richest folklore. ■

People, Places, Pleasures

By DUNCAN MacDONALD

Widely known for her daily interview program on New York's WQXR, Miss MacDonald is well acquainted with—and an acute observer of—the many worlds of esthetics, entertainment, travel, and the home. In this column of comment she will deal with the ideas and personalities of these worlds.

SIX DIRECTIONS: Anyone yearning for the excitement of running off in six different directions need only attempt to follow that fabulous family, the Braggiottis. Mario, the noted pianist and composer, is aboard the Leonardo da Vinci on his way to the Villa Braggiotti at Porto Santo Stefano, one of two tiny villages, the other being Porto Ercole, on the island of Argentario, 85 miles north of Rome.

Francesca Braggiotti, wife of John Lodge, Connecticut governor, U.S. Ambassador, and brother of Henry Cabot Lodge, was at last report on her way to Spain, conspiring to build a house at remote and choice Marbella.

PHILADELPHIA STORY: Gloria Braggiotti, wife of painter Emlen Etting, voyages on literary seas, having just given her publisher a manuscript attempting insight on inscrutable Philadelphia. Gloria previously wrote Born In A Crowd, in which she attempted a similarly difficult task: insight into the sometimes inscrutable Braggiottis.

To complete the whereabouts of the six, D. Chadwick is in Madrid, Stiano lives in Ogunquit, Maine, and cartoonist Rama Braggiotti is in East Norwalk, Connecticut.

MEDITERRANEAN STORY: Mario seems to bring together all the talents of this talented family: He plays concert piano beautifully, surrounding his playing with a gay and civilized commentary, composes several kinds of music, and, suggesting that his talents are endless, he turns out to be a great cook.

Food and music have much in common, says Mario, and he will explain what he means in a forthcoming television show, where he will play the piano, talk, and also cook.

Not to forget Villa Braggiotti: Looking down over the Mediterranean from the heights over Porto Santo Stefano is a room made of glass. There, one night not long ago, an unborn musical was performed.

BROADWAY STORY: I Do, I Do was shaped up in this room, as Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones, famed for The Fantasticks, the longest-running musical in history, staged a musical in miniature. Tom Jones had rewritten the book of Jan de Hartog's play, The Fourposter, with Harvey Schmidt, setting it all to music. The guest of honor was Gower Champion, and the plot was to get him to accept the responsibility of being director. Denouement: I Do, I Do is scheduled to open in Boston in late September and in Washington in October, prior to Broadway.

Many people have loved the plot of The Fourposter, which tells the story of almost half a century of experience between a man and a woman. Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn appeared in the Broadway play; Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer starred in the movie; Tammy Grimes and Jackie Cooper appeared in the delightful television version. Now Mary Martin and Robert Preston, the only actors in the play, will sing I Do, I Do, remaining alone on stage for something over two hours.

No fourposter, though. Tom Jones says the four posts lower visibility. "And if you had a canopy," he says, "no one would see anything from the balcony." A stylized bed will be the focal point of Oliver Smith's settings. So far, no one has been willing to predict what effect this will have on bedrooms.

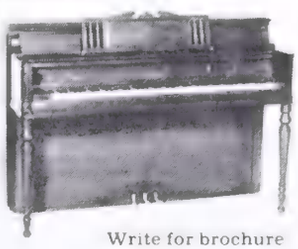
The concert hall piano for people who don't give their concerts in a concert hall.

A piano that sounds its best in a concert hall can sound wrong in a living room. There's a reason.

To keep music lovers happy in the concert hall, you need a piano that rates high in both tone and volume. But put the same piano in a living room, and it might just drive everyone out. The sound is too big.



Now take Chickering.

We have all the richness and sonority it takes to please the critical ear. It has the concert hall tone all right. Only we make the volume on strictly a living room scale. After all, you don't have to reach people in the balcony.

Our action is smooth and swift enough for professionals. Or for someone who just wants to playfully finger out Brahms' Lullaby.

You'd have to say Chickering is somewhat intimate. It's more friendly around the price tag, too.

The plain fact is, we've done more than anyone else to improve the sound and mechanics of pianos. And we've been doing it longer (144 years to be exact). So there's no reason we can't say our family piano sounds as good as anyone else's concert piano. We've simply never cared to be loud about it. That's all.

ART TOULOUSE: Steinlens may be on the way! Esther Polatin says so, and she may know. "Amusing, bawdy, colorful, clever," she says, "and very like Toulouse-Lautrec posters." Steinlens' drawings are worth seeing, says Barbara Tuchman in her book, The Proud Tower, where they are shown though only in black-and-white photographs.

The Steinlens originally appeared in French newspapers at the turn of the century, sometimes with poetry on the drawings. The place to see all this is a Continental boutique called Antica Establishment at Chelton's on Madison Avenue in New York. Here interesting works of art are on view, spirited into this country from an outpost in Paris.

ALARUMS AND EXCURSIONS: Where art may be nouveau, Nature never is, though crises in both areas arrive hourly. One of the most dramatic comes to our attention as we view an alarming situation in Maryland.

All of us think of Annapolis in an affectionate way as the site of our Naval Academy, and certainly it has a special claim on our hearts. Annapolis is this, and more. It displays to the visitor one of the most wonderful waterfront façades in the world, little affected by the winds of change. You can still smell the rope and the tar, and there are sails fore and aft. Here, in the good salt air, we can think of and look at our maritime past, viewing the old-time buildings along the waterfront, and savor those yesterdays.

St. Clair Wright, President of Historic Annapolis Incorporated, says that a threat exists to tear down the area and rebuild it for commercial use. Because Colonial Annapolis has been designated a Registered National Historic Landmark, she looks for help outside the community, feeling that Annapolis belongs to all Americans. Any ideas?

LAST CALL—UTAH: Mid-October sees the close of camping facilities in Bryce Canyon National Park in Utah, although park roads are open in certain areas in the winter. The Park Service speaks poetically of "the quaking aspens in October, with the afternoon sun shining through their bright yellow leaves."

LAST CALL—WISCONSIN: Before there were highways, the rivers and streams were the explorer's route, whether it was the Indian, the missionary, the hunter, the fisherman, the trapper. The Wisconsin Conservation Department has outlined 48 canoe trips in a booklet, "Wisconsin Water Trails," with excellent maps and details on the presence of rapids, the number of portages, camping supplies, length of trip, and other helpful information. A few excerpts from this beautifully thought-out booklet tell the story:

Turtle River Water Trail: At the next rapids, just around a bend, there's a big log jam on the left bank. The first four rapids in this set are easy to run, but the fifth has a very sharp drop. Take it well to the left, through the V, and be set for a thrill. . . . There is a five-mile quiet stretch before you reach Park Falls Country Club, a good take-out spot.

Wolf River Water Trail: The Lower Wolf River is probably fine year-round fishing for other species, plus duck hunting, boat cruising, scenery, and a fine canoe trail. With no rapids or dams, this strip is ideal for the novice canoeist.

LAST CALL—MAINE: September finds the passenger boat fleet of Boothbay Harbor, Maine, still sailing from the harborside wharves to Five Islands, Christmas Cove, Pemaquid, and other areas. Marion and Dave Dash, cocaptains of the Holiday, say visitors love the Sunset-Twilight sails, the Moonlight sails, and, at the end of September, the view of the fall foliage from the water. This is the land of the lobster and the clam. This is the land where you can be yourself, find yourself. As Marion Dash says, "If you're talking to a tree, no one will disturb you."

(House Beautiful will be glad to supply further details on all items mentioned in the column.) ■

ıen the Heritage carver turns over his model to the man at the machine, hands continue to interpret flow of each curve. When a carved wood commode, or any piece of furniture, is made more by mer n machines, only more money can buy it.

ıight be able to find a commode ›oks somewhat like this for $120. And, if all you want is hing to fill a wall in a foyer d a lamp next to your bed, you'll ›py with it.
Ieritage commode night stand ıround $220. Or $100 more than ›k-alike". This commode is for the person who considers a backdrop and a lamp essory for furniture. From rvings along the base and the legs to the beautifully worked antique cherry finish, this commode is a product of men's hands. Hands that respect the individuality of each grain in the wood. Hands that interpret the arc, the depth, the importance of every turn in the carving.
When the personality of natural as well as man-made designs is respected like this, a commode costs more money. The higher price on this commode—or any other piece of furniture we make—reflects deep-seated qualities that only more money can buy. Not just carving or a finish unmatched by shortcut methods. But the stretching and shaping that hold the lines of a sofa. And the way we'll finish a leg on a sofa whether or not it's meant to hide behind kick pleats.
When you find work like this, you'll see the Heritage name. Hanging from the hardware on this scaled down Louis Quinze style commode. Burned inside the drawers of a Heritage chest that takes its cues from Chippendale. Nestled under the cushions of a Heritage sofa. Swinging on a hangtag from one of our wing chairs. Hiding behind the doors of a mahogany Heritage hutch.

HOWARD GRAFF

When the colonists landed near the lower end of Chesapeake Bay, the Wye Oak (at upper end across from Annapolis) was a stalwart tree of 67 years.

GIVE YOUR TREES THE FUTURE THEY DESERVE

The most important day in the life of a tree is the day it goes in the ground. Planted in the wrong climate, the wrong kind of soil, or if necessary precautions in planting and care are not followed—its future may be brief.

But when the right tree is set in the right place in the right way, nothing on the face of the earth will live longer. In California's White Mountains, there's a bristletone pine about 4,000 years old. And there are redwoods in the groves of Northern California that are in their prime—after 25 to 30 centuries of life.

On the other hand, not every tree is planted as proclaimed by the Roman poet Statius "to benefit another generation." The birches, willows, cherries, plums, and the tree of heaven, among others, can't be counted on for more than 50 years. The olive, yew, banyan, and white oak—such as the Wye Oak shown here—will thrive for 500 to 700 years with proper care. Among the many that can live 100 years or more are the walnut, palm, elm, pecan, and hemlock. But every tree responds to proper care at planting time.

Let's assume you have a healthy new tree, root pruned, balled, and burlapped (or can-grown) by a reputable nurseryman, and it's time to dig the planting hole. If you're doing the job yourself, take plenty of time. If you keep the tree in the shade and water it, you can take a couple of days to prepare the hole. This is the only home the roots will know for the first few years. The better the soil, the better the growth, and longer the future.

Dig the hole six inches deeper than the ball and three times the diameter. That means a six-foot hole for a ball two feet across. This is a lot of digging, as you'll discover. Keep in mind that the tree will be there for 30 years at the very least, and perhaps 500.

As you dig, remove sticks, stones, and other debris. Put the topsoil in one pile, the clay and gravel in another. When ready to plant the tree, lay a length of 2-by-4 across the hole to establish the ground level. Set the root ball so the juncture of the trunk and soil is an inch or so above ground level. The tree will settle as time goes by. Fill in the hole with topsoil only (you may have to buy more to do the job). Add water as you fill in around the ball. The tree needs the moisture.

New Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner filters up to 95%* of airborne dust, dirt and pollen

The Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner brings a new dimension to clean air in homes, one you should experience for yourself to appreciate the difference.

It traps up to 19 times as many particles as the ordinary filters you see in most warm air furnaces or air conditioning systems.

The air in your home contains millions of impurities.

You can see only the larger particles of dust that settle on table tops. What you don't see are the millions of particles of pollen, soot, smoke, cooking grease, bacteria, and industrial waste that make up 90% of the total. These invisible particles do most of the real soiling and staining.

New efficiency

Almost all these smaller particles pass through ordinary filters, but the Honeywell unit traps up to 95%* of them from the air passing through the system . . . traps particles so tiny it would take about 7,000 of them to stretch across this dot (·).

May relieve allergies

Your family will breathe cleaner-fresher air. The electronic air cleaner is not a cure, but it may relieve allergies. Ask your doctor if it might help you.

Enjoy a cleaner home the easy way

Trade those ghostly white areas behind pictures and that dingy haze on furniture and windows for furnishings and walls that look and stay cleaner longer. You'll save on cleaning bills. You won't throw away your dust cloth because no system can remove all the particles that settle before they enter the system. But dusting will be reduced.

Installs in any home

The Honeywell "whole-house" Electronic Air Cleaner fits in the return air duct of any forced air heating-cooling system. In a new home it may be included in the mortgage for under $2.00 per month.

If you don't have a forced air system or are renting, consider the Honeywell portable Electronic Air Cleaner.

and it settles the soil. Do not add any fertilizer at this time.

Make a rim of soil around the outside of the hole to act as a saucer to hold water in the root area. You can use the clay soil for this. Once every week the root area should be soaked with water to a depth of at least one foot—unless it rains.

To keep the tree from rocking in the wind, it must be attached firmly to three solid stakes beyond the area of the hole. Use strips of tires or hose to keep the guy-wires from chafing the tree. Leave the wires in place for a couple of years until the roots are established.

Don't feed too soon

The best time to feed a newly planted tree is the second year after planting. Use a crowbar to punch a ring of holes about one foot apart, midway between the trunk and outside of the planting hole. Make them about 18 inches deep. Put a teacup of well-balanced fertilizer (an analysis of 5-10-10 or thereabouts) in each hole and water it in well. Repeat this every year, extending the perimeter of the holes six to eight inches (to stay in the area of the feeder roots).

What to watch for as the years go by

You may want to turn the long-term care and feeding of your trees over to a firm that specializes in such service. These specialists can forestall infestation of insects and disease by preventive spraying when necessary. And, of course, they are experts at anticipating other troubles to which trees are susceptible. But there's considerable satisfaction in being one's own tree watcher and protector.

A tree's worst pest is man himself. We remove all the leaves and natural mulch that fall to the ground. We cut the roots for ditches and foundations. We pave over the roots, change the grade, and compact the soil with heavy machinery so air and water can't penetrate.

We build fires under the branches and damage the leaves, or put a charcoal cooker so close to the bark that it damages the living cells. And, most frequently, we hit the base of the tree with the lawnmower and loosen the bark. This weakens the tree, and it may even die if the trunk is damaged all the way around.

It pays to develop an eye for all tree troubles, whether you intend to remedy them yourself or call in professional help.

When trees are small, the limb structure (called the scaffold) can be controlled quite easily. The main thing is to prevent V-shape crotches from developing. For when snow and ice build up on the limbs, these are likely to split. Prune to create trunk-and-branch junctures that are angles more L-shape than V-shape. When a limb must be removed, saw it off as close to the trunk as possible and cover the cut with tree paint, shellac, or wax. A V-shape limb on an old tree may have to be secured by rods or cables. This usually requires climbing—a job for an expert.

Watch for short annual growth as compared to previous years. This, in addition to small, dry-looking buds probably indicates a need for more food and water. If there's any significant yellowing of leaves, it's best to call a professional. This may be caused by root girdling, insects, or disease.

To help the future of the American elm tree, a particularly sharp eye is required. At the very first sign of a few dead leaves on an elm, a specialist should be called. If the tree has Dutch elm disease, it should be completely removed immediately. As of now, there is no cure for an infected tree. But adjacent trees may be spared if the trouble is caught in time. Don't let Dutch elm disease keep you from planting new elms. There will be a cure someday, but unless we keep planting them, there will be no elms.

Some "troubles" that appear to be quite drastic may be less of a threat to a tree than they seem. An infestation of inchworms, for example, can completely defoliate a tree, and it may look almost dead. But a healthy specimen can readily withstand an occasional attack.

The same is true of willow leaf beetles and other insects. They usually run in cycles. To avoid the unsightliness of these attacks, one must have the service of tree experts. Another job for professionals is lightning protection. It's not practical for every tree, but can be for a treasured specimen. ■

The people who built your dishwasher * recommend that you use something besides a detergent to prevent water spots.

They recommend:

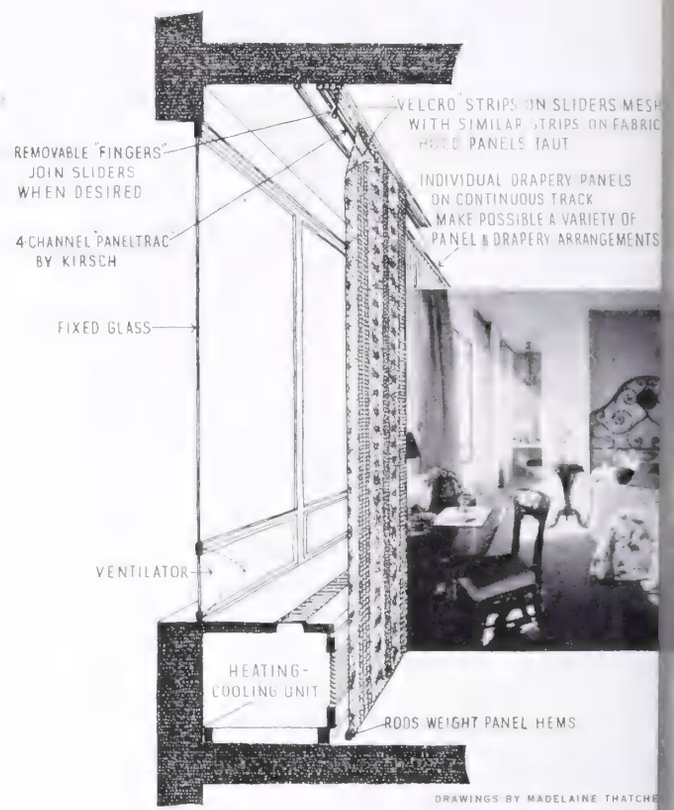
LIQUID JET-DRY®

for dishwashers with automatic dispensers for JET-DRY

LIQUID JET-DRY causes glasses, silverware and china to shed water instantly after they are rinsed. No water drops are left on the dishes to dry into unsightly water spots. Dishwasher manufacturers, recognizing JET-DRY as the answer to water spotting, equip many models to inject LIQUID JET-DRY into the rinse water. If your dishwasher is so equipped, don't run out of JET-DRY. Even one dishwashing without JET-DRY can cause spots.

SOLID JET-DRY®

for dishwashers without dispensers for JET-DRY



SOLID JET DRY is now available for dishwashers not equipped to dispense LIQUID JET-DRY. It dries dishes just as spot-free and sparkling (and just as automatically) as LIQUID JET-DRY does in dishwashers equipped with automatic dispensers. SOLID JET-DRY comes in the form of a bar which is neatly encased in a plastic basket. You simply clip the basket to any corner of the upper rack of your dishwasher. Remember to buy JET-DRY. At grocery stores and dishwasher dealers.

* JET-DRY is recommended by the manufacturers of all 28 makes of dishwashers.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

From the record book of a decorator, a suggestion for happily combining art, sentiment, and decoration

"I know it sounds pretentious," said Billie Carson, digging delicately into the pretty pile of Greenland shrimp on her open-face sandwich, "but my family really has everything! That's why I'm thoroughly stumped about what to give them for their golden anniversary." We were lunching Danishly in the great little konditorei of Manhattan's Museum of Modern Art, celebrating a quasi-anniversary of our own—one springtime day in the year we customarily set aside for going together to whatever museum shows we'd never get to if we didn't make a special event of going to them. Billie comes in from Chatham. I close up shop, and away we go to assimilate culture, gossip of The Group, and usually more lunch than either of us should eat.

When Billie says "family," she means her mother and father, just as we all referred to our parents a thousand years ago when we were classmates in college. In point of fact, Billie's immediate family is actually her husband and two daughters. The kids have all married in the curiously premature fashion of this era's young, and have so multiplied that Billie and Hal have been made grandparents four times to date.

I looked out on the sculpture garden and all sorts of associations hit me, just as the sun was starting to color the gray and white with gold.

"You might have everything your parents own dipped in gold," I suggested, "like silver flatware, et cetera, et cetera."

"Please," said Billie. "They had that done last Christmas."

"Then, all vermeil aside, I know something I bet they haven't got! Wouldn't they love it if you gave them a sort of portrait of their progeny in sculpture—you and the girls and the youngsters, in clay or bronze?"

"Their address isn't really Mount Rushmore, you know, and wouldn't seven statues be a pretty large order for a four-room apartment?"

"Not at all," I said. "Not the way my sculptress friend Barbara Gainey works. She does all kinds of portrait sculpture, of course, but specializes in modeling heads of children. She has a whole United Nations of children's heads to her credit, none of them more than six inches high, which is a good general size to be decoratively usable in most modern rooms. When she does adults' heads, she makes the old folks eight to ten inches high to establish a good proportion when they're shown with the heads of smaller fry. Actually, she can sculpt her subjects in any size, even larger than life, if you insist. In any case, each modeled head is supported on a block of wood, which sets it off as any work of art should be, and when the scale is moderately small, several pieces can be used together with mighty effect. I see you and yours, for example, cast in bronze and set on black blocks in the lighted wall niche in your mother's dining room. On glass shelves with concealed lighting, the lineup ought to look divine, specially in profile, since you all seem to have the pure Greek nose."

"Pure Erse, I think you mean," said Billie, "and Harold Harvey, the baby, is pure Button. He's not quite six months old, and as wiggly a party as young wigglers come, so isn't he a shade tiny to be part of this project?"

"Well, the youngest baby Barbara ever sculpted was eight weeks old—and a wild success, because it turned out that the little head, caught in clay and in full dimension, was so like Grandpa's that everyone was astonished. The Grandpa, of course, was proud as Punch. But that's sculpture for you. In the hands of a sculptor who has the blessed gift of catching likenesses, form and character come through the clay in ways that are rarely matched in the two-dimensions of paint or pastels. In families, look-alikes turn up in sculpture that you might never even notice in real life. Don't, by the way, expect sculpture to give the same kind of likeness you get in a painted portrait. A good sculptor never attempts photographic accuracy in minute detail. Eyes are left blank and hair and skin are merely suggested. The emphasis is on the bony structure of the face and head, and the nature of the clay is exploited. Realism is not so much the goal as is the character of the subject, which miraculously comes through such high temperature that the piece practically becomes like bone china. It can, of course, be cast in bronze, and can also be copied, so that if Harold Harvey's other set of grandparents should care for a similar representation of him, that can easily be arranged."

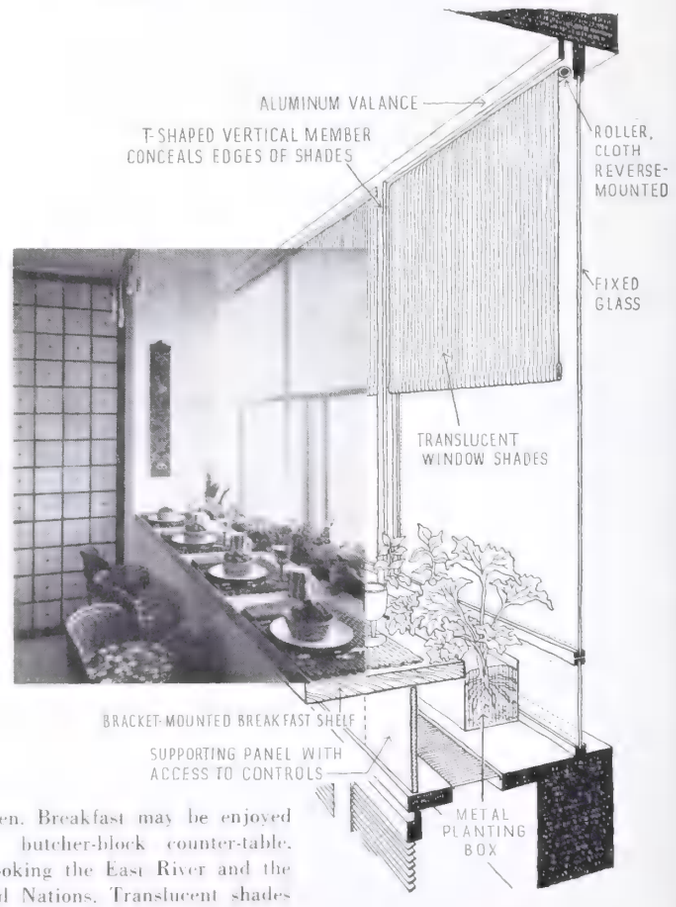
"Would Miss Gainey come to us for sittings, would we go to her, or what?"



"Oh, she'll go anywhere around New York—within reasonable commuting distance, of course. Naturally, she prefers working from life, as they say in the art field, but she has done some very successful heads from photographs. To do this, she needs several pictures of the head, showing front and profile and three-quarter views (this last to show the contour of the cheek). But as long as you're in New York, let's forego the apple cake with whipped cream, and wander up to 741 Madison Avenue, where the lady herself can answer all your questions."—M.G. ■ we set out to make the finest, sharpest, best looking, best balanced dining blade ever made.

we think we did.

It's name is Miming. Miming was legend's dwarf mastersmith. He was small, sharp, and expert like these blades. The Gerber jewel steel takes and holds an unbelievable edge; steaks, chops and other meats surrender at a touch. The design is graceful and clean, the balance superb. We handmake them to be sure. Your table should have a set. At fine stores everywhere.

M6—Set of six in solid walnut chest, $36.50. Also in sets of 2, 4, 8 & 12.

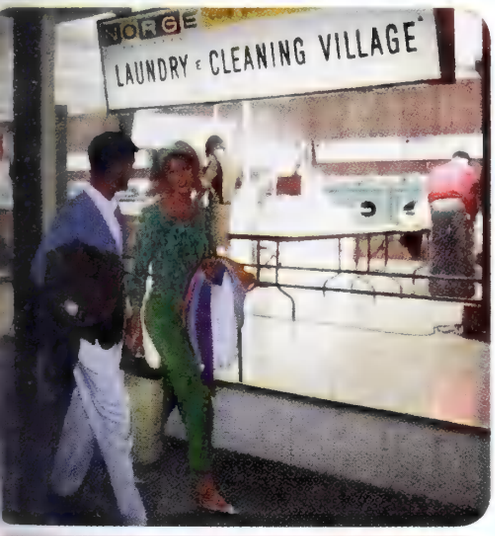
Ronson's versatile Varaflame butane-gas burner will heat cooked or frozen foods, boil water for "instants," simmer soups, provide chafing-dish or hot-keeping service. Six vents disperse burner's heat; fingertip lever adjusts flame size. Ronson Cookette De-Luxe costs $13.50; includes the stand and a Multi-Fill Injector for fueling the burner. Burner unit is detachable for separate use. Wanamaker's, Philadelphia, Pa. 19102.

This new use of DuPont's Teflon provides the coating's well-known "nonstick" service on a roast rack meritorious in its own right. Notched base adjusts the V-cradle to fit any size fowl or roast and keeps it clear of baking pan's bottom. The handles provide evident lifting convenience. The heavy Teflon coating overlays sturdy steel construction. Fits any standard roasting pan. $4. From Downs & Co., Evanston, Ill. 60204.

Cold water and a canful of ground coffee go into the extraction bowl; overnight it distills pure coffee essence that you drain, refrigerate, use as needed by merely adding boiling water (a tablespoonful to a cupful). The essence has a "fresh-from-the-can" flavor and an aroma that lasts from start to finish. A 7-cup batch of essence is made each time. Toddy Coffeemaker costs $13.50; from Petite Marmite, 606 Westbury Square, Houston, Texas.



Porta-Seat is both a beach chair and a hand truck; is instantly ready for either service when unfolded; folds to 17″ by 18″ by 2″ size. In toting use, it rides on large rubber wheels, supports heavy loads, can handle a stack of five suitcases. As a seat, it's roomy, firm, comfortable. Precision-made of lightweight steel; has nonstretch plastic webbing. The English import costs $13. From Hollis Co., 1133 Broadway, N.Y. 10, N.Y.

BOOKS:

THE NEWEST FOR YOUR HOME

A brief look at a few recent and future books that will contribute to the pleasures of running a house

Our up-to-the-minute report of new books contains notations about recently published titles and a forecast of future ones. For the latter books, we have included the scheduled month of publication in the parentheses.

Food and wine

A companion to the successful New York Times Cook Book is The New York Times Menu Cook Book, edited by Craig Claiborne (Harper & Row, $7.95 through Dec. 31st, $8.95 thereafter, October). The advantage of this book is having tempting menus planned for you. All the recipes are new, not ones that appeared in the earlier volume.

The Classic Cooking of Spain, by Jeannette Aguilar (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $4.95, September) is more than pure cookbook. It is also a tour of the country. Typical recipes from each region are accompanied by a selection of maps and photographs, by a sampling of characteristic literature, and by a discussion of each area's cuisine.

Bound to please adults and children since both can easily follow the recipes is La Pâtisserie est un jeu d'enfants, by Michel Oliver, translated by Charlotte Turgeon (Random House, $6.95, October). The 16 French recipes for mousses, crêpes, tarts, petits-fours, and other classic sweets bear out the title, "Pastry is Child's Play." Recipes, which include desserts and sweets of all kinds, are given in French and English with colorful explanatory drawings. This is a companion to La Cuisine est un jeu d'enfants by the same author.

The Wine and Food Society has inaugurated a series of gastronomic books. First title on its list is a wine guide book for beginners written by the Society's founder, André L. Simon. The Commonsense of Wine (World, $7.50) is in the form of an alphabetical questionnaire about the individual wines and vineyards done country by country. We find it to be a very readable reference work.

Homemaking aids

Today's householders are faced daily with minor fixit jobs which, thanks to The New York Times Complete Manual of Home Repairs, by Bernard Gladstone (Macmillan, $7.95), are now solvable.

An authority on the subject of home maintenance for over 20 years, Mr. Gladstone presents a clearly written manual with explicit drawings and photographs. It will be welcomed by the novice and the more experienced do-it-yourselfer.

For the distaff members of the house, William Laas and the editors of Good Housekeeping have compiled in dictionary form Good Housekeeping's Guide for Young Homemakers (Harper & Row, $5.95, October). Complete coverage is given to the various problems encountered in running a household. Homemakers of any age will find this a helpful book to own.

Look forward next spring to a much needed book, The Guide to Home Remodeling, by A. J. Harmon, A.I.A. (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $13.50, Spring, 1967). The hows, whats, whens, and wheres of remodeling the house you buy or live in are discussed in the opening sections. Chapters follow on expenses, landscaping, heating, and related subjects. Drawings of floor plans and elevations, coupled with before and after photographs, illustrate the salient points.

Plants and flowers

Originally published in German, Garden Guide by Ludwig Koch-Isenburg (Viking, $5.95) offers assistance to those interested in planning and landscaping their gardens for the best visual effect. News in garden plants, materials, and designs was gathered by the author during his world-wide travels. American audiences will enjoy a European's comment on getting maximum enjoyment from a garden with the minimum of cost and effort.

Pictures of magnificent gardens through the centuries have been laced with informative text to produce The Garden: An Illustrated History by Julia S. Berrall (Viking, $15, October). Variety in the types of gardens is the keynote in this horticultural history beginning with the formal gardens of ancient Egypt and ending with modern landscapes.

The riot of color in outdoor gardens comes mainly from annuals, the subject of Annual Flowers in Color by Paul F. Frese (Grosset & Dunlap, $4.95). Among the good reasons for planting these quick growers in profusion are the numerous colors, sizes, and textures annuals are available in. This is a convenient and practical guide with detailed information on over 100 species.

An expert on the subject of herbs has written an informative book, Herbs for Every Garden (Dutton, $4.95). Gertrude B. Foster has prepared more than a how-to guide. Hers is a delightful combination of advice, personal remarks, and historical notes about herbs. The cultivation of herbs from planting through harvesting is covered in interesting detail. Photographs and line drawings are sprinkled throughout. Cooking hints and recipes are included.

Cultural scene

Written with the same clarity as his Joy of Music, Leonard Bernstein's The Infinite Variety of Music (Simon & Schuster, $8.50, November) belongs on the music shelf as a companion volume. The complete scripts of Mr. Bernstein's television programs on Mozart, Romanticism, Rhythm, Jazz in Serious Music, and the Infinite Variety of Music are here, along with his clarifying remarks on the Creative Process. A highlight is the informative analysis of four great symphonies: Beethoven's Third (Eroica), Tchaikovsky's Sixth (Pathétique), Brahms' Fourth, and Dvořák's Fifth (From the New World).

A different method of explaining music is found in The Appreciation of Music: A Living Method Course by knowledgeable music critic Abram Chasins (Crown, $9.95, November). Over 175 musical selections from Bach to Bartók on four LP 33⅓ RPM records serve as points of reference for the expository remarks in the book. This combination of reading what to listen for—and then listening—makes music come to life for the whole family.

Decoration and design

Admirers of international interior designer David Hicks will be interested in his new book, David Hicks Decorator (Putnam, $25, November). This highly illustrated volume covers his work, which includes rooms in Buckingham Palace and the Sassoon house in Hong Kong. (Readers of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL will remember our January, 1966 feature on Mr. Hicks's own London apartment.)

In the spring of 1964, a two-day conference on Design in America was held in Princeton, New Jersey. The chief participants represented the related but competitive professions of architecture, industrial design, and urban planning. Ten essays presented at the conference for discussion appear in Who Designs America?, under the editorship of Laurence B. Holland (Anchor paperback, $1.45). Such controversial ideas as the temporary nature of today's buildings and the influence exerted on design research by unqualified individuals are here. All essays are constructive, with suggested remedies for blighted cities. ■ —K.F.

Correction

In our July issue it was stated that Designer David Parmelee was "moving to Canada." Actually, while Mr. Parmelee has accepted important design commissions in Canada and England, his office and his home will remain in Michigan. We regret this misunderstanding.

She Sells YOUTH!

GERTRUDE ENELOW

Perhaps you have read this fascinating story in the Chicago AMERICAN . . . Louisville COURIER . . . Sioux City JOURNAL — or dozens of other top newspapers:

There is a strange and beautiful woman in Chicago who has, for the last twenty years, been selling youth to men and women who were growing old before their time. Who has been selling sleep to people who had thought they had lost a full night's sleep forever. Who has been selling strength and blessed relief from pain, to people who have been racked with backache for years.

Her price is exactly one weekend of your time. Her method is a return to Nature, through simple gentle motions that free your body's locked-up vigor. Her full story is told here:

Some of the startling facts this woman will teach you:

1) A new way to sleep—that automatically turns off the left-over tension in your body . . . lets you drift off in minutes . . . strengthens your spine as you sleep . . . and gives a virtual beauty treatment, every night, to those sag-prone muscles of your chin and neck.

2) Where most premature facial wrinkles really come from — and why, if you wish to prevent them, you should concentrate, not on your face, but your feet.

3) A new kind of energy food—that doesn't cost a penny because it's simply a new way for your body to use plain ordinary air. And how that same air that surrounds you every day can be used to improve your appearance, your health and your vitality in a dozen different ways: including how to breathe yourself calm . . . how to swim in air as gracefully and as exhilaratingly as you now swim in water . . . how to float the upper part of your body in air, and thus make it feel weightless—so you can work all day with half the energy and half the tiredness that you feel right now.

4) A new kind of exercise that is not really exercise at all. Because if you want to strengthen or streamline any one part of your body, you don't really move it at all. For example, if you want to suck in your stomach, you forget all about it, and concentrate on one simple blowing action. Or, to build new power into your back, you move your ankle an ingenious way every morning in bed.

Twenty Years of Proof, International Fame, Recommendations by Doctor After Doctor—All Back Up These Facts :

Every one of these facts – every one of these methods – may sound impossible to you right now. We do not blame you if they do. But you must realize this:

Every single one of these methods have been proven, on thousands of men and women of all ages, for over twenty years. They have been used, not only in the United States, but in Sweden, Norway, Germany and Russia—and praised in the national press of these countries.

For almost twenty years, doctors have been sending people to this woman: to help strengthen torturous backs . . . to gain desperately-needed sleep without tranquilizers or drugs . . . to bring back the natural energy, drive, vigor that these patients may have thought they had lost forever.

Over TWENTY daily classes in Chicago alone now teach these methods to the few people who are fortunate enough to be able to take them in person. Now, however, they are available in book form to every man and woman who is willing to gamble a five-cent stamp, and a single weekend of their time to learn them.

Here is what this first weekend alone will give you. It starts with the most vital energy-restorer of all—sleep.

You Don't Know How to Sleep Today. No One Has Ever Taught You. This Book Does, In a Single Evening, as Easily as This:

This book starts by reminding you of an inescapable fact:

That sleep—deep, relaxed, completely-natural sleep—is the greatest source of energy your body will ever have.

But once you lose this gift of sleep and most adults have completely lost it—then you are draining energy and youth out of your body, exactly the same way that air drains out of a tire when it has a leak.

This book says that sleep is an art. It must be learned. It is an active ritual that takes about three minutes every evening, and accomplishes these two ends:

1) Turns off your mind, and lets your body float effortlessly into a deep sleep.

2) Arranges the parts of your body in bed—so that sleep will not be disturbed by tossing and turning, and so you will not wake up the next morning with a sore spine, or "pins and needles" in your arms or legs, or a stiff neck and shoulders.

No one has ever taught you this simple ritual before. No one has ever taught you before how to convert your body into a limp mass—without a worry, without a thought, without a single thread of tension remaining from the day that has just passed.

No one has ever taught you before how to sink into a mattress so deeply, that sleep must come. Without a single pressure on any nerve center of your body. With the small of the back completely unburdened at last. With the head perfectly aligned . . . the neck muscles relaxed and yet strengthened ...the chin uplifted...even the muscles of your face glowing and toned.

This is a way of sleeping where not one single joint rests on another. Even the ankles and wrists are completely free. You will learn it in five minutes, the very first evening you pick up this book. You will wake up the next morning, more refreshed than you have known in years.

But this is only the first gift you receive from this amazing book. Here are just a few of the others:

Your Body's Built-In Relaxers, Strengtheners, Streamliners— Now Put to Work for You for the First Time.

For example—

On page 33 you discover a six-second motion with your mouth, that instantly relaxes the over-tense muscles of your chest, heart and solar plexus —and drains hyper-tension out of your body like water running from a sieve.

On page 69 you discover how to turn the everyday movements of life into complete exercises by themselves. So that every time you sit, or stand, or reach out to pick up an object, you are effortlessly exercising and streamlining your body—keeping yourself in top condition without even realizing it.

On page 57 you are shown the built-in apparatus, in your left foot, that automatically corrects your worst posture faults . . . that relaxes and soothes the lower back muscles at will . . . and—most surprising of all—that irons out those ridgy, "washboard" inner thighs, that no other exercises you've tried could ever reach.

On page 113 you use, for the first time, your body's own built-in vibrator—that has you bursting with energy every morning in seconds . . . that calms you down after a full day's work —in two or three thrilling minutes—and gives you a new spurt of vitality for the evening's fun.

And much, much more. How to relax weary eyes – by looking at nothing. How to restore the natural forces that most people rob themselves of daily. A new way to sit that lifts your upper body right out of your hips...coaxes your spinal column into its most healthful posture . . . makes hours at a desk pass like minutes.

Plus five astonishing energy-multipliers that you've always had at your fingertips, but never known how to use until today. Plus half a dozen fatigue-minimizers that focus effort, eliminate waste motion, develop startling new grace and rhythm in every motion you make.

A Final Word of Warning:

All these, and much more, are contained in Gertrude Enelow's revolutionary new Body Dynamics—yours to read from cover to cover without risking a penny.

Two words of caution must be added, however:

1) It is a short book. It has only 128 pages in all. If you are a fast reader, you can finish it in a single weekend. Do not, therefore, expect a huge weighty tome, full of useless theory. Every page of this book is packed with practical, step-by-step direction, that you can use immediately to give you the strength and health and beauty that are locked up inside your body today.

2) And most important of all—do not be misled by the ease and simplicity of the movements given you in this book! Since most of them can be performed sitting down or lying in bed . . . since most of them have been mastered by men and women as much as ninety years of age . . . since none of them even cause you to "work up a sweat"—you may think for the first day or two that they cannot really be doing you that much good.

It is only after the first week that the true results begin to show you the incredible efficiency of these incredibly gentle movements — in the buoyancy with which you bounce out of bed each morning . . . in the relief from pain to which you have been a martyr for years . . . in the startled reaction of your friends, as they stop you on the street and beg you to tell them the secret!

Twenty years of proof...thousands of case histories . . . all tell the same story. Try this thrilling book, entirely at our risk, TODAY!

Read These Amazing Newspaper Reports

CHICAGO AMERICAN

"This is not a woman—this is a firecracker shooting off sparks of benevolence in all directions. She's like an earth mother with the looks of a fullblown Carol Channing who feels her mission in life is to help.

She wants to help women into a more healthful and supple middle age. She wants to bring camaraderie and sunshine into the lives of the grandparent generation. She wants to make rugged ramrods of every living soul with an aching back.

There are others who solemnly will swear she is the reincarnation of Ponce de Leon.

All her young adult life she had suffered from a bad back, went to countless doctors, osteopaths and exercise teachers, finally developed her own theories, and in time was conducting classes in the ballroom of the Shoreland hotel.

One of Gertrude's pupils, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, a great grandmother with the straightest back and most twinkling blue eyes you ever saw, thinks nothing of demonstrating body dynamics at a party. She'll lie down on the floor doing leg kicks with the grace and rhythm of a ballet dancer, springs to her feet with the agility of a young woman.

She seemed to be using her body with such released joy. Who was she? A pupil of Gertrude's for the past 15 years. A woman of 60 who looks 45, is married to a younger man and admitted "If it weren't for Gertrude, today I'd be an arthritic old woman."

THE SIOUX CITY SUNDAY JOURNAL

"A merry-eyed, tousle-headed, effervescent dynamo took the stage in the Mayfair hotel ballroom Saturday afternoon and turned the November meeting of the Sioux City Woman's Club into a delightful audience participation show. With the effortless ease of a charming rag doll, Mrs. Gertrude Enelow illustrated how body dynamics can bring power into everything you do.

She proceeded to prove that by coordinating your breathing and your emotions, by coaxing your body back to its natural functions, you can almost swim in air."

Women of all ages, many of them grandmothers, are astonished at what their bodies can do without effort. Body Dynamics is not simply a matter of feeling good for hours; it gives them strength to withstand emotional pressures day by day."

THE COURIER JOURNAL LOUISVILLE, KY.

"She wants everybody to feel as good as she does all the time. She stoutly believes that almost everyone can feel that good."

A chat with her charges you up faster than a pep pill.

"We lose our spring and bounce and buoyancy and thus we lose our youthful grace . . . it can be retained until our last day on earth; it doesn't belong only to youth . . . we don't need to lose it."

Body Dynamics, she says, differ from the isometric exercises having a vogue today.

"Our method brings people into a position of balance, which gives release of movement. It is absolutely effortless, and integrated with breathing, which is, in turn, related to the universal rhythm.

"Isometric, on the other hand, means off-balance.

"Exercise is something you should enjoy . . .

"Anyone can do my work with ease and joy and relate it to their spiritual development."

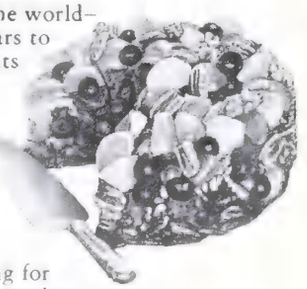
"Our 15th Year"

made the
OLD-FASHIONED WAY a panful at a time!

6 taste-tempting preserves in an attractive brass table-cart server!



Strawberry, wild mountain blackberry, spiced cherry, raspberry, wild plum, orange marmalade—real preserves, like Grandma used to make. Maybe even better. And made the way she used to, a small panful at a time, on the top of the stove. No wonder they're the best you ever tasted. And so inexpensive, too. This handsome gift will say "Good Morning" and will keep friends thinking of you all year long. Gift No. 15, shipping weight approx. 4½ lbs $3.99.

What will become of little Sue?

Four-year-old Sue-Cha Shen has waited several hours for her stepfather to return. She is too young to realize she has been abandoned.

It was almost dark when one of our staff workers discovered Sue. Later we learned that her real father had been killed in an accident.

Her mother, with five sons and a daughter to support, married in desperation, but the stepfather didn't want little girls, and proceeded to get rid of Sue-Cha.

And what will become of her now? Our homes operate on a severely limited budget, and unless we find a sponsor for Sue—her future looks bleak indeed.

Will you help? The world is full of little Sue-Chas—waiting, looking for happiness, love, a warm meal, a clean dress.

This is why Overseas Children (formerly Christian Herald Industrial Missions in China) opened an orphanage in China, many years ago. And after the Communists forced us out, we moved on to Hong Kong, Formosa, then Korea.

And it seems we always have more orphans than sponsors. This is very dear to my heart. I have held children like Sue-Cha in my arms —innocent victims of a world full of violence.

I urge you to sponsor a needy child. The cost is small, only $10 a month. Besides the child's love and gratitude, you will receive his or her picture, life history, and the chance to exchange letters. Both groups and individuals can sponsor these youngsters.

Please—sit down right now, fill out the sponsor application, write your check for $10 and send it air mail. The need is urgent. A child is waiting for your love. Will you help? Today?

God bless you,

Daniel A. Poling

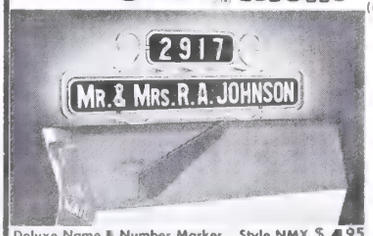
Chaperone Says, Keep Off!

A FEW PUFFS KEEP PETS WHERE THEY BELONG

Banish telltale hairs, doggy odors, prevent pets soiling upholstery and rugs. Keep Kitty from clawing furniture, puppy from chewing slippers, etc. Humane, invisible, long-lasting. Pet-proofs what you spray. (U.S.D.A. reg. 731-23).

Indoor Chaperone trains pets the easy way. It's so repelling dogs and cats avoid what you spray; people seldom notice its faint fragrance.



Outdoors, Protects Plants, Lawns

Outdoor Chaperone, extra potent, controls dogs, cats, other animals. Prevents burned evergreens, spilled garbage cans. (U.S.D.A. reg. 731-17).

4 EARLY AMERICAN "FIRST EDITION" ART PRINTS 50¢ each

Yes, in art stores you would pay up to $10 for a magnificent HAND-CRAFTED Eagle this size. This breath-takingly beautiful 25½" x 9½" mural on parchment is featured in art catalogs and fine stores. Now with 4 exquisite Early American art prints at our special low price of only 50¢ each . . . the American Eagle is yours ABSOLUTELY FREE.

Imagine hanging in your home both the Early American Eagle mural and the 4 Early American "first editions." These are the most beautifully decorative art prints ever created by one of America's favorite historic artists C. J. Thomas. The Eagle is actually reproduced for your order in full color entirely by hand. The 4 Early American scenes are "first edition," limited edition ink prints on heavy art paper in unusually tall shape, 25" x 9", so good for grouping in pairs or in a row. The newest rage of home decorators is this tall "original" look. The excitement and beauty they bring to any room must be seen to be appreciated. The small illustrations shown here cannot begin to show the beauty and excitement of art. Only when you receive your full color American Eagle Mural and your 4 "first editions" will you appreciate how they will bring a new magic to your home.

OFFER WILL NOT BE REPEATED—To take advantage of this special FREE offer, we urge you to mail coupon now while supply lasts. You receive 5 beautiful art prints—over 1100 square inches of "first editions" for only $2.00. This offer may not be repeated in this publication.

Each art print 9"x25" on heavy art paper. Fabulously beautiful.

ADDRESS BOOK

Valuable names and places—for unique services—from our little black book to yours

By EPSIE KINARD

There are nine million folklorist and other guitar players in this country, and at one time or another, particularly in the summer, all instruments develop troubles: broken strings, lost bridge, worn-out fret, cracked or unglued case, or a warped neck. If you're in this official musical roundup, jot down the name of a guitar "doctor," Pietro Carbone, the son and apprentice of a violinmaker. Brought for repairs into his little white-fronted shop at 56 MacDougal St., New York City, are the guitars of such performers as Burl Ives, Joan Baez, Jean Ritchie, and the Beatles. Many musicians come here to find parts missing from all sorts of instruments. Mr. Carbone mails replacements of broken guitar strings all over the world: in gut, silver, bronze, steel, nylon, or alloy, his own invention. Alloy gives the lovely sound to those guitars that can't support the weight of steel. Before sending in a guitar, write to him and state your problem. He'll give you an estimate and tell you how to pack and ship.

Subject to the vagaries of summer weather is the up-and-coming accordion with a repertory now that includes opera (Four Saints in Three Acts), 1,200,000 performers, and a susceptibility to humidity, heat, and salt air. If yours is out of tune, keys stick, stops are sluggish, bellows leak, valves curl, or whatever, the Excelsior Accordion Co., 333 6th Ave., New York City, branch of an American-owned Italian factory, will repair it, regardless of label. Write for price estimate, stating your problem.

Wood-wind and brass instruments are efficiently repaired by Carl Fischer Instruments Co., whether yours is their make or not, at one of two of their shops. Wood winds (clarinets, saxophones, flutes, oboes, etc.) are repaired at 105 East 16th St., New York City. Cornets, French horns, sousaphones, tubas, and other brass instruments go to a Grand Rapids, Michigan, factory. Write to the New York office for price estimate and shipping instructions.

Where to find music boxes that will play your favorite tune — even one you compose? We have the answer to this from Sponholz, 850 Seventh Ave., New York City, music maker to many VIP's. They order personalized tunes cut for Oscar winners, song writers, actors, and actresses who've scored such hits as Lucille Ball's "Hey, Look Me Over" in the musical comedy Wildcat. Among less famous customers are husbands and beaux who want to send wives and sweethearts "their song" in the magically tinkling little box that plays from four to five minutes and will accommodate two tunes. According to Mr. Sponholz, the most requested are the enduring "The Blue Danube" and such Debussy charmers as the "Golliwog's Cake Walk," ordered by people who enjoy Debussy's dig at Richard Wagner. If you want your own composition cut, send the musical score. Write for estimate. A deposit is required. Boxes cost $50 and up, and orders take two to three months to deliver. ■ bring stars indoors

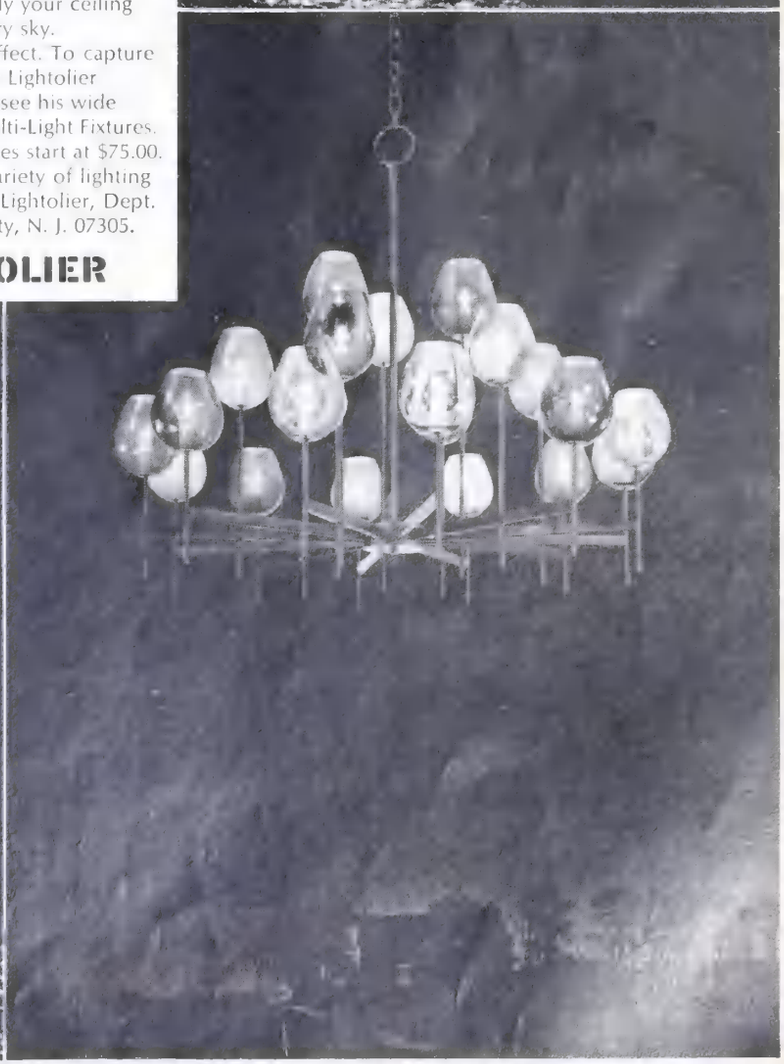
Take many sparkling light sources—up to 24 per fixture.

Next, choose clean, contemporary frameworks of silver, brass, or neutral black.

Then carefully arrange all the elements so that the lamps reflect many times over on the glassware and on the gleaming metal surfaces.



And suddenly your ceiling becomes a starry sky.

That's the effect. To capture it just visit your Lightolier distributor and see his wide selection of Multi-Light Fixtures. Chandelier prices start at $75.00.

And for a variety of lighting ideas, write to Lightolier, Dept. HB-9, Jersey City, N. J. 07305.

What good is a dishwasher detergent if it's no good in your water?

Every dishwasher detergent manufacturer knows that no one dishwasher detergent works equally well in all kinds of water. Yet nobody does anything about it — except the makers of FINISH. They have developed special formulas of FINISH for different types of water. Before they send your Special Formula FINISH into your area they test it in various types of water prevalent in your area. They make sure that your Special Formula FINISH washes dishes cleaner and shines glasses brighter than any other detergent.

It stands to reason that the world's largest producers of dishwasher detergents wouldn't go so far out of their way to give you a better product if it weren't important. Nor would the manufacturers of all 28 makes of dishwashers approve it. Do you consider it important enough to try your Special Formula FINISH in your dishwasher?

KitchenAid replaces all kinds of dishwashers.

No matter how you're doing your dishes now, sooner or later you'll probably want a new automatic dishwasher.

Why not make it a KitchenAid?

A KitchenAid performs like no ordinary dishwasher can.

We build dishwashers to load easily and take all sorts of things from roasters to baby bottle nipples. We build them to wash and dry everything thoroughly, safely. We build them to last, too. Just as we've built our commercial dishwashers for the last 80 years.

You won't find many dishwashers so carefully tested before they leave the factory. Or with wash chambers with porcelain enamel finish inside and outside. And such strong, dependable motors. (We're one of the few who bother to make our own.)

In fact, thousands of our dishwashers made since the early fifties are still going strong. Maybe that's why so many satisfied users recommend KitchenAid to their friends.

If you'd like more information about KitchenAid dishwashers, ask an owner. Or write KitchenAid Dishwashers, Dept. 6DB-9, The Hobart Manufacturing Company, Troy, Ohio 45373.

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some of the common but often puzzling questions in cookery

By HELEN McCULLY

What is the difference between a plum and a prune? Botanically, both species belong to the Prunus group. In the fruit industry, however, plum means fresh fruit, and prunes, dried. Actually, some types of prunes can be eaten fresh. Prune is, of course, the French word for fresh plums and, to further confuse the issue, fresh plums are sometimes called Italian prunes or Japanese plums. Although growers prefer to call the lovely purple plums—in season through August and September—Italian prunes, housewives (and this varies from region to region) prefer the name purple plums. Canned prunes are usually designated as purple plums on the can. The delicious, juicy, rich California plums (plum, by the way, means goodness) are heart-shape and either crimson or gold—never purple or blue. In season in June, July, and into August.

What is a New York onion? A yellow globe onion, quite pungent, that makes an excellent all-purpose onion. It accounts for 75 percent of the entire dry onion crop.

What are filets de thon? Thon is the French word for tuna. Unlike American tuna, French tuna is filleted into thin, narrow pieces, packed in olive oil or wine, sometimes with herbs and seeds. An elegant first course or hors d'oeuvre. American tuna comes in three different types of pack: solid (this is the white Albacore tuna); chunk style (the yellow-fin tuna that is somewhat more full-bodied in flavor than the white); and grated (this is best for sandwiches). Eighty-five percent of all American tuna is packed in vegetable oil, the remainder in broth.

Do you grate or squeeze citrus fruit first? Grate, because you have the whole fruit to work with rather than a slithery piece. If, however, the recipe calls only for the rind and the fruit is intact, do remember to cover the "naked" fruit well in Saran, a polyethylene bag, or foil so it won't dry out before you get around to using it. Refrigerate, of course.

Should you wash a flour sifter? Not unless you want it to rust. The reason is that it is too intricate a contraption to dry thoroughly. To get rid of the surplus flour, bang it on your worktable or in the sink several times. Then wipe the walls inside and out with a damp cloth.

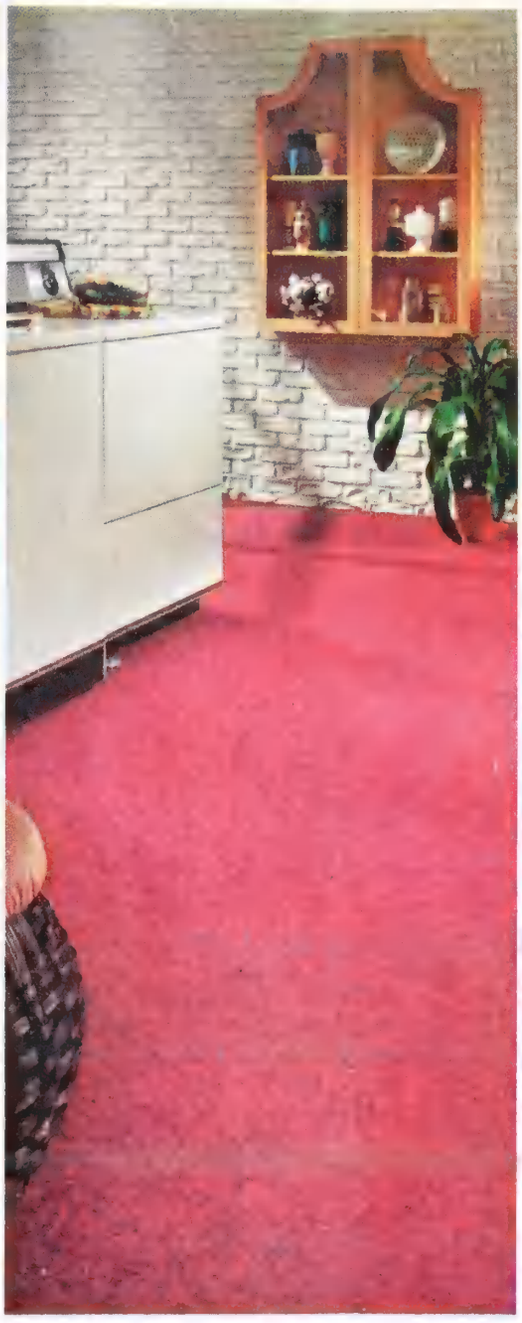
Is there any way to protect the stove and other equipment from the spatter when you fry or sauté? A fine cook of our acquaintance uses shirt boards, which he stands up in what he hopes will be "the line of fire." Although the boards may not catch all the grease, he reports they minimize the problem. Bachelor girls should cultivate boy friends.

Are red pepper and cayenne the same thing? Technically no, although the chances are the container you buy will say "red pepper and cayenne." Red pepper originally was the product of certain varieties of hot, red-colored peppers, while cayenne was a ground blend of small, extremely hot peppers, ranging in color from yellow to red. Today, as evidenced by the packaged product, the traditional distinctions are not always followed. Red pepper and cayenne can be, and are, used interchangeably but the important thing to remember is they are really "piping" hot and should be used with a judicious hand.

Where did the tops of carrots go? They got chopped off, and a good thing, too, because when left on, they continue to live on the carrot root, sapping it of its moisture and causing it to shrivel. If carrots have their tops on, cut them off before storing, and the carrot roots will stay fresh longer.

Why are potatoes sometimes tinged with green? Because they have been "light burned." Potatoes should always be stored away from light, and if the potatoes you see in the market have a green tinge, avoid them like the plague because the texture of the potato will have changed.



What kind of measuring cups do you recommend? Two kinds: the glass cups for measuring liquids and the nests of tin cups with ¼ cup, ⅓ cup, ½ cup, and 1 cup to measure dry ingredients. We also recommend two sets of each for the plain and simple reason there are few things more frustrating than to discover, in the middle of a recipe, the cup you want is standing in the sink with some unwashed dishes.

Do you wear gloves when cooking? No. They are too cumbersome to work with efficiently. To protect your hands, we suggest you keep a good hand lotion right by the sink and try to remember to use it after every washing-up bout. At night, lather your hands with a heavy hand cream, working it in well, then put on paper-thin polyethylene gloves (available in drugstores), which will not only protect your bed linen but warm your hands and hold the cream tight to the skin until as much as possible is absorbed.

How can you remove wine stains from table linen? As soon as possible, soak the stain in hot milk, that has been brought to the boiling point, until the stain disappears enough to be washed out with soap and water. Equally effective on lipstick and berry stains. If this can't be managed soon after the accident, soak the linen in cold water until you can get around to it. If the stain is unusually stubborn, sprinkle with salt and rub with half a lemon. This should do the trick.

Why are boxes of crackers, cereals, potato chips, etc. half-empty when you buy them? Half-empty is an exaggeration. The manufacturers of such foods pack them with the greatest possible care to minimize breakage in transit but, by "the very nature of the beast," they settle in shipping, leaving air spaces at the top of the box. The point to remember is that you pay by weight—not space—and you get every ounce you pay for. The U.S. Government sees to that. ■

From derbies to skullcaps, Andean Indians wear the world's most colorful headgear. A Peruvian collection ornaments the wall of a restaurant, La Calesa, in Lima. Luisa Alvarez Calderón was the decorator.

How to leave home and like it BY MARION GOUGH

(PART II)

In Peru: The Incas' imperial city of Cuzco and the mysteries of Machu Picchu. In Ecuador: Quito, its many layers of mountains and its Indian culture. (The second of two stories on the Andean countries.)

History, of course, indicates otherwise, but in the massive, gray stoniness of Cuzco where, long before the Spaniards, the Incas had moved mountains in masonry to build this capital of the Inca Empire, you feel that the conquest never completely "took." Certainly the noble-featured Incas are still around you, wearing magnificently woven, time-honored ponchos, their handsome hawk faces framed in the ancient cholo, or ear-flap cap, which their ancestors were wearing when gold-hungry Pizarro strangled Atahualpa in 1533. The great central square, the Plaza de Armas, is bordered by the Spaniards' Saracenic arches and wood-grilled galleries, and by their towered churches, baroque, churrigueresque, often piously overblown, overcarved, and overgilded (the typical gilt-on-oil religious paintings of the Colonial Cuzco school are much in demand by collectors and decorators). Surely, this Plaza blazed with the plumes and rang with the steel of conquistadores on parade, but its ancient stones are more likely to call up the strange, gold-emblazoned rites of victory and punishment for which this Inca town square was originally designed.

Walk through the town—and never were stout walking shoes more in order—and you see that the Colonial top crust, splendid as it is, is still overwhelmed by its Inca foundations, giant wedgelike pillows of stone, piled and precisely locked into mammoth dry-built walls by people who did not know the wheel and had no iron or steel. The human effort implied is shocking. You begin to appreciate this as you yourself move a little breathlessly in the thin air nearly 12,000 feet in the sky. One imagines that life for most descendants of those great workmen is not drastically different today. Although the transistor radio and a soft drink called, of all things, Inca-Kola, have arrived on the scene, soap and water seem hard to come by, and there is nothing affluent (Please turn to page 201)

FORECAST!

Invitation to look into the future. The familiar, realizable, immediate future, and the eerier, further-out future that is not unlike a walk in space. You may not like it, but the view is terrific.

The cozier, immediate prospect before us embraces a new close harmony and interplay of beautiful color, the most civilized setting yet for contemporary furnishings, as well as two splendid houses full of significance and inspiration; visits to the phenomenal, new-planned towns that turn the old concepts of Main Street inside out.

In the far-out prophetic category: interviews with a dozen captains of the food industry, revealing their great expectations for the first time; new building developments to make every home a crisp, clean, effortless life center; seating that re-examines materials, acknowledges only the hip and knee joints as a valid design premise; electric music that poses sound against silence, instant houses, instant cities—a future where light, air, sound, space, time, and temperature all are charted, controlled. Everything except, of course, the human spirit.

House Beautiful

FORECAST:

A NEW, SUBTLER COLOR PALETTE

sweet-sharp interplay

The editors of House Beautiful call for an end to the brash, straight-out-of-a-paint-tube monotone as a setting for contemporary décor. Propose a color interplay of charm and subtlety and undoubted sophistication. Elect two short ranges of color: one sweet, one sharp. The "sweet"—all clear, lively, fresh: pink, lilac, sky-blue, vanilla, gold. The "sharp"—pungent accents of citron, ginger, peacock, lettuce-green, and tomato. Foil for these gentle and romantic harmonies—dark wood tones. To demonstrate its prophecy, House Beautiful took an apartment on the 35th floor of New York's United Nations Plaza, engaged Emily Malino as consulting decorator, stained floors, installed tiles, painted, papered, hung chandeliers, and, with lights and cameras, moved in for ten days of shooting. The sitting room, cover and opposite, is perhaps the best example of this gentle, charming new palette. There are 15 feet of window facing south, the river, and the United Nations, and 30 feet of window facing west—a glorious rising of Manhattan—therefore 45 feet of unshaded exposure. Colors should not bounce, reflect, jar. Clue to the scheme that developed: a beautiful rug, essentially pink flowering with mauve and greenish-ivory designs. The fireplace wall, facing the greatest expanse of glass, is U.S. Plywood's English brown oak. The north wall, lilac grass cloth. The sofa and chairs, an almost-avocado. Glass curtains and ceiling, an agreeable vanilla. Pillows and paintings in the whole delicious bouquet of sweet-and-sharp. Against these soft harmonies: the sparkle of crystal-and-steel table, dark polished floor, the ebony beauty of a Venetian secretary, and a fireplace rimmed and faced in Imperial Black marble.

reading the future:

the instant city

Pyramids of tomorrow. A proposal to solve urban overcrowding by making use of the air space over expressways. Not by any means just a designer's dream, the structural capability of "Instant City" has been figured out to the last tetrahedron. Designed by Architect Stanley Tigerman to demonstrate the qualities of vermiculite in lightweight concrete construction and in the fireproofing of structural steel, the plans are under serious examination by several American cities.

Historically, our cities have been founded along major transportation routes; first the waterways and canals, then the railroads. Logically, the cities of our future will spring up along the expressways. Here, in Instant City, is a proposal to satisfy all living and working needs of 5,000 persons in a space no bigger than a city block. Ranging successive units along an expressway would house the population of a small city. Placed at the gateway of our present metropolitan areas, such units would aid relocation of large segments of the city center and allow proper redevelopment of downtown areas.

PHOTOGRAPH OF THE INSTANT CITY MODEL BY BALTAZAR KORAB

Instant City consists of dual pyramidal units, each 600 feet long at the base, meeting at the top, and allowing a width of 450 feet for an expressway through the center. The pyramid shape makes use of only 50 percent of the air space over the expressway, thus allowing dispersal of fumes from the traffic below, one of the major problems in the use of air rights. As shown in the section drawing, far left, each side of the pyramid consists of four major areas: Educational, industrial, and commercial facilities are on the first three floors. Office space takes up floors four through eight. The next 21 floors are devoted to apartments, ranging from efficiency units to duplex four-bedroom ones. The top floors house restaurant and recreational areas, along with the necessary mechanical services for the building. There are direct exits from the expressway into the building, which has four subfloors for parking. Elevators have been replaced by a funicular system.

Thus, Instant City, fabricated of steel and vermiculite concrete, in which tenants can, if they wish, live, work, shop, study, and play without leaving the building.

And with a city become instant, what of our houses and furniture, music and food? On the next eight pages, House Beautiful shows some perspectives on what they might be. Altogether, a portfolio of the future—serious and amusing, astonishing and stimulat houses: the sculptural turn

In seeking greater efficiency—and economy—of structure, man is inevitably led to explore the flowing, voluted forms of Nature's own architecture, where function and form forever exist as one entity, and not a line or an ounce is wasted. The exotic, shell-like buildings shown on these pages are the results of this exploration and are appearing in such places as the Arizona desert and the light-struck lands of antiquity that border the Mediterranean. They are the vanguard of what some designers regard as the wave of the future of residential architecture—the sculptured house.

One of the first to investigate the "miracle of mathematics" that underlies all continuous, curvilinear structural form was the Spanish architect, Antonio Gaudí (1852-1926). His famed, sculpturesque apartment building in Barcelona, the Casa Milá (inset above), was a daring progenitor of our contemporary attempts to bring nature and architecture together in one free-form swoop of abstract, sculptural structure. In Gaudí's time, the traditional materials of brick and rubble—overlaid with cement plaster and bright bits of colored tile—were such stuff as his dreams were made on, and he and his Catalonian workmen painstakingly coaxed their fantastic shapes into being piece by piece.

Today's designers are blessed with twin advantages—the inspiration of Gaudí's consecrated genius and the technical superiority of our great plastic medium, reinforced concrete (though some—like France's André Bloc—have "carved" in the Gaudí tradition with common brick and mortar). And tomorrow? Tomorrow's creators will command the yielding secrets of chemistry's present and future Age of Plastics.

This is only a small probing into what's up in sitting down. Chair design seems to become more and more sculptural, increasingly inventive, often playful. The new pliable materials respond and adapt as never before to the human shape. Kooky, yes, but remarkably comfortable: snuggly places to crawl into (if you are physically able) and hide for a while from a feverish world. Designs so new—some by the most exciting young architects and industrial designers of Europe—they are only now, at press time, finding their way onto the American scene. More ► sound: but is it music?

A small but determined band of restless composers has assumed the mission of extending the frontiers of their art by violent means. In the short span of 20 years, this advance guard has created enough new techniques and esthetics to fill several centuries at the traditional pace of music history. They have immersed their audience in a new wave of unfamiliar sounds, strange sights, new names.

There has always been an avant-garde to carry the banners up craggy paths and wait for the world to catch up. And catch up we always have. Stravinsky, Bartók, and Schönberg, the enfants terribles of half a century ago, are now part of the establishment, as Karlheinz Stockhausen, Nam June Paik, and John Cage may someday become.

There is a difference today, however. The great innovators of the past were content, at least, to work with instruments and voices, as did their conservative colleagues; today's musical inventor seems anxious to begin from Point Zero, in which the very nature of sound itself is laid open to challenge. New instruments are being devised, and the very concept of what constitutes a musical experience is broadening with explosive force.

Mr. Stockhausen, for example, scores a part for a man to climb out of a tub of water and throw small green apples at the audience. Nam June Paik has a lady do a striptease while playing the cello. Lukas Foss's Echoi has, at its climax, a tap on an ashcan lid.

Two French brothers, François and Bernard Baschet, have brought art and technology into the music room via their whole fascinating array of sound-making apparatus, built largely of steel and glass rods attached to resonators. The instruments are exciting to look at, and the range of roaring, twittering, crashing, and crooning sounds they produce opens new horizons.

Harry Partch, one of the older American composers who always seems a little ahead of the established avant-garde, set many of his pieces for instruments inspired by technology—such as (Please turn to page 206)

food: what's on the menu

With the cooperation of some of America's most distinguished food scientists, House Beautiful explores the future of food. The facts will leave you breathless

By HELEN McCULLY

To those of us who grew up in a day when life was bound by the seasons and food marched into our stomachs in planned, orderly succession, even some of the modern convenience foods—good as many of them are today—leave an unfulfilled gap. "Never look back," the saying goes, but we can't help but regret that millions of young people will never know the taste of sweet young peas tender from the pod, a home warm with the smell of baking bread, the perfume of a big kettle of simmering pickles. This was our pattern. It will be no longer.

The future: not just food pills

But there will be compensations, according to the scientists with whom we talked. A cheerful lot, with their sights set high—years ahead—their predictions for the future are so fantastic they leave you breathless. But in the midst of all their head-spinning pictures of the food future, we can thank heaven for a few things that all the practical dreamers in the food world today are agreed on: There will still be a segment of this nation—small, perhaps, but active—who will continue to cook "from scratch" for the sheer love of cooking. An interest in the appearance of food will not have abated but, rather, increased. No matter what, the "romance" of food will continue to exist. And, quoting Dr. Howard E. Bauman, Associate Director of Research for Life Sciences at The Pillsbury Company, "There will be an increase in our already well-developed appetite for what we once called 'exotic' foods." Finally, though this may seem a contradiction, those with whom we talked all said outdoor cooking will become even more important because the whole family can participate. Both Mr. Howard B. Johnson, President of Howard Johnson Company, and Dr. Robert Schaffner, Vice President of Research at Libby, McNeill & Libby, promise we won't be surviving on pills, because "food is fun."

With more leisure, more money, more travel, going hand in hand—and, most important, more people—the food scientists are preoccupied with putting more and more foods into convenient, high-quality form. At the same time, they are facing another major problem: good, adequate nutrition. In another 35 years, the population of the United States will be 360 million, twice what it is today. As Dr. A.D. Odell, Manager, Isolated Protein Program, General Mills, points out: "High-quality protein, that most indispensable of foods, is the crying need. Man's dietary Achilles' heel is the fact that he is totally unable to store excess protein in the body, to be drawn on as needed." The best sources of high-quality protein (and the key word is high-quality) are meat, fish, and poultry, or animal-derived products, such as milk and eggs. Since livestock and poultry are notorious in their inability to convert feed to protein, when compared to field crops, supplements are essential.

With Dr. J.F. Murphy, Vice President in Charge of Product Development, Swift & Co., and most other scientists, Dr. Odell foresees the day when we will "farm the oceans," and he predicts we will eventually be eating, and liking, high-quality proteins made from the crudest of crude oil. General Mills has already developed a high-quality protein, known technically as spun protein, from soy beans. The versatility of these new foods (and they must be thought of as such) are, Dr. Odell reports, ". . . almost unlimited. They can resemble ham, breakfast sausage, frankfurters, chipped beef, luncheon loaves, sliced white meat of chicken, fried chicken, or meat loaf."

But what is ahead? What can we expect to see, to eat, and, hopefully, to savor in the next 35 years?

No more pots and pans

Dr. Murphy, of Swift, predicts ". . . the eventual demise of the pot and pan because packaging will be more efficient and more attractive." He even foresees the day when stoves will have a "well" to handle foods packed in pouches. With Dr. Schaffner, he agrees we will have shelf-stable foods (no refrigeration needed)

in pouches—pot roasts, beef and gravy, frankfurters and beans. Name it and you can probably have it. Just drop the pouch in Dr. Murphy's well, and your dinner is as good as on the table. He anticipates the time when the whole animal, not just the meat, will be utilized for food, emphasizing that this will create new foods that will not be thought of as substitutes.

Fresh meat: delicious extravagance

When Dr. Schaffner of Libby, McNeill & Libby, sits in his handsome office facing the beautiful Art Institute of Chicago, he dreams dreams that often come true. He says, and he speaks for all food scientists, "We can do anything you can think of, if people will pay for it." Production costs are the only real limiting factor. "The high cost of raising cattle and the low returns in edible meat convince me that in another 35 years, fresh meat will be a delicious extravagance. The bulk of the meat we will eat will be canned or frozen." Cryogenic (supercold) freezing is already here. The actual freezing process is measured in seconds. Frozen sliced tomatoes and salad tomato (chunks) are being market-tested as you read this.

Dr. Schaffner tells us there will be more, rather than fewer, products in our supermarkets. As many as 10,000-12,000, against 6,000 today. There will be specialized foods: geriatric foods, teen-age foods. The youngsters of today are the trend setters and as Dr. Bauman, of Pillsbury, says: "They have touched off what might be called an 'acceptance explosion.' "

"There will be more semiprepared foods," Dr. Schaffner declares, "semi because women demand to participate. They feel deprived when all the work is done for them." This is especially interesting in light of a recent article in the Wall Street Journal reporting that Sears Roebuck was getting an increase in calls for their old-fashioned hand ice-cream freezer. Have we come full circle so soon?

Going out: three meals a day

One of the more interesting notions was projected by Dr. Bauman, who said: "New research seems to indicate that people may be healthier and enjoy a more consistent energy level if they eat five to six meals a day instead of overloading their systems with large meals three times. It is entirely possible that this new meal frequency will become common in another 25 years." One wonders if, without a more or less fixed plan, such as we now follow, good nutrition could be managed by "snacking" throughout the day. It would obviously depend on the quality of the snacks and, to a large extent, on the nutrition knowledge of the snacker. Should Dr. Bauman be proved right, it will give rise to a whole new category of snack foods. He suggests: "Some of the nutritional techniques we have learned from feeding astronauts will be useful." They, as we now know, eat bite-size concentrated foods while in orbit (an appropriate balance of fats, carbohydrates, and proteins), which may taste like brownies, meat, chicken, or candy.

The computer in the kitchen

Dr. Bauman must gaze into the same crystal ball as does Robert G. Christie, a Division Research Director of National Dairy Products Corporation. They both foresee microwave ovens in common use by the year 2001. This might be tagged instant "instant cooking," since it reduces cooking time close to zero. "It is now," they both tell us, "technically feasible to computerize home kitchens so that food moves from the freezer to the microwave oven automatically as its time requires." To give you an example, a homemaker might take orders from her dinner guests, push buttons on her kitchen computer, and rejoin her company while the automatic system puts the meat course in for three minutes, adds the vegetables for two minutes, and, at the last minute, completes the meal with a hot dessert. "Such a system," Dr. Bauman continues, "would certainly involve new manufacturing and distribution techniques. Food plants, for example, might change from concentrating on a single group of items to something like very large hotel kitchens, where full menus would be prepared and assembled. Possibly, too, instead of going out shopping, a woman would have a computerized kitchen serviced by a delivery agent who had access to a loading door at the back of the system."

A House by Louis Kahn

A TIMELESS SENSE OF LIGHT AND SPACE

This spacious four-room house of cypress and plastered masonry, one of the rare private works of famed Architect Louis Kahn, stands on a woodsy acre in a Philadelphia suburb. An uncommon design, achieved by an uncompromising application of common sense, it is a quintessential distillation of Mr. Kahn's personal architectural philosophy. His rational obsession with natural light and its effect upon form, and vice versa, is here highly resolved. A study of his solution can illumine our present concepts—and may well influence the future—of American home architecture.

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS OF THIS HOUSE BY EZRA STOLLER

Above: Steps lead down from street level to sheltered entry. Kahn's use of T-shape windows gives privacy and relieves the severity of the street façade, while accomplishing one of his primary missions in architecture—to admit light to interior spaces, and yet "to shelter them from the light." Left: From rear, the structure is totally devoted to catching light and to viewing the parklike landscape, yet both of these functions can be fully controlled by folding wood shutters.

Louis Kahn, long respected as an architect's architect, theorist, and urban planner, is the designer of Yale's Art Gallery, the medical-research laboratories at the University of Pennsylvania, the Salk Institute for Biological Studies at La Jolla, and Bryn Mawr's newest dormitory. Now practicing in Philadelphia and conducting the Master's Class in architecture at the University of Pennsylvania, he is deeply involved [illegible] scale work in East Pakistan and India.

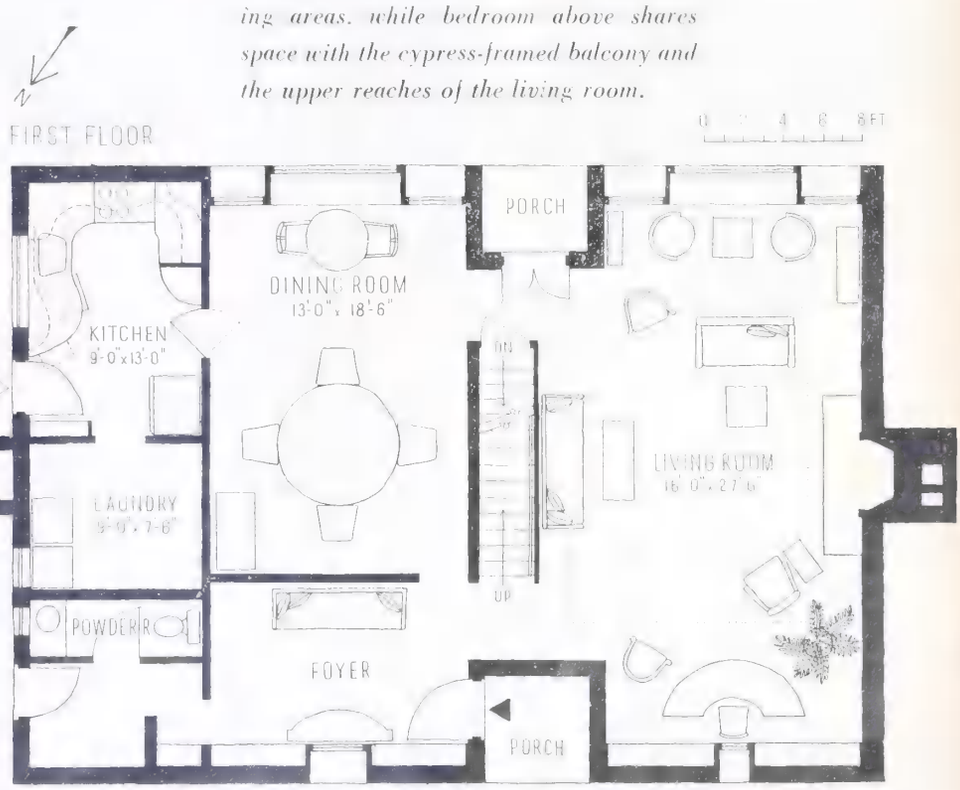
In a dramatic reversal of mien, the back of the house opens freely to the sky, the lawn, and the light, presenting a far different personality, unrestricted by the demands of the street front for an almost tight-lipped privacy. The logic of the plan—traffic to the terrace is controlled by a single doorway—convinces the owners that "wherever you are, you're inclined to be near the place you want to be next."



SECOND FLOOR

DRAWINGS BY MADELAINE THATCHER

Plans of the two floors reveal Kahn's admirable space concept—a blending of spatial luxury and precise function, or, as he puts it, the expression of "served and serving." Lower floor, plan below, observes traditional separation of living and dining areas, while bedroom above shares space with the cypress-framed balcony and the upper reaches of the living room.

Right: Solid plane of fireplace wall is broken by a freestanding, sculpturesque chimney of astonishing simplicity that allows wall behind to be pierced by a window. Inner face of this slender monolith reflects a perpetual pageant of changing light from the transient sun—and moon—into the deepest recesses of the lofty living room, demonstrating Kahn's mastery of architectural light. More ►

Above: Area for two near a dining-room window supplements larger table in center of the room. Antique English table is set with traditional china. Right: In living room, another intimate space for two overlooks the curving brick terrace. Background planting was planned for easy maintenance, year-round foliage. Here the setting is glass, leather, and steel—graceful foils for traditional furniture elsewhere in this house.

Opposite: The living room is for all seasons and is furnished from many periods—a golden-glowed room where simplicity reigns. The pristine fireplace wall—whose only decoration is its single vertical window which "hangs" above the fireplace like an ever-changing painting, reflecting the moods of the passing day and season—contrasts harmoniously with cypress balcony overhead and the ordered busyness of teak bookshelves.

The more one explores this house, the warmer the welcome grows. Critics have admired Kahn's tendency "to bridge the gap between architect and artist," and this is most clearly seen in his ability to juxtapose severe intellectual simplifications with gracious human warmth. He is generous with slabs of oak and teak, slates the bathroom floors, and outfits the kitchen with handcrafted cherry cabinets and copper drainboards—details that fascinate the owners and endlessly delight their eyes and enrich their pleasure in this house. It is a singularly hospitable house, through which sixty or seventy guests can flow at once, equally intrigued by antique furniture and some accoutrements of our own time.

building a house in the

By DAVID X. MANNERS

Tomorrow's house will be more, less, and different. It will be more for the money because machines will produce it. It will be less permanent, for it will be in a fast-changing world where houses must continually change to keep pace. And it will be different. But not unexpectedly different.

To those who recognize portents, the signs are clear. Many of tomorrow's techniques have already been explored. Many of the new materials that will be used already exist. They will only be more and better.

THE STACKED HOUSE

Houses will not be completely replaced by apartments, all signs indicate. A third kind of structure is emerging. It rises vertically, like an apartment, but its quarters are not anonymous cubes. Instead, it consists of individually distinctive houses piled one atop the other. The lot and garden of each are the roofs of other houses below it. Europe has already shown how it can be done, in the work of such architects as Scharoun in Germany and Moretti in Italy. Next year, Canada's World's Fair will show it with the work of Moshe Safdie.

GARDENS, GARDENS EVERYWHERE

Individual houses that do exist on their own land will move both up and down. Underground space has long been recognized as warmer in winter, cooler in summer, quieter always. Now it can become a garden retreat. Under new fluorescents, the basement blooms. Flowers, plants of all kinds, even tomatoes and cucumbers prosper. Indications are that costs and care are less than for a heated greenhouse.

Surfaced with new walk-on plastics, and decorated with durable plastic-upholstered furnishings and outdoor carpeting (see October issue of House Beautiful), roofs too will become gardened living areas. With lightweight, expanded minerals for soil, plants will be automatically watered, with controlling devices that sense moisture demands.

The swimming pool will come indoors under a crystal-faceted dome of plastic in a garden of its own. The pool itself is one assembled from steel panels, surfaced with the silken luxury of vinyl. Its filtering equipment is miniaturized, its cleaning automatic.

MATERIALS TOUCHED BY MAGIC

Lumber, fine hardwoods, will be scarcer. Supplanting lumber will be wood products—veneers, hardboards, flakeboards, particleboards, resin-impregnated fiber materials that can be molded into completed products, like paneled doors.

By such processing, the yield from each tree is increased 30 percent, and the end product is tougher, stronger, more useful. A floor constructed of plank-thick 2′-by-8′ fiberboard panels slides quickly together with tongue-and-groove joints, needs only a pad and carpet for completion. It's a better thermal insulator than wood, and better at stopping sound. Taking wood apart and putting it together into new forms isn't expensive. It's done by automated machinery.

Steel and glass will find increasing use. Steel will be nailed. Instead of a hammer, a gun drives the nails. In structure, steel permits dramatically cantilevered decks and building on sites that have up to now been considered too impossibly rugged and steep. Steel can support an entire house on three points and dispense with an elaborate, expensive foundation. New building spaces will be created by building steel platforms above gorges, rivers, highways, railways.

Light-sensitive glass has been developed. It turns darker in sunlight, functioning as an automatic shade. Another glass, coated invisibly, has increased its insulating qualities against both heat and cold by 50 percent.

PLASTICS COME OF AGE

Plastic siding, windows, shutters, rain-carrying equipment, wallcoverings, and flooring have been joined by plastic bathroom fixtures: basins of lightweight acrylic that gleam like brushed gold; tubs of fiber glass that include enclosing walls in a single seamless unit. Coming: entire bathrooms, with all fixtures cast in a single plastic unit.

Plastic faucet sets will add new color accents. If a crystal ball

metal faucet and fittings are desired, they will not be a solid metal. Gold, chrome, stainless steel will be applied as a coating on plastic. Metal-plated plastics are lighter, less expensive, corrosion-proof.

Liquid marble, newest among plastics, will create fixtures in novel shapes, luxurious new wall treatments, countertops, mantels, fountains, stairways.

Some refrigerators will have doors of opaque plastic. A touch on the door handle will illuminate the interior, making the plastic transparent, so the contents can be seen without opening the door. A similar technique will make possible see-through drawer fronts on storage cabinets. Even cooking utensils and bakeware will be made of plastic. The first items made of this new heat-resisting plastic are now appearing on the market.

HOME-MADE ELECTRICITY

The fuel cell will give 1975's house an alternate source of electricity, free it of dependence on power lines. The cell has no moving parts, silently produces electricity by burning natural gas. It produces electricity for under one cent per kilowatt, less than half its present usual cost, and as a bonus provides unlimited domestic hot water. Electricity from atomic energy will come to the house by underground cable. It will be cheaper, too.

Electricity, whatever its source, will be used for "heating with light." The light bulb is an almost perfect converter of electricity into heat. In tomorrow's better-lighted house, the heat released by lighting fixtures will supply most or all of the heat needed for comfort. Heating, lighting, and air conditioning will be a single service.

Here's the way it works: Room air flowing over the recessed lighting fixtures will pick up their heat, and will then be distributed where needed. Light will become a free by-product, and except for sleeping areas the entire house will be as conveniently illuminated at night as by day. It is a system already in use in many commercial buildings. Chicago's giant new John Hancock tower will be entirely heated with light.

Lighting will literally be more flexible. Plastic fibers are now available which will transmit light exactly where it is needed, in the same way a pipe carries water. From a source light, remotely located, these new flexible light guides will illuminate drawers, the clock on the wall, the name plate at the door, each step of the staircase, or ornamentally uplight a shelf.

NO DRAFTS, NO DUST

It will be a cleaner, more comfortable house. New "positive pressure" technique will raise the air pressure in the house slightly above what it is outside. This will keep outside air from leaking in through window or door cracks. If there is any leakage, it will be from the inside out.

With positive pressure, when the house door is opened, no dust-bearing breeze can sweep in or create a draft. Any movement of air is toward the outdoors. Borrowed from the "white room" technique of space science where absolute cleanliness is essential, the positive-pressure system offers important advantages in home application, and installations are already being made.

MINIATURE AND AUTOMATIC

New miniaturization techniques, such as I.C. (integrated circuits) indicate that six-pack TV may be just around the corner. Multiple miniature TV sets, monitoring major channels, will make it possible to see at a glance what programs are available. Any selected picture can then be projected on the wall for easy viewing.

Tapes will rival books. An audio-visual cookbook will show and tell recipes on a compact viewer set on the kitchen counter. The same kind of device will project tapes for home study and entertainment. Automatic is the word. The moment the first flakes fall, snow detectors will start electric melting cables warming on steps, walks, driveway, and runway (for the gyro).

At voice command, lights will come on, doors open, or coffee pots start perking. It is just a matter of wiring the devices to new sound-operated switches. If you wish, the command can be given by telephone. Shopping, on the other hand, will be possible without speaking a word. Pushbuttons of "touch-tone" telephones will link every home to a new automatic shopping system. In this technique, purchases will be made by calling the computer at the store and pressing buttons to indicate quantities and catalog numbers. It is a system already in use

Moonlight in a capsule. Low voltages and tiny bulbs, the catalysts for creating an entire new family of miniaturized lighting. Shown above, across both pages, fixtures in this new petite styling, by Hadco, Littlestown, Pa. (For scale, see the standard 100-watt bulb, far right.) Reminiscent of lights in planes, their low-key effects give a range never before achieved. Used in combination with dimmers, they can put light in any quantity, from candleglow to sunburst, exactly where wanted, the source eloquently inconspicuous. They offer the ultimate in safety. Their 12 volts, produced by use of a special transformer, won't shock, and their tiny wires (codes permitting) are easily concealed, a big plus in remodeling. They can be used in combination with existing standard-size fixtures, as a contrast.

Lighting's brilliant technological breakthroughs:

BEN ROSE

sun dazzle

And the sun at night. By using special vapors inside bulbs, two, three, five times as much light can now be extracted from electricity, and it is light of unprecedented brilliance. One new bulb, the "Lucalox," with pencil-thin source four inches long, produces the same amount of light as fluorescent tubing 50 feet long. Mounted on towers, another new type, the "Xenon," could bring 24-hour daylight to our cities. A single tower could illuminate 100 acres of park. Sylvania Electric has incorporated the tiny new 250-watt "I.Q." bulb into prototype fixtures, below, to demonstrate how such brighter light sources can be adapted to home use. The fixtures are unveiled here for the first time. Compactness of bulb opens way for many new designs. The standard bulb again, lower right, for scale.

vroom! a vacation house

Add modern materials to machine-age techniques and the result: a weekender accomplished in a week end. The almost-instantly-put-together vacation house.

Designed for U.S. Rubber Company to demonstrate fast, low-cost construction, each of the prefab pavilions shown here measures 16′ square and has a balcony for extra sleepers, added storage. Both include kitchen and bath. For minimal care, vinyl materials and epoxy finishes are used throughout.

Both the tepee (soon available) and the gazebo (ready now) are designed to sell complete, but unfurnished, for about $5,000.

SKYLIGHTED TEPEE

Early American wigwams inspired this metal-poled country house, 1966 style. Its funnel shape speeds breezes through, keeps it comfortably airy. Balcony, above, located over kitchen-dining area, accommodates two, includes built-in storage-divider and wall closets. Roof-wall is of insulating panels, with interior surface of vinyl. All upholstery material is vinyl fabric. Carpeting is of plastic fiber. Sliding panel doors open living-dining area, left, to outdoor carpeted decks. Sofa faces wood-burning corner fireplace. Compact kitchenette disappears behind roll-top door. Bathroom is to its left. Ving Smith, designer.

AN INGENIOUS GAZEBO

Slopes are no problem to this clever cottage. Adjustable steel "feet" level it on any site. Its walls, floor, and roof are of honeycomb panels joined by aluminum channels. The swing-up shutters that shade the windows shut down to secure them when the owner is away. The living area, left, has yellow, off-white, and green scheme, achieved largely in moisture-resisting, soil-resisting vinyls—an especially happy choice here, where gazebo adjoins swimming pool and its bathroom has been converted into a sauna. House sleeps up to eight. The table area, below, opens to carpeted deck. Shades are of woven wood. Floor is vinyl in bamboo pattern. Gazebo available from American Panel Fabricators, Charlotte, N.C.

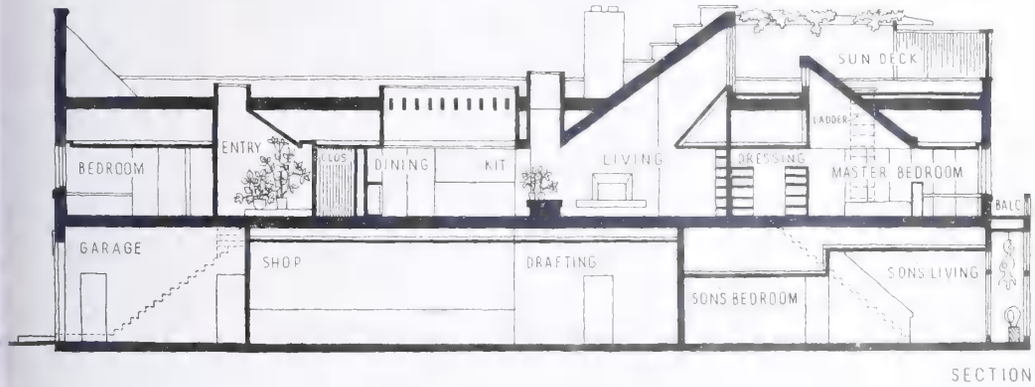
POINTING A WAY TO TOMORROW



Almost impossible to get, in great cities, a thoroughly modern house with individual charm and total privacy. But it can be done. How? Start with the unpromising, apply imagination and expertise, as exemplified on these and the following two pages. Having decided to move his family—its requirements diminished by the marriage of his eldest son and daughter—from a Westchester house back to Manhattan, J. Gordon Lippincott, of the industrial design firm of Lippincott and Margulies, bought a 19th-century carriage house on an 18′-by-100′ lot hedged in by taller structures. In its favor: an oddly pleasing façade; the location, on a side street in the old Gramercy Park district. To turn this dismal building into an ample, sunlit, contemporary home for a family of five, the Lippincotts called on their son-in-law, Architectural Designer Kenneth MacKenzie. His overall plan: to put a garage at the front of the ground floor and divide the rest into living quarters and a sculpture workshop for 18-year-old Steven, a student at Cooper Union; to transform the second story into a three-bedroom house complete in itself. More overleaf.

The problems faced by Designer MacKenzie in the old carriage house were complicated by its long, narrow shape. The monotony of a dark hundred-foot stretch at one level was dispelled by varying and slanting the ceiling heights, introducing several tiled platforms, bringing in an amazing amount of natural light via skylights and clerestory windows. Artificial light is provided by recessed and semi-recessed fixtures, dimmers, and Italian glass hanging lamps for changing intensities. Completely air-conditioned year-round and equipped with an electrostatic filter, the old house has been transported from yesterday into tomorrow, sealed against dirt, insured for comfort. Important to its delightful new state, the color plan worked out by Caroline Lippincott MacKenzie with her painter's flair for choosing fresh and effective tonalities. Many of the colors, as it happens, in the prophetic palette shown on pages 150-159.

A kitchen in fact, not in fancy

This kitchen in the William Ward Beecher townhouse replaced a dark, drab, and poorly equipped kitchen, redecorated, surprisingly, only ten years ago. Planned by Lorie Beecher with Decorator Penny Hallock Lehman, it is now geared primarily to the enormous appetites and gregarious social habits of three teen-age sons and a ten-year-old daughter. Vinyl wallcovering, "Trivet," from Gibson's Designer Series, is repeated in matching, removable panels on the new refrigerator and freezer, minimizing the usual bulky look of large appliances. The panels may be changed at any time to suit new family needs or Mrs. Beecher's own whim. The previous dreary lighting was replaced by newly developed, full-spectrum fluorescent bulbs in a luminous ceiling that operates on dimmers. The room is flooded with what approximates daylight—hard to come by in this first-floor, rear room. New also, all with the young in mind: an automatic icemaker and, lest an experimental teen-age cook's attention be diverted, a gas range with double ovens whose automatic controls are easily set to assume full responsibility.

The Bright New Promise of the brand new towns

Editor: CARROLL C. CALKINS

The New Town is here. More than twenty are being built from coast to coast—dozens more planned. Here's an up-to-date report on this encouraging phenomenon

Every town has had a plan—of sorts. But the places are few where the planners' visionary pageant has prevailed over the malevolent furies that are always standing in the wings. In Italy, Ferrara is still admired for the logic of its 15th-century plan by Braggio Rossetti. Houssmann's Parisian boulevards have become the very models of grandeur. In Washington, D. C., the magnificence of L'Enfant's conceptions are far from lost. The green parks of Philadelphia are tribute to the perspicacity of William Penn, and the splendor of Chicago's shoreline owes much to the early plans of Daniel Burnham. There are other successes, but not enough of them. In most cities the urgent needs of today—and yesterday—have all but overwhelmed any meaningful programs for tomorrow.

No wonder there's such yearning for a fresh new start. No wonder a few brave souls have gone forth into the wilderness to create completely new towns. They are spending millions upon millions in the name of beauty and order, and the hope of fame and profit. If the New Towns of America are as successful as we think they will be, their creators will be the heroes of our times. They have taken to heart the advice of Daniel Burnham: "Make no little plans; they have no power to stir men's blood." Early evidence of the foresight of this new breed of builders is now at hand:

- A Sunday sailor can dock his boat at the door of an art gallery at Reston, Virginia, and walk across the square to buy a loaf of bread. On Monday the family car may stay in the garage. The New Town's industrial program is opening up new jobs within walking distance of the golf course. Commuting to the city is a choice, not a necessity.
- Those who work for the growing number of companies at Sterling Forest, New York, can have a sail and swim in the lake after work, enjoy dinner at home, and easily make the 8:30 curtain at the Sterling Forest Amphitheatre. Those who commute to New York can still make the show after dinner.
- A golfer living in The Bluffs, one of the first new communities in the master plan of the vast Irvine Ranch in Southern California, can step out of his patio and practice chip shots on the (Please turn to page 208)

On the following six pages: A close-up look at three of the New Towns and what it's like to live in a community that was barely there last year city living in the country

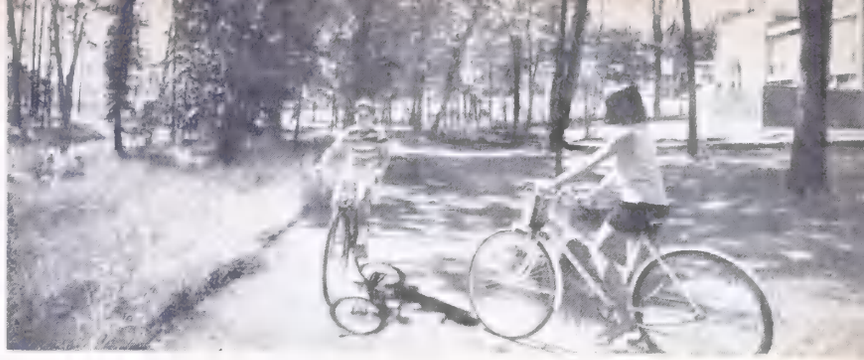
Although less than 20 miles from the Pentagon, Reston is planned with a firm resolve of becoming a place in its own right—and is well on its way. There will be seven villages here, and a central downtown area to serve them all. The eventual population will be near 80,000, about half of whom will work in town—an industrial park is a vital part of the whole—and many of the others will commute to Washington.



In talking to early Restonians about the way of life in a New Town, enthusiasm was nearly unanimous. An active grandmother says: "There's an air of calm, quiet, and order, but it's never dull." Others comment: "We love to walk, and find ourselves on foot more than ever. You'd be surprised how pleasant and easy it is to know the people who walk the same paths." "It's hard to believe, but here, in a house that cost $24,000, we have many accoutrements of wealth—swimming, tennis, riding, and open land in a country setting."

A minister assigned here by his church says this: "I was afraid there might be too many conformists in a 'planned community,' but the opposite is true. This is a group of strong-minded people who get things done."

Another man says: "It's a sociable place and there's lots to do, but privacy is respected. People don't just drop in on you." And, from a much-traveled career man in the Pentagon: "This place, I think, is the wave of the future. People who come and see what we have here are overwhelmed."

1. The high-rise apartment at the edge of Lake Anne is the dramatic evidence of urban living here in the wooded hills. The brick-paved plaza is surrounded by stores with apartments above, in the classic tradition of the city.

2. This open land belongs to the 90 families that make up a "cluster" of attached homes in Lake Anne Village. Auto traffic is on the outside perimeter. Paths are reserved for bikes and pedestrians.

3. This is Golf Course Island, a clutch of "townhouses" strategically set on Reston's public course. These seven are the first of 400 houses and apartments.

4. The obvious comparison is Venice. The lake is for swimming, sailing, and (sometimes) ice-skating. The high-rise apartment (as an aid to orientation) is just to the right out of the picture.

5. This handsome fountain in the plaza was designed by Sculptor Gonzalo Fonseca for children to play in—it's an obvious success.

6. One of the areas for "separate housing," where single-family homes can be built. The management exercises some controls to maintain the woodsy character of the sites.

A New Metropolis: Irvine Ranch, California planned for 500,000 people

On the land of the Irvine Ranch, some 86,000 acres, south of Los Angeles, there will rise a full-fledged metropolis under the beneficent control of the most comprehensive New Town plan of our time. Industry, shopping, schools, and churches, along with a series of separate but related communities, will evolve with steady purpose and not destroy themselves in the process.

The pictures here are from two new communities, as are the following quotations: "Our children love the freedom," says the wife of a sales representative, "to run with the dog, play ball, and swim. They step out the front door, and they're in a park where they play for hours without going near a street." "We enjoy the life around the swimming pool. It's like a resort; we use it all the year around and never have to worry about the maintenance." "The paths through the greenbelts are so inviting that my husband and I bought bicycles—and we use them. We would never have done this back in town." "The children walk to school, and we aren't chauffeurs."

And a builder's consultant says: "I like the people who like the same place I chose to live. Even so, it's a heterogeneous community; wouldn't have it any other way."

The Manager of Planning for the Irvine Company sums up their design philosophy this way: "Eastbluff is the forerunner of all the planned communities on the ranch. We're creating a life-cycle neighborhood, family homes, clusters, apartments—a vital, interesting place."

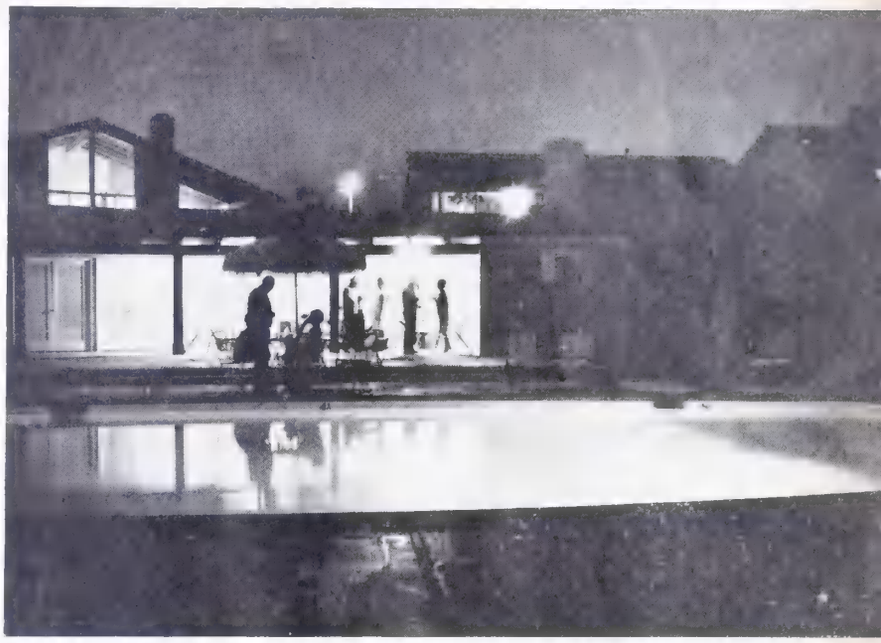
1. The greenbelt through the rolling hills in Eastbluff is an informal serpentine park with bicycle paths and a pitch-and-putt golf course—and a lovely outlook for the adjacent houses. As the many trees mature, it will become a large, shady retreat from the California sun.

2. and 3. In University Village, which is being built around a new branch of the University of California, the community tennis courts and swimming pool flank the handsome recreation center.



4. The swimming pool and cabaña is one of four used by the 450 families who live in the cluster homes, such as those shown on the facing page. One monthly fee covers maintenance of all the grounds, including the pool. Private poolside parties can be arranged for the evening hours by reservation.

5. This is one of the imaginative playgrounds that will be a part of every neighborhood in University Village. Here, too, a veritable forest of trees assures a cool green future.

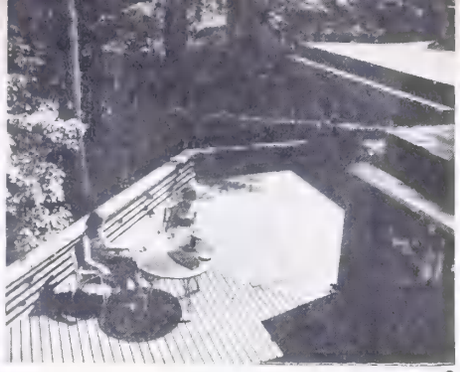
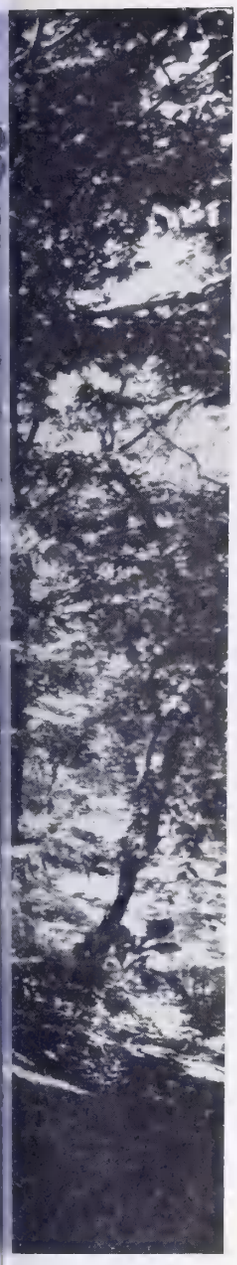
40 miles from times square

Still best known for its gardens—a 125-acre horticultural show place—Sterling Forest is, in fact, planned to become a New Town. The gardens established the place. Now, on the surrounding 30 square miles, the town is building. The projected population: 20,000.



There are already five residential areas (some with apartments), a New York University complex, some corporation research centers, and an industrial park. The next phase is a "village" shopping center to serve the residents and the tourists who come to the gardens. The pioneers now do their shopping in nearby towns, but this doesn't dampen their enthusiasm for Sterling Forest.

An electrical engineer, "an escapee from a Long Island development," says: "We're happy to have our kids growing up close to nature, here among the rocks and trees." The wife of another engineer likes the fact that it's "a planned community where the planning isn't obvious." A New York stage designer built a house here "because we could get privacy on less than an acre of land."



Other residents had these thoughts: "We're all individualists, but the school issue—a vote on consolidation—has given us a sense of community, which is good." "We love living in the woods, and the informality of our new house has changed our way of life. We find it exciting to be part of a new community and have a hand in its development." And, from the wife of the gardens' horticulturalist: "It's country living, but my husband can come home for lunch."

1. and 2. The home of the Richard Huffs shows the degree to which people are encouraged to maintain the trees and natural rock formations in Sterling Forest. An architectural control board must approve house plans and site plans, and trees cannot be cut without permission. House designed by Architect Charles Winter.

3. The Holger Nissens bought this lot for their house—also designed by Charles Winter—because it adjoins the Palisades Interstate Park and gives them, in effect, a backyard of about 70 square miles.

4. The homes on Sterling Lake are required to be set back from the lake front, and few trees can be removed. This does not limit the outlook, as seen here, but effectively preserves the wooded shoreline.

5. The street fronts are also protected. If the trees bordering this road were removed, you would be able to see a dozen houses from this spot.

6. and 7. This playground and restaurant are two of the facilities in Sterling Forest Gardens. The residents of Sterling Forest have season passes for the gardens. Many families use them often for themselves and friends, and think of this as a "city park," the likes of which few cities in this country have to offer.

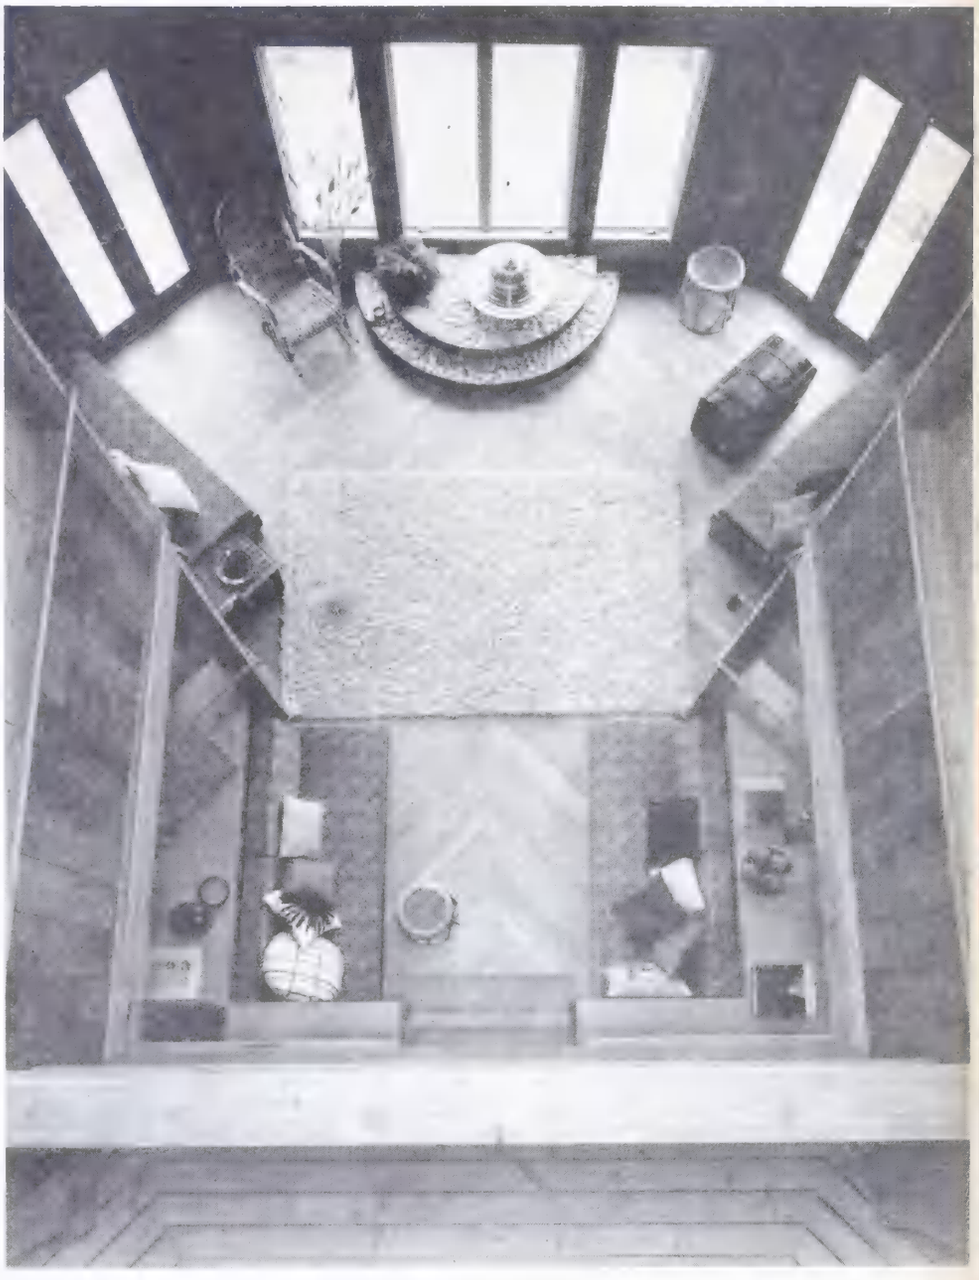
FORESIGHTED HOUSE: THE HIGH OCTAGON



ALL PHOTOGRAPHS OF THIS HOUSE BY NORMAN McGRATH

A view of the two-stories-tall living room, right, looking toward the main entrance and its over-panel of old stained glass. The banquettes in the foreground are two of many built-ins for sitting or sleeping. On the second floor, bedrooms face-to-face across the upper reaches of the living room have long shutters to leave open, as shown, for house-wide ventilation, or to close for privacy. Each of these bedrooms has its own balcony. Dome skylight brings sun to both floors, can be opened from sky deck to release heat. See plans, page 200.

Looking forward to a holiday and weekend retreat where he could enjoy sun, salt air, simplified living, Architect Earl Burns Combs designed his Fire Island beach house, opposite, as an octagon, a wind-resistant non-cliché shape offering varied views of the land side and the Atlantic Ocean. Adding a freehand functional grace to the strictly geometric silhouette, a well-planned ramble of outer stairs, balconies, sundecks. Indoors, a wonderful feeling of openness and ease, and the pleasant, suitably informal look of natural woods. The interior walls, like the exterior, redwood; for most floors, fir, in herringbone pattern, with cork to hush the heavy traffic areas. Here and there, special arrangements for reducing wear and tear on house and humans—some, fresh forms of the familiar; others, innovations worth borrowing. More overleaf.

Two more views of the living room, where the play of natural woods gives an unusual pattern-on-pattern effect. The half-moon platforms in front of the windows, right, are covered with pebbles and topped by a brazier ready to warm a cool evening. in this society, although national efforts are being made to improve it, sometimes with U.S. cooperation. The Peace Corps is happily distinguishing itself and doing its country proud.

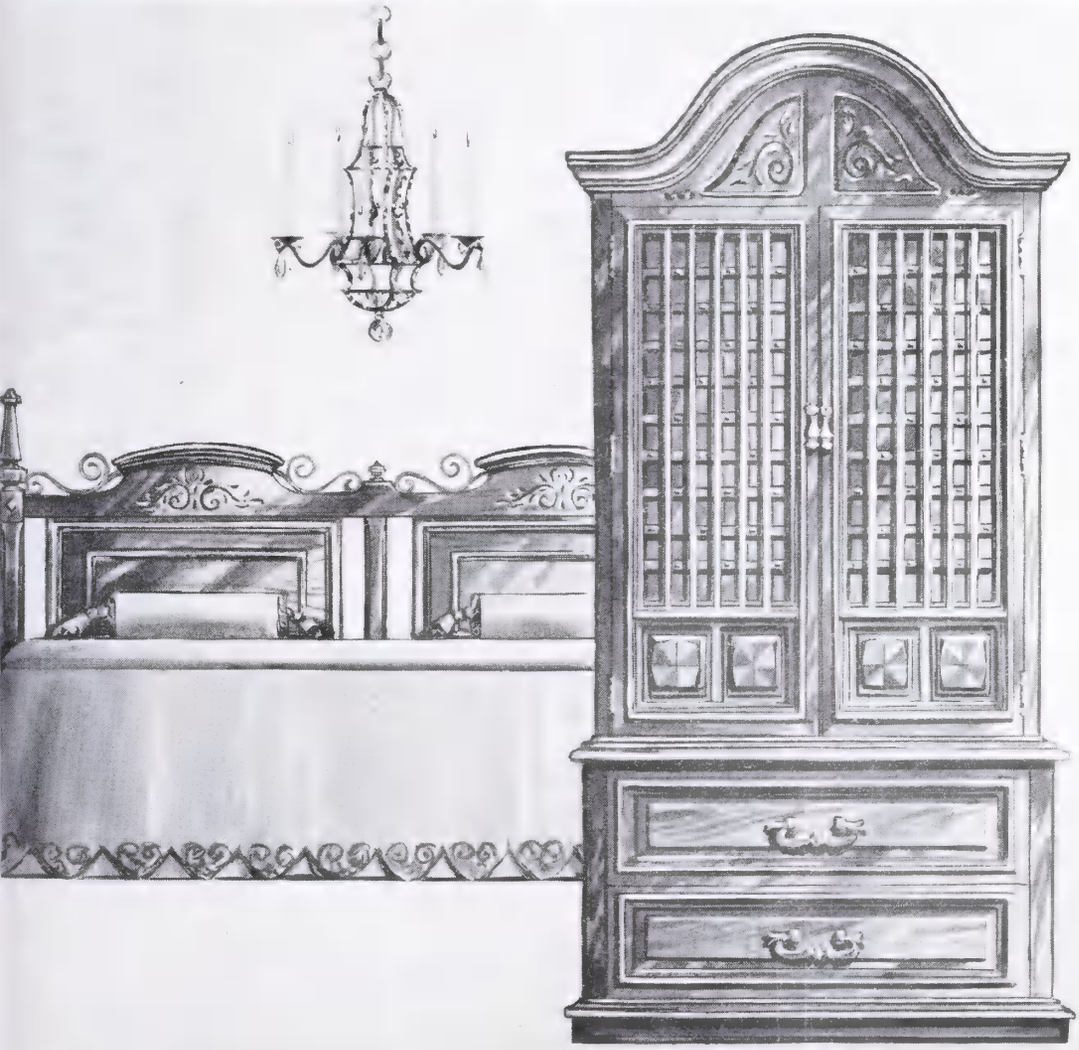
Over the years Mother Nature has endowed the Inca descendants with at least two aids to living in these mountain aeries: a greater lung capacity than most of us have, and the llama, that independent, camel-like creature, the only beast of burden that can operate in such heights. The llama's relatives, in ascending order of aristocracy, quality, and price, are the alpaca, guanaco, and the vicuña, all fast becoming scarce. Dismiss the urge to acquire vicuña fur or cloth here. It's illegal.

Perfectly legal and highly desirable are the woven ponchos, bags, the intricately knitted caps and sweaters, the rugs and hangings of llama and alpaca wool in the Cuzco market place, which goes at a lively clip on Sunday. Visit also the shop of Frederico Alarco, who with great selectivity recognizes the sophistication of much native craft and has acquired a good stock of it, including some past-century outsize spoonlike poncho pins and mystical ornaments in silver, which are an odd mixture of inherited Indian design and Colonial Catholic symbolism.

To get the full impact of the Incas and their works, it is the wont of tourists to travel from Cuzco to the mysterious terrace-city of Machu Picchu, apparently a place of sanctuary for women and children. We made our Machu Picchu trip by electric train in the chill of an early Cuzco morning.

Machu Picchu itself was built on a needle peak of land 1,000 feet high, as "lost" in a sea of green mountains as a sanctuary could get, and now is attainable after a zigzag trip by bus. Its towering orderliness, its size, and precise monumental terracing are so high in the world on such steep slopes that they are revealed to you even as you stand within the ruined city. It is a splendid, almost incredible sight to look at, and the most earnest of travelers insist it must certainly be viewed in the dawn's earliest light. This presupposes a night's stay at the good little hotel that borders the ruins and where we had lunch after sight-seeing. But whenever your visit is, you must climb the town's stair-flight streets and stand within the gabled stone houses, once roofed in thatch—meaning, be ready to hike and clamber as comfortably as possible.



Our Machu Picchu visit was carefully planned for a Saturday, so that instead of going back directly to Cuzco, we left the return train at Pachar, drove ten kilometers to Urubamba to spend the night at the pleasant little government hotel there, where you find a swimming pool, a rose garden, the manager's own museum of Inca relics, and a llama on the lawn. (Peru's government-run hotels are in process of refurbishing.) Then, starting out early on Sunday morning, we drove through Inca country—now a fruit-growing region—stopping off to see Inca fortress ruins in Ollantaytambo, and then went on to the weekly Sunday market and the alcaldes' Mass at Pisac. For picturesque color and for the quality of the woven ponchos and rugs generously spread about the village square, Pisac is a major Indian market. The language here is Quechua, as spoken by the Incas, and a spoken language only, so that signs and symbols are used in communication. Along the 40 miles back to Cuzco, the beribboned poles and flowers decorating roadside houses are trade signs: white flowers on the eaves announce bread is baked within; red-flowered trimmings say that here's a stop for chicha, the corn liquor of the Indians since long ere the Incas.

Before a Peruvian journey, we'd put down as required background reading Prescott's Conquest of Peru. Monetary unit here is the sole, one sole worth about four U.S. cents. For travel information: Peruvian Consulate General, 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York.

nos gleam suddenly through the clouds, making you doubt your eyes. Just the views from the government-run, slickly modern Hotel Quito alone are enough to make a northern visitor realize what an amazingly beautiful and not very well publicized country this is. It is reputed to have a growing population of retirees from other lands—and no wonder.

To get the flavor of the old town, you must walk through the narrow cobbled streets, out into its open Plaza de Independencia, where there are Sunday-morning band concerts in the old Spanish-American manner, or through Quito's great park of trees. There are at least six extraordinary colonial churches to visit, notably La Compañia, built, as all of these were, by the local Indians under Spanish auspices, a blend of Spanish ecclesiastical tradition with native Indian creativity. San Francisco and the Quito Cathedral are also repositories of Colonial art.

A mile or so outside of town, deep in one of Quito's many sudden valleys, is the town church of Guápulo, charmingly baroque, once the center of a 17th-century school of Quito art and still the church of a Franciscan boys' school. Its woodwork is splendid, although a fire destroyed its golden, corbeled ceiling. You may actually see what the ceiling looked like when you visit the contemporary gallery, Villa Gloria, of Señora Luce de Perón, in an elegant past-century townhouse in residential Quito. Its former owners openhandedly had the church ceiling copied and installed in their dining room. The gallery, where you can find Colonial pieces of art and furniture, as well as modern abstractions, is a reminder that art is vital among present-day Ecuadorians. Señora de Perón, a gifted designer herself, purveys modern silver jewelry, candelabras, and picture frames of Ecuador's native balsa wood, to the U.S. market through Vivian Burns, whose import office is at 120 Second Street, San Francisco 94105. Collectors of modern art are reminded that they are in the country of some internationally hailed modern artists such as Asivaldo Guayasamín, Eduardo Kingman Villacis, and Germania de Breilh.

Also in Quito is a studio of Ecuadorian arts and crafts, old, new, traditional, and primitive, operated by Olga Anhalzer Fisch, whose paintings and hand-woven rugs have given her international prestige. The shop is called Folklore, at 260 Avenida Colón, and you will find here a splendid, assortment of bona-fide pre-Columbian artifacts, Colonial ecclesiastical art and examples of native Indian skills. These include really great hand-woven rugs, the fine-woven straw hats erroneously called "Panama," marvelously embroidered wool receiving blankets, some lovingly sequined, the hand-woven, brushed wool of the highlands, called bayeta, bread dolls, which are charming colored amusements proving that cookie-making is a fine art in the Andes.

All the Andeans seem to be fantastic candlemakers, indulging in marvelous, colorful flights of fancy to produce their fiesta tapers, but the Ecuadorians have a corner on ruffling and gilding beeswax until their candles can look sheer as a tissue of silk and rococo as wedding cakes. They can be transported, if they're carefully packed and carefully carried, and make lovely souvenirs.

Outside of Quito

At the advice of old hands, Ecuador deserves at least a week of a traveler's time, long enough to take you out of Quito to the high-country market towns where the crafts are pursued, north by car to the wood carvers of San Antonio Ibarra and to Otavalo, where the men wear blue ponchos and pigtails and the women's necks are layered in gold beads. (The Hotel Quito maids are similarly dressed.) South of Quito is Ambato, famous for its rugs and its 6 A.M. Monday-morning market, worth leaving Quito at 3 A.M. and a three-hour ride on a rough road. Farther south is Riobamba, home of the brushed-wool bayeta cloth. In Calderon, near Quito, you can meet that very special group of ladies who bake the muñetas de pan, or bread dolls, nice to hang on your Christmas tree and now in shops in the U.S., imported and distributed by Vivian Burns. Trips to those crafts towns and others such as Saquisili, Latacunga, and Sangolqui, are arranged by Metropolitan Touring of Quito.

Quito is the last place you'd expect gemütlichkeit—but it's there, in the Hotel Colon, run by Herr Deller formerly of Munich. Its restaurant is continental and excellent. A sign of cosmopolitan times in Quito is Los Jarros, a new restaurant, its design and tableware the work of Luce de Perón, its menu Norto Americano.

Ecuadorian food leans toward the sea, with shrimp and tiny oysters considered delicacies. A national dish is the fish stew called fanesca, which friends exchange with each other during Holy Week. Tropical fruits—bananas, papayas, melons—are fine, and the naranjilla, a fruity curiosity which tastes like peaches, pineapple, and strawberries all at once, makes an ambrosial juice.

The monetary unit of Ecuador is the sucre, worth about five-and-a half-cents U.S.A. In all Andean countries, passport and smallpox vaccination certificate are required, and it's good precautionary tactics to take the usual shots recommended if not demanded—typhoid, typhus, cholera, gamma globulin. Plentiful good water. Water will be better-tasting and more wholesome. Water forced through a plastic membrane under pressure leaves all its impurities behind. A new appliance employs this "reverse osmosis" technique to produce water of bottled quality. It even takes the salt out of brackish water. The appliance can be bought or rented and not only eliminates the inconvenience of having water delivered but also lowers its cost.

Automatic atmosphere. A new kind of automatic dispenser puts a long-suspension type of spray into the atmosphere at timed intervals. One kind of spray attracts the microscopic particles that cause smoking, food, and other odors and chemically destroys them. It has no odor of its own, no masking scent.

The electronic watchdog. A little black box will telephone the police if the house is broken into. It will call the fire department if it smells smoke or senses flames. It will also notify neighbors. No special telephone line is needed. The device connects to any existing system. It delivers a tape-recorded message telling the nature of the trouble and giving the location of the house, repeating over and over.

Many of the products and devices mentioned in this article are already available. Others exist only in prototype or are in developmental stage. Further information may be obtained from the following:

exactly some of Mr. Christie's projections, for he sees the day when sophisticated "grocers" will present menus planned by staff dietitians designed to encompass the tastes of all members of a family, from babies to grandparents. A month's menus at a fixed figure would be delivered to the loading door of the freezer in the home, so situated it would not disturb the family.

Hard cooked eggs this way

And how do you want them, madame, in or out of the shell? Dr. L. A. Wilhelm, President of Poultry and Egg National Board, says: "A commercial process is now available which cooks a core of egg yolk and a cylinder of egg white separately, then inserts the yolk inside the white." We may have lost nature's most perfect package, gaining an impersonal tube of egg that gives a perfectly round slice. Currently being sold for institutional use, Dr. Wilhelm forecasts that the egg, wrapped in film, with a shelf life of two to three weeks, will eventually be available to the consumer. He also predicts hard-cooked eggs in the shell, and pasteurized, homogenized liquid whole eggs in pints and quarts. Under refrigeration, in a sealed container, with a pouring spout on the bottom, liquid eggs will keep up to three months.

The familiar chicken wing has recently been seduced by a machine that automatically removes the wing tip, strips the meat from the second joint, folds it back over the first joint, breads it, binds it, and places it on a belt or pan ready for the freezer. Soy bean "poultry" and "meat," hamburger made of turkey gizzard, and hamburger that tastes like chicken are all in your future, Dr. Wilhelm promises.

No food pills

This is the cheering news from Mr. Howard B. Johnson, President of Howard Johnson Co. In his opinion the appearance of food will be more meaningful by the year 2001, because people will be better educated, more traveled, and therefore more demanding. He agrees with Dr. Bauman and Dr. Wilhelm that there will be more exotic foods. Chicken Kiev, for example, is already in the Howard Johnson line, as are Beef Burgundy, Seafood Thermidor, and Boeuf à la Deutsch. In 35 years, Mr. Johnson says, his 2,500 restaurants could be serving 750,000,000 people a year, or every man, woman and child in the United States—twice!

What looks like a green hockey puck?

It's freeze-dried cabbage which, when combined with water, blooms into three quarts of bright green cabbage leaves. This is Dr. Bauman's imaginative description of the freeze-drying process. What exactly is freeze drying? Mr. Kermit Bird of the U.S. Department of Agriculture illustrates it, graphically, in terms of the clothes line. "In the North, in winter, housewives hang their laundry outside to dry. If below-freezing temperatures exist, their sheets and shirts freeze and get stiff as boards. Later, as wind blows through them, the ice crystals transform to water vapor. There has been no dripping or melting. After the laundry dries, they still look hard and frozen, but actually are now soft and porous. This same process happens to freeze-dried foods. When the ice has disappeared, the foods are left spongelike and porous and look somewhat like the initial frozen products, in shape and size, but weigh much less (they contain only two percent water), are so dry as to be brittle, and are somewhat lighter in color. This returns to normal when rehydrated in liquid."

Although freeze-drying is one of the newer methods of preserving foods, it is much more costly than other freezing processes—five times more—which has been an obvious deterrent to wider use. However, there are a limited number of freeze-dried products available: cereals packed with freeze-dried fruits which are "refreshed" when combined with milk; shrimp and crab (at this time available only in restaurants), which are said to be better than frozen and almost as good as fresh; and a number of meat items, primarily for campers. General Foods is currently test-marketing Maxim, a new freeze-dried instant coffee, which has an improved flavor but is more expensive than regular instant coffee. One of the great advantages to freeze-dried foods is they do not need refrigeration. In general, they will keep as long as two years without spoiling.

Freeze-dried ice cream: Already proved by Dr. Murphy in Swift's laboratories, it will be available in the foreseeable future, according to Dr. Frank V. Kosikowski, Professor of Food Science at Cornell's College of Agriculture. He says: "Just add milk and you have a milkshake." Here, we give you a glimpse of other new products that Dr. Kosikowski says are around the corner: sour cream that will keep up to six months, maybe a year; fresh apple juice beaten up with fresh whole eggs to make a nutritious "applenog"; and whipped cream cheese (already available in some areas).

Food in a transparent veil

Mr. Arthur E. Larkin, Jr., Executive Vice President of General Foods, says: "Paralleling the research in irradiation (see below), various approved additives are also being researched. These additives are designed to reduce spoilage and retard maturation. In tests currently underway, additives in the form of an edible, transparent film are being sprayed on such foods as fresh meat, fruits, vegetables." This would be a remarkable development because it would prolong the lives and extend the seasons of otherwise highly perishable foods. Let's look at an apple, for example. Its shape and color would remain the same, but you would probably notice a slight extra shine that would show reflections. You would also notice, if Mr. Larkin's prediction comes true, that the quality and flavor matched that of fruit plucked fresh from the tree.

Less fat pork

A hog's life, as it were, is no longer a matter of long, indolent days rooting around in the ground. Like chickens, which have been put to roost permanently, and cattle now totally confined in feed or dry lots the year round, porkers of the future will never put foot to the ground. They will live in hog "parlors." From the standpoint of the animals, it probably leaves something to be desired, but from that of humans, it means progress. Mr. J. C. Mommsen, Vice President of Marketing, Armour & Co., says: "Broadly speaking, hogs are inefficient foragers, so when we control the quality and quantity of their feed, we get leaner meat." Hog producers are doing much more, however, than providing parlors for pigs. Great progress has been made in breeding animals with less fat (see Dr. Stare's comments below), both internal and external. "This doesn't mean a lesser-quality meat but, rather, a more consistent quality," according to Mr. Mommsen, who adds, "there is no need for all that fat on a porker."

Cattlemen have not been standing idly by for they, too, are working toward "breeding in" tenderness. Dr. R. H. White, Armour's Director of Beef Cattle Improvement Research, has developed a remarkable new technique called electrogrammetry by which the quality of the meat of an animal can be evaluated instantly. This offers limitless possibilities for the improvement of beef and other meats. "Block-Redi beef is definitely ahead," Mr. Mommsen believes. "This means meat from which excess fat and bone have been removed. With fabrication (the cutting) done at the packing house, rather than in the local markets, we will have better control, and the housewife is assured of greater uniformity." Hopefully, the housewife will also be able to tell exactly what she's buying. It is obvious that Mr. Mommsen, a "meat man" all his life, and Dr. Schaffner, a "canner," are at variance. Only time will tell who has the most efficient crystal ball.

Milk stored at room temperature

If this seems, and sounds, way out, Mr. Christie believes it is a real possibility, "but we will have to learn more about the basic structure of milk." It is his conviction that the day will come—it may be sometime hence—when "sterile milk, of drinking quality, in liquid form, indistinguishable from fresh milk, will be a common commodity." Although a great deal has been done in this area, no known process yet has solved the flavor and shelf-life problems. "I suggest, too, that when we know more about irradiation which, at the moment, has only limited application, we will have come a long way toward licking the preservation problem. We know this much today: Irradiation inhibits sprouting in potatoes and other root vegetables. But so far it has not been successful with tomatoes, for example, or meat."

Are modern convenience foods as good as or better than home-made?

"Better," says Mr. William B. Murphy, President of Campbell Soup Company. A scientific realist, he points out why. "The food processor who pursues high-quality standards obtains ingredients harvested at their peak quality and preserves them by canning, freezing, or drying, so this peak quality is available to the housewife throughout the year. Even the most discriminating woman can rarely match this quality in the open market. From a nutritional standpoint—and again I emphasize high quality—the very fact that the fruits and vegetables were picked at peak maturity and preserved under modern methods would indicate the finished product is sounder nutritionally." Mr. Murphy adds that, in his opinion, "Convenience foods have made the meals in most homes infinitely more inviting, with far more variety. And we've only scratched the surface."

Agreement on this point comes from another convenience food producer, Mr. Vernon Stouffer, President and Chairman of the Board, Stouffer Foods Corp. "A more leisurely and affluent society in 2001 will eat less but be more demanding of palatability and quality. They will be served with greater flair . . . new concepts in preparation will make dining more fun, more of a challenge to ingenuity. Balanced nutritional values will become increasingly important."

The hopes of a nutritionist

Fredrick J. Stare, M.D., head of the Department of Nutrition at Harvard's School of Public Health, and author of Eating for Good Health, looks ahead to the day when "eggs and dairy products can be developed that are low in cholesterol; when beef and lamb, low in fat but prime in quality, will be in the market for meat-loving Americans." Dr. Stare also suggests that controlled portions (generally smaller than many Americans are accustomed to) remain the keystone to improved nutrition. With other scientists, he sees the possibility of genetic changes in many common foodstuffs, a problem on which the geneticists are working assiduously. ■ huge glass cloud-chamber bowls from the physics laboratory. His concerts are exciting visually as well as aurally.

This is important. Most of today's progressive composers believe music should be more than sound. Mr. Cage has said that his music exists only when it is seen. He makes his point most compellingly in another of his pieces, in which a pianist sits at the keyboard for four minutes and 33 seconds of silence, solemnly turning pages of a score in which the silences are all carefully written out with tempo indications and instructions for louds and softs.

Even the "normal" instruments are used in something other than normal ways. "Pianists" at avant-garde concerts have been known to spend their whole time banging at the legs of their instruments, or twanging the strings, or pounding the keys with blocks of wood.

Poseurs? Buffoons? Opportunists? One is tempted to say yes, until he considers the lessons of history. The critics wrote "crude . . . incomprehensible . . . ugly," when Beethoven's music was first played. A half-century later the same derision was heaped on Brahms and Wagner. Tchaikovsky and Puccini endured raging storms of critical scorn.

Critics who found Wagner's melodies lacking would have gone home whistling all his tunes if they could have foreseen Alban Berg's Wozzeck, which now sounds comfy and old-hat beside the latest electronic tone-poem.

The great innovators of the past —Monteverdi, Beethoven, Wagner, Stravinsky—were content (or limited, if you will) in working with the same voices and instruments as their conservative colleagues. Now, even that has been cast aside.

The invention of magnetic tape made it possible to use prerecorded material with an ease and variety never dreamed of before. Adventurous composers immediately began to explore its possibilities. First there was musique concrète, in which the sounds of the world—of nature, of machines, of crowds, and even of plumbing—were edited and arranged on tape to form artistic unities. It was a sonic forerunner of pop art. In fact, the tape recorder must be reckoned as a new instrument producing a range of sounds potentially greater than all previous soundmakers since the beginning of music. Sometimes tape is used alone, and sometimes the speakers share the stage with more-or-less conventional instruments to bring man and machine into concert.

From musique concrète, the world passed in a short time to an even more fascinating series of possibilities, with sounds produced not by instruments, not by nature, but by electronic devices, and then further changed on tape.

This electronic music is humming today, in more ways than one. Up near Columbia University in New York, a huge complex "synthesizer" developed jointly by RCA, Princeton, and Columbia serves such composers as Vladimir Ussachevsky, Milton Babbitt, Otto Luening, and their associates as a super-orchestra capable of creating every sound conceivable to man in any degree of speed or volume—and then going on to invent new ones.

Similar laboratories are developing all across the land in universities and cultural centers, where synthesizers are bringing forth an infinity of musical creations directly onto tape to be heard on loudspeakers, at home and in the concert hall. Except for the composer, it's all done without the need of a single human performer.

The specter of the past is a further spur to innovation. Ready access to the panorama of music's past, on records, tape, in concert gives the contemporary composer a unique concern for the future. History dogs his footsteps, making him nervous and overly aware of eras and periods. Faced with the example of the Baroque composer, Vivaldi, whose 600-plus string concerts tend to sound pretty much alike, he becomes prickly and a little frightened at the thought of emulating this example. He strives to make each work different.

There's also an economic factor. There is not a large audience for very modern music. Symphony orchestras, which are usually privately supported in this country, are reluctant to play experimental music for fear of alienating the patrons, who are mostly conservative. Thus deprived of the orchestra for creative expression, many modern composers are turning to other means of producing sound and developing their ideas.

There has recently arisen a new philosophy—the music of chance—wherein the performer reigns supreme. Each performance is constructed on the scene from a large number of possibilities furnished by the composer in no specified order. This may well be a reaction to the depersonalization of electronic music.

This is a time of experimentation—a search for new ideas for musical construction and new sounds to bring them to fruition. But there has been, it would seem, a dearth of composers with the depth of vision to turn these new sounds and ideas into really compelling music.

For a fascinating insight into their musical appreciation, here are quotations from opinions written by 7th-grade students in Longmont, Colorado, about Ussachevsky's Linear Contrasts.

". . . I think the sound gets to you more than regular music . . . It sounds like flying saucers, machinery, and computers. It gives you a feeling of being in a different world."

". . . It sounds like you're falling through an endless hole and sound waves are bouncing you all over."

". . . Deep, huge: lonely: mystic: mysterious: mechanical: chilling: approaching: like it came back out of a cave: mysterious power: wavy: echoes through your ears like something without motion but sound."

". . . I like it, it's something new and wierd, sounds like crickets and adjustable socket wrenches." (Ed. note: ratchet wrenches.)

". . . It will seem like it is getting farther away, then all of a sudden start back with great force, then stop, then a big bang. It agrees with me."

They have, however, afforded a glimpse of what this compelling music might be. Men like Cage, Stockhausen, the electronic experimenters, the young American chance-composer Earle Browne, and a number of energetic and imaginative Polish composers have turned out moments, at least, that raise our hopes for the expressive power of their experiments.

These new sounds must be heard with the lessons of history in mind. The first operas at the turn of the 17th Century and the first symphonies early in the 18th were pretty pokey stuff, works which propounded more than they achieved. Then along came Monteverdi to write great opera, and Haydn and Mozart to bring the symphony to artistic heights. The proposition, therefore, tends to precede the resolution, often by several decades. The creative artist of today is exactly where he should be—somewhere ahead of his time.

Cabot's BLEACHING OIL

When applied to untreated wood surfaces, Cabot's Bleaching Oil imparts a delicate gray tone which, in the span of a very few months, weathers to a beautiful natural driftwood gray . . . . a color effect ordinarily found only in seacoast areas after years of exposure to salt air. This remarkable product, while actually bleaching raw wood, preserves it by protecting against mildew, insects, and decay. Cabot's Bleaching Oil, easy to apply and economical, will not crack, peel or blister . . . is an ideal finish for all exterior wood surfaces where the driftwood look is desired.

adjacent pitch-and-putt course. There's plenty of time for this—his lawn is tended by a permanent maintenance crew.

So far, so good, but how to keep the speculators and spoilers at bay? Who's to watch over the open spaces? What's to protect the New Towns of today from the fate of communities designed in the early 1900's during the City Beautiful era? This, too, was a brave new nationwide program of civic planning and improvement. Some remnants still survive, and we're richer for them: Roland Park in Baltimore, the Country Club area in Kansas City, Forest Hills Gardens in New York, and, of course, Radburn, New Jersey. Radburn's plan was beautiful, imaginative, and practical. There were greenbelts, pedestrian ways, lovely open spaces, and sensible separation of automobile traffic. But the depression came before it was finished, and it is now surrounded by tract housing in the dreary pattern of our time. What was done in Radburn, however, was excellent—and still is.

In retrospect the plans of the past were too small. They did not foresee the tremendous pressures of population and the impact of the automobile. They did not provide enough buffer zones of inviolable open space. The builders relied too much on the protection of open land over which they had no firm control.

The New Town planners of today are building more safeguards into the fabric of the community. When the residents of a neighborhood own in common the parks and open spaces that give grace to their homes, they are not likely to sell that land to a developer.

Some of the new developments are built for the single purpose of recreation, and most of the houses will be second homes. Some are built for a sharply defined population such as retired people. Some will be built in the midst of existing cities, occasionally as a whole neighborhood rising vertically in a single vast skyscraper. The prototypes already exist.

The concepts of open space and controlled expansion were most clearly expounded in England by Ebenezer Howard at the turn of the century. But it was not until after World War II that the New Towns and Garden Cities were built in England in significant numbers. Now, 20 years after the passage of the New Towns Act, there are 18 of them. Half a million Britons call them home, and the standards are well above the traditional housing. Some of the older New Towns are beginning to grow away from their original plans. The designers assumed that most people would walk or ride bicycles. But with rising incomes have come more cars, and the streets are jammed as the bicycle racks are emptied. The New Towns are Britain's laboratory for urban design, and their experience will set the patterns for extending and rebuilding the older towns.

But in this decade the great field of experimentation is the Western Hemisphere, where the increase in population is most dramatic. In the United States, the New Towns are developing at the centers of greatest growth—Southern California, the outskirts of Washington, and within range of New York City.

Columbia, Maryland

The depth and detail of today's best planning far surpasses anything done before. A good example of this is Columbia, Maryland, about halfway between Washington and Baltimore. When James W. Rouse began this project, he and his staff held a long series of seminars with experts in the many facets of city life. They invited sociologists, public administrators, a housing economist, a psychiatrist, a political scientist and, among many others, a housewife.

Rouse was trying to arrive at a definition of the good life as it is lived in, and influenced by, the good community. His planners concluded that, above all, their city must be designed to give each citizen a wide choice of ways to organize his own life.

There will be an all-weather swimming pool under a glass canopy. The National Capital Field Trial Club holds its trials at Columbia. Its libraries are designed to house new and rapid communications technology, and a 400-seat auditorium will be built in the first village center. Washington's National Symphony is to play twice a week all summer at Columbia, beginning next year. For now, an acoustical shell is being put up with seats for 3,000 and space for another 3,000 to sit under the trees.

Nine denominations have formed a corporation to begin building churches before the population arrives. The Fund for the Advancement of Education has given the State Department of Education $14,000 to plan Columbia's school system. New Town planners consider it essential to have the community's basic facilities open and working before the houses are sold. Otherwise the incoming families are forced to go miles to find churches, schools, and doctors. When these families must constantly go outside their own neighborhood, it becomes almost impossible to create the sense of community that the New Town builders are pursuing.

One of the most difficult requirements of a large new community is medical care. Rouse has asked the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore to establish a satellite hospital and clinics in Columbia.

In perhaps the most significant of all his promises for Columbia, Rouse has said that the city will offer employment to anyone living there, and will offer housing to anyone working there. He is actively recruiting industry, and planning an unusually wide variety of housing. He considers it a matter of conscience to prevent his city from segregating itself into a middle-middle-class community.

Irvine Ranch, California

The largest of all the planned communities in North America is on the Irvine Ranch, with its 138 square miles of land edging the Pacific in Orange County below Los Angeles.

The new university complex was begun with a gift of 1,000 acres to the University of California. Its new Irvine branch opened a year ago with 1,500 students. When the infants of today are graduate students, UCI will have reached its full enrollment of 27,500 and the surrounding community will have well over 100,000 people.

The Irvine Company, whose immense holdings run deeply into the established coastal towns, has firmly answered the issue mentioned before: How does the builder ensure that over the years his original plans will be sustained by the thousands of people to whom he has sold the land?

The Irvine Company's solution is a very old one, but uncommon in this country. The newcomer to any community on Irvine land can buy or build a house, but he can not buy the land under it. He rents it on a 75-year lease, in effect covering his lifetime and his children's.

In London, leasehold has made possible the unity and beauty of some of the city's finest old squares. The Dukes of Bedford owned the land on which their tenants built Bedford Square, the only one of London's 18th-century squares that remains intact today. The leases specified not only the quality of building materials down to the finest detail, but they required that the façades adhere strictly to the original design.

The result is an array of big houses with handsome façades faithfully maintained, which allow intensive use of the land without the crowded or oppressively busy appearance of random development.

The Irvine Company is using the same technique at The Bluffs, a development in the existing town of Newport Beach. It has been planned as a series of cluster homes interwoven with greenbelts and parks. All exterior maintenance is done professionally for the homeowner, including planting, landscaping, and even repainting the house itself. The owner pays a monthly fee to cover that work and the upkeep of the greenbelts held in common ownership, another tradition borrowed from the London squares.

The Bluffs is not the place for the amateur gardener who wants to do his own digging. But each of the buyers has absolute assurance that none of his neighbors will be able to disrupt a harmony devised to preserve a sense of space and greenery in an area where the expanding metropolis is forcing high densities of development.

Although most Americans are unaccustomed to leasehold, it does not appear to be interfering with the Irvine Company's sales. Perhaps Californians have seen enough of heedless growth to conclude that a lease protects their environment better than ownership.

Reston, Virginia

But the American style of community planning is still very new, and the best of its products are only now taking shape in three dimensions. Reston is still the one place where one can find a New Town that really shows what its builders mean by a new way of life.

In Lake Anne Village, the first of seven, each designed for ten to twelve thousand people, the lakeside plaza and its fountain are surrounded by stores and apartments. An occasional bicycle crosses the square, but never an automobile. As the towns of medieval Europe, Reston is built on pedestrian scale. Most of the medieval town squares have been overrun, unhappily, by the automobile. The builder of Reston, Robert E. Simon, has wisely kept his roads away from the square. Most Restonians will need their cars only to leave the town.

To build a town on pedestrian scale means a high density of population within a short radius around its center. Reston has used extremely skillful landscape architecture and narrow bands of woods to give the townhouses a cool and shaded air. There is probably no other development in the U.S. that has built so much in so compressed a space (even the lake is artificial) while retaining as many of the large trees and native growth. Reston demonstrates the high level of skill in physical design now available to New Town builders.

The skill has been carried to great refinement in the recreational communities, where the whole point of view is to build without destroying the wild quality of the land that was its original beauty. Along 14 miles of the Northern California coast, the builders of Sea Ranch are putting low houses on the bluffs over the sea. They are taking consummate care to preserve the sense of windswept open country. Their plans demonstrate that unconventional architecture and joint ownership allow a surprising number of families to stay here without deranging the rugged attraction of the land.

The new planners of the vacation communities are beginning to show an appropriate regard for regional ecology—the rhythm of its natural life. On Florida's lower west coast, engineers are moving millions of tons of sand to build yacht clubs and apartments on Marco Island. But the developer is going out of his way to avoid the destruction of the island's wildlife. Marco was a refuge for many rare birds, notably the bald eagle and the white pelican. They are a point of contact with the older world of wind and water in which the island once lived.

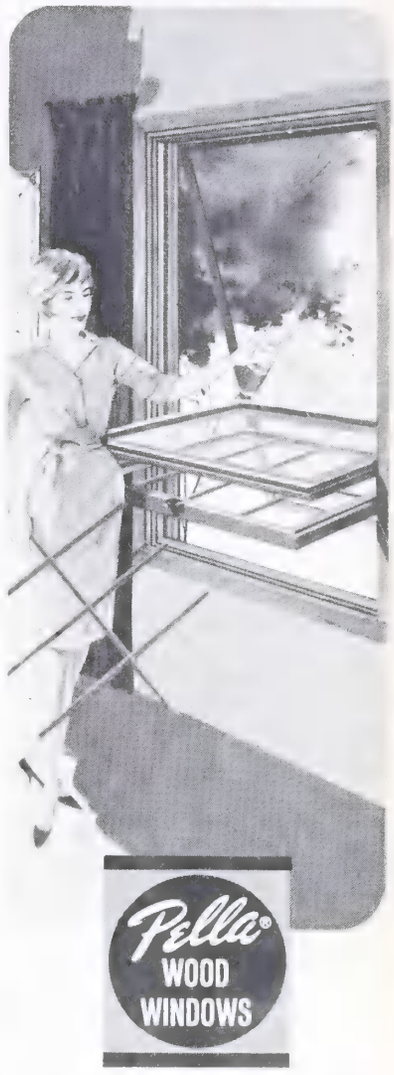
They are precious to the population that is increasingly crowding their habitat. The housing sites are laced with man-made canals, and almost everyone will have a private mooring dock.

At the edge of the pounding surf on the Oregon coast in a magnificent setting of coastal mountains, evergreens, and sand, is the community of Salishan. The golf course, the lodge, apartments, and every house are sited with exquisite regard for the beauty of the whole. Salishan will be populated but will not destroy itself in the process.

The same is true of New Seabury on Cape Cod, which is now in its fourth year and going strong. It is being developed as a series of separate villages to suit the taste of vacationers—and some year-round residents—of every persuasion. The first consideration was to preserve the character of the land—low rolling woodland just off Nantucket Sound.

For retirement

Community planning adapts itself to the community's purpose. The Rossmoor Corporation's chain of Leisure Worlds (six open or under construction in this country, and several planned in Europe) is designed to suit the life of the oldest one-fifth of the population, who are in or approaching retirement. Craft shops, libraries, and game rooms are built into these communities. The purchaser's monthly payment includes not only the mortgage, but all maintenance inside and out, local transportation, special police protection, and medical care.



For a close-up look at the quality and character of the houses, see the pros and cons of retirement cities in the October, 1964 issue of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.

All of the planned communities until now have been built on open land. But soon the concept will begin to influence development, and redevelopment, in the great cities.

Twenty years ago in Marseilles, the Swiss architect LeCorbusier attempted to built a whole community in one apartment house. The playground was on the roof, and the market place was a concourse of shops halfway up. As a community the building failed, perhaps because it was not big enough. But, as he did in all his work, he pointed a sure finger in the direction of the inevitable.

The largest habitation currently under construction in this country is the 1,140-foot John Hancock Center in Chicago. An unorthodox combination of stores, offices, and apartments, it will devote a substantial share of its commercial space to the service of its own resident population. The architects of this massive building may be creating the precedent for the vertical village of the future central city.

Even old cities may shortly find themselves building New Towns. Through urban renewal, or occasionally through good luck, most cities can find sites large enough for a community with schools, churches, and employment.

Certainly the Federal Government will soon begin to extend powerful assistance to the New Towns. Each year since 1964, President Johnson has asked Congress to establish a partnership between industry and government to build entirely new communities. Congress has refused so far, but the President may ask again.

In return for financial assistance, the Federal authorities will require the New Towns to put some of their housing within the reach of families with less than average incomes. The builders already realize that as their communities grow they will suffer a lack of service help. The enlightened builders recognize the need for a cultural cross section, and the right of everyone to share the boon of a better environment.

Why don't you become a professional Interior Decorator?

It's a high-income field where a woman is in her glory. The demand for decorating services is at a peak, and opportunities are unlimited... even if you use only part of your time. You can train at home without interrupting your regular duties.

BY JANICE TRIMBLE

I DON'T THINK there is another profession today that offers more pleasure or greater rewards to a woman than that of interior decorating.

It is the ideal place to put your natural love of beauty to practical use. You can prepare for one of the many attractive positions available or decide to go into business for yourself.

Do you enjoy doing your own decorating? Have you ever helped a friend solve a decorating problem? Then you have the makings for success as a professional decorator.

Even if you've done no decorating, you may be one of many women with unsuspected talent in this direction—talent just waiting to be discovered.

You can now train for this work at home, in your spare time. No previous skills or experience are required for this training. Why not look into the many opportunities that interior decorating offers you?

A tremendously expanded field

It used to be that only wealthy people employed professional decorators. That's no longer true. Increasingly large numbers of homemakers now rely on the services of decorators. They know that a decorator can provide beauty and individuality—and can often save them money, too.

Your work as a decorator is varied and interesting. It frequently takes you and your clients into plush showrooms and exclusive shops filled with treasures. You move in a world of fashion, creativity and ever-new challenge.

Designing and furnishing even a single room can earn you hundreds of dollars; larger assignments can earn you much more. Many women do extremely well in just part-time work; their own homes often serve as showcases for prospective clients.

But decorators are busy in many areas besides homes. Their talents are employed in decorating hotel rooms, business offices, building lobbies, clubs and institutions. That's why the profession has grown so enormously.

What the LaSalle Course teaches you

The LaSalle Course in Interior Decorating has been prepared by experts to give you complete and up-to-date preparation for this most exciting of modern careers. Lessons come to you by mail; they are as fascinating as the professional work itself. Much of the study material included is absolutely unique in a course of this kind. For instance, you get an attractive, simple-to-operate slide projector with color slides that show interiors as big as life on your wall. You also get professional sketching equipment, coloring materials, stencils that make it easy for you to draw room plans and furniture arrangements, and much more.

Step by step, you are shown how to develop your creative ability. You are taught the principles of color and design and the historic background of today's decoration. You are trained in the selection and use of furniture, fabrics, accessories, lighting. You learn how to achieve beautiful settings that will delight your clients and build your reputation. Even before you have finished the course, you will be able to apply your new knowledge to glorifying your own home.

At each step, you are given practical assignments which are then carefully reviewed by your instructors and returned to you. You are coached with thoroughness for your work as a professional decorator.

The LaSalle Course in Interior Decorating is backed by more than half a century of leadership in the field of adult education. More than 1,000,000 people have trained for success through home study with LaSalle.

Shown, Cambrian style 80007. Cambrian cross section enlarged. Cambrian and Corlon® are trademarks of Armstrong Cork Co and discover the remarkable cushioned comfort of this new Armstrong vinyl floor.

u won't believe how comfortable this vinyl floor is ntil you walk on it. It's new Armstrong Cambrian yl Corlon, and it has a new kind of foamed vinyl hion underneath. It's delightfully comfortable to k on; it gives under your feet. Test-walk Cambrian our Armstrong retailer's. Then you'll know.

es a beating—doesn't show it. For all its light-ted comfort, Cambrian is as tough as any floor nstrong has ever made for your home. Even spike ls won't leave dents in it—it gives under your l, then comes right back.

others noise. Another virtue of Cambrian Corlon: ability to absorb the noise of footsteps—the clatter children at play. In addition, a floor of Cambrian lon dramatically reduces the noise of footsteps nsmitted to a room below.

utiful design. New Cambrian Corlon has a warm, pled design and comes in many beautiful color-s. It's perfect for the family room, children's bed-ms, the entrance hall, the playroom, the kitchen ll the active rooms of your home.

Cambrian is designed for active rooms like this: a family room.

Cross section shows thick, comfortable foam base under tough vinyl wear layer. Even spike heels won't dent Cambrian Corlon.

Sealed seams for easy care. Cambrian comes in six-foot-wide rolls that install with scarcely a seam. And where there is a seam, it's sealed by the installer—spilled water can't seep in.

Warmer underfoot. Cambrian Corlon's cushion base makes this floor warmer underfoot than most other floors. And Cambrian Corlon can be installed anywhere in your home—even in most basement rooms directly over concrete.

Cambrian Vinyl Corlon: comfortable, quiet, warm.

Guaranteed by Armstrong. Armstrong gives you a written guarantee with your purchase of Cambrian that covers both the material and the installation, if carried out by an approved Armstrong retailer. Ask your retailer for details.

Take a test walk. Feel Cambrian's cushioned comfort for yourself at your Armstrong retailer's. He's listed in the Yellow Pages under "Floors." For a free sample of this remarkable, new floor, a list of nearby retailers, and a 24-page color booklet about the active rooms, write Armstrong, 6610 Atkins Avenue, Lancaster, Pa.

We create our notes solely for the woman who delights in individuality.

Our idea is to add to the pleasures of self-expression and make your notes, however hasty, newsy, or formal, easier to write.

A visit to the connoisseur of paper who carries Crane can be as exciting, and as rewarding, as choosing a personal jewel. Would you like pink accented in silvery grey—or white edged in gold? Or would you prefer a dashing tint complemented by a hand-brushed border?

These combinations, and many, many more, are particularly distinguished by their feel, the wonderfully luxurious feel of our finishes. Our use of 100% rag fibers has a lot to do with this end excellence. To be sure everyone knows the paper is Crane, we include our watermark.

Your Crane dealer is apt in guiding personal choice; he's an authority on paper design and "etiquette."

He's the one to consult, too, about formal invitations and announcements, both the paper and the engraving. His selection of Crane notes, for you and for gifts, is wide with a beguiling choice at under $5. Crane & Co., Inc., Dalton, Mass.

YOU & KROEHLER

Let your Sleep-or-Lounge dealer show you 38 ways to add a spare bedroom without driving a single nail.

With a Kroehler Sleep-or-Lounge, you add a spare bedroom to your home in just about the quickest and easiest way known to woman. You don't pass up smart design, either. There are 38 fashionable styles, in a choice of hundreds of fabrics, and in sizes all the way up to king-size Sleep-or-Lounges that are eleven inches wider than a double bed.

Sleep-or-Lounges open to regular Hollywood bed height. They practically open themselves, too, thanks to automatic lift springs. And when they're open they have a tailored look with rounded frame—no ugly iron-works to bark your shin. Choice of innerspring or nonallergenic polyurethane foam mattress—so comfortable that just to think of it . . . makes you . . . zzzz. You & Kroehler—the furniture more people enjoy living with than any other.

NOW! you can dial just the amount of light you need with Dial-a-Lite

. . . the new high-intensity lamp by Eagle

What's so great about that?

Most high-intensity lamps have a high and a low intensity . . . and that's it. If you should want anything in between there's not much you can do about it. With Dial-a-Lite, however, there's a lot you can do about it. Because with Dial-a-Lite you don't just switch on light, you dial exactly the amount you need—any intensity from a 15-watt glow to a brilliant white, glare-free light, the equivalent of 150 watts of illumination. Only Dial-a-Lite lets you tailor the light to suit your eyes, and the job you're doing. That's what's so great about that!

But that's not all that's great about this lamp. It has an ingenious reversible reflector which acts as a buffer inside the shade to keep it cool. Snapped out and attached to the shade, it beams an 8-inch circle of concentrated white light that's perfect for focusing on detail work.

Then there's the wireless, telescoping arm that extends 15 inches. A shade that swivels a full 360°, tucks into the base to protect the bulb so that the lamp travels safely and compactly.

A thermal circuit breaker that protects the transformer by causing light to blink if wrong replacement bulb is used. A compartment on the bottom for storing the cord. A keyhole slot for hanging.

Eagle makes every important part of this lamp, except the bulb, in their own factories, quality-controls every step of its construction. Result: a lamp they can guarantee without hesitation. The new Eagle Dial-a-Lite comes in black, white, sand or grey. You'll find it ready to go in its own draw-string traveling pouch at department, stationery, specialty and housewares stores.

Just one more thing, the price, $11.95. Would you believe it?

THE $200 DIFFERENCE

Before e fitted this sweep of crushed velvet, the Heritage upholsterer stretched, shaped and stitched four layers support over the arms and back of the frame. When a sofa, or any piece of furniture, takes its shape from tl inside out, only more money can buy it.

You might able to find a sofa that looks like for about $500. But you won't buying the same sofa or one that even close. As you'll soon find out, buffet suppers, day-to-day ting, children and reupholstering take their toll on the comfort and looks you bought in the showroom.

Covered in h crushed velvet, this 101-inch Heritage sofa will cost you about $700 $200 more than its "look-alike." Every spring, strip of webbing, length of thread and piece of burlap was hand-picked, then cut, fitted, sewn and secured to support the lines and comfort of this sofa. The arms alone have burlap, fiberfill, muslin and batting back to back beneath the velvet. Even the frame was shaped to support the sofa's design.

The higher price on this Heritage sofa, or any other piece of furniture we make, means something. Whether it's our concern for the support behind the looks and comfort of a design. Or the way we'll carve and finish wood by hand... because no machine or shortcut method can match it.

When you find work like this, you'll see the Heritage name. Hiding under the cushions of this monumental Heritage sofa. Burned inside the drawers of a chest that takes its look from Chippendale. Swinging on a tag from one of our wing chairs.

If you'd like to know more about Heritage and see how it could fit into your home, send two dollars for a Heritage catalog collection and room planning kit, to Dept. HF 10-6, Heritage Furniture Company, High Point, North Carolina.

The kind of bottle Libbey·Owens·Ford makes you can put in every window of your house.

The kind of bottle made by L·O·F is a skinny, flat one that goes into windows and takes the place of old-fashioned storm windows.

It's called Thermopane® insulating glass with the GlasSeal® edge.

It's made of glass fused to glass.

It's filled with dry air. Then it's sealed to keep the dry air inside and dirt and moisture out.

Then we etch our name in the corner where you can see it.

When you build, tell your builder you want Thermopane for every window in your house. (The leading wood window manufacturers already offer it as a standard option.)

When he tells you there are substitutes for Thermopane with the GlasSeal edge, just ask him if they're made like a bottle. That should end the argument right there.

Only Libbey·Owens·Ford makes Thermopane in the U.S.A.

Chatham's Fiberwoven fluffy blankets are for women who aren't quite read

Let's be frank. Our Fiberwoven skinny blanket isn't for everyone. Not yet.

Even though it's warmer and stronger than ordinary blankets. And it doesn't shrink (not at all). Nor shed. Nor pill. And it looks the very same after 50 washings as it does the day you buy it. (You know that's not true for any other blanket.)

Still, some women won't have the courage to buy it. They're used to the fluffy blankets their mothers taught them to love and cherish. They're just not ready for the skinny blanket with its sculptured look. No matter how handsome it is.

If that's you, consider our Fiberwoven fluffy blanket. The same Fiberwoven process means it's warmer and stronger than ordinary blankets. And it shrinks only about half as much. With a lot less shedding and pilling.

So it's pretty unusual too. And a whole lot better than those other fluffy blankets it looks like. It's just not quite as good as our Fiberwoven skinny blanket. But then, nothing is.

P.S. If you are ready for the skinny blanket, ask for it by name. Chatham's "Forecast". And in crib blankets, where washing is so important, ask for Chatham's "Tuffy".

And look for the Good Housekeeping Seal that tells you everything we've said about them is true.

When your Allen finally comes, you'll be glad you waited

You'll look admiringly at the way the graceful lines of the cabinetry complement your other fine furnishings. You'll touch the inviting keyboard.

Finally, you'll begin to play. Then you and your family will thrill to the incomparable tone of an Allen in your own home—the tone professional organists prefer. And you'll be glad you waited for an Allen.

We're sorry you have to wait at all. But we have so many orders to fill we often just can't deliver an Allen the moment a customer buys one. We'd like to, but we refuse to lower our standards or eliminate custom features for the sake of faster delivery. A magnificent Allen, like any fine instrument, takes time to build. We wouldn't change that. You wouldn't want us to.

The Theatre Compact, thrilling theatre sound in small home console

For those of you still thinking about an organ for your home, may we suggest that you ask your own church organist about Allen?
It's a sure way to get an unbiased, professional opinion.
Then play and listen to an Allen yourself at your Allen Dealer's showroom.
Ask him to demonstrate the newest Allen exclusives like Presence Projectors.

We hope you won't have to wait for delivery at all.
But you'll understand why an Allen really is the one organ worth waiting for.

Even after 4 inspections Irene Loin can send them back to the barrel.

We tell our first four inspectors, "Keep your eyes open. Be tough!"

But we don't bother saying anything to our fifth inspector. She's an inspector's inspector. And she could probably spot a flaw in her sleep.

Irene examines each piece of sterling, one by one. If she finds the slightest flaw (a nick maybe, or a little roughness) she sends it back.

Then it'll go through every single step again. Including the five inspections.

Any more than a slight flaw and back it goes to the barrel. The scrap silver barrel. Irene knows that every piece must be worthy of our "IS" maker's mark. That mark stands for our reputation. And we don't risk our reputation on sterling that's less than perfect. We'd rather have a full barrel.

We're introducing the new patterns you see here with a very special offer.

This month only you get, free, a pair of three-branch, 12½ in. high sterling candelabra (worth $100) with each 36-pc. service for 8. All you pay is $332 for either Snowflake or Crystal. This offer ends October 31, 1966.

NOBODY EVER TELLS YOU THESE THINGS

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some of the common but often puzzling questions in cookery

By HELEN McCULLY

What are persimmons and how do you use them? An extraordinarily beautiful and delicious fruit, in season for an all-too-brief period: October, November (the peak month), and December. Persimmons have been grown in Japan and China for centuries, but there is a distinctly different, wild variety that is native to the eastern part of the U.S. Those you are likely to meet in your market are the hachiyas, the largest and handsomest of all the Oriental varieties—usually seedless—grown in California. The skin is glossy, a deep orange-red; the jellylike flesh, when ripe, is sweet and rich. Persimmons are edible only when fully ripe (in their green state, there are few things more mouth-puckering because of the tannin—the same thing you find in overbrewed tea). Choose those that are very soft, with an unbroken skin and the stem cap attached. Persimmons are eaten out of hand, chilled; or, peeled, in a bowl with cream. They are also used in cooking such things as puddings, custards, cakes.

What is a wok? The all-purpose cooking pan of the Chinese kitchen. Madame Grace Chou, author of that splendid book, The Pleasures of Chinese Cooking, and one of the really great authorities on Chinese cuisine in the United States, says: "The wok resembles a salad bowl with handles. It comes in various sizes and is usually made of iron, aluminum, or copper. The Chinese cook uses his wok for everything from stir-frying (a Chinese cooking technique) to braising to stewing to deep frying." Because of its round bottom, designed to fit Chinese stoves, the wok cannot be used on gas or electric stoves without a metal ring on which it sits. These, and woks, are available in Chinese stores. Mr. Craig Claiborne, Food Editor of The New York Times, says the wok is "great for any quick cooking, but should not be used for anything that takes time, because the food will burn."

What does stir-fry mean in Chinese cookery? Just what its name implies—a technique for frying foods quickly over a high flame, stirring continuously. A small amount of cooking oil is used—only enough to cover the bottom of the frypan. It can be compared to sautéing. Anyone who has ever eaten in a Chinese restaurant must be aware of the crisp, delicious texture of the vegetables which are, of course, cooked by the Chinese stir-fry method.

Are South African rock lobster tails the same as the spiny rock? No. The spiny rock lobster (indigenous to Atlantic, Pacific, and European waters) is a warm-water crustacean; the South African, a cold-water crustacean. Both are available frozen, but there the comparison ends. The South African, which also comes from New Zealand and Australia, has more fat and is, therefore, tenderer, with better texture and infinitely more ere is the most superb home library ever assembled—Great Books may not be popular to admit it, but all people ren't created equal. Not with equal intelli- e, anyway. And the longer they live (and ı), the less equal they get.

ou were probably born with a bigger share of ligence than most of your fellow men . . . and ht how to use it.

hances are, the records you own play a more isticated brand of music. The books in your ry offer more nourishment. The home you live equipped for a more gracious way of living. ost of all you appreciate the difference.

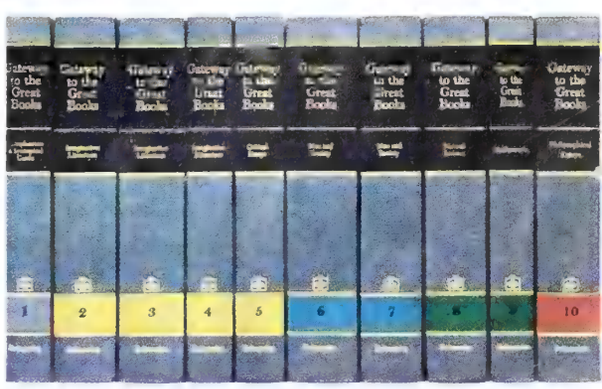
ertainly, you are not ashamed of having brains. You enjoy g them.

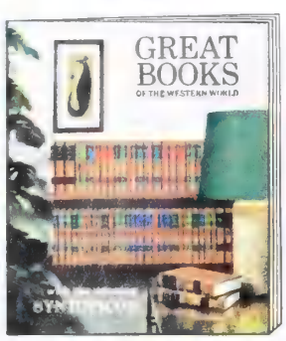
or this reason alone, Great Books belong in your home. These he writings of Plato, Homer, Cervantes, Tolstoy, Dostoev- Freud, Rabelais, Aristotle, Shakespeare and many, many e. They contain just about every important thought of ern man for the past 3,000 years! The Great Books were ished in collaboration with the University of Chicago, by Encyclopaedia Britannica. A set of 54 beautifully bound volumes containing 443 masterpieces by 74 of the greatest geniuses who ever lived. A library you couldn't duplicate at any price.

The $1,000,000 Syntopicon included

With the Great Books (and available only with Great Books) is a unique reference work called the Syntopicon. An amazing index that required 8 years and cost more than $1,000,000 just to write.

Unlike a dictionary that indexes words, or an encyclopaedia that indexes facts, the Syntopicon indexes ideas—every one of the thousands of topics and subtopics within the Great Books.





In minutes, the Syntopicon enables you to look up any idea in the Great Books and find what each of the great thinkers thought about it.

Also included with the Great Books are the handsome 10-volume reading plans. And you may also get a remarkable 10-volume set called Gateway to the Great Books as well.

Let us send you more information FREE

Certainly the Great Books belong in the home of every thinking person. What do they cost? About the price of a good set of luggage.

To learn more, just fill out and mail the attached card to Great Books, 425 N. Michigan Ave., Dept. 106-K, Chicago, Illinois 60611. You will receive a full-color, 16-page booklet describing the Great Books in detail.

Pantheon, a collection of classic magnitude by United, rekindles the spirit of the Italian Renaissance and reflects its genius with a new elegance and romance. Pantheon's dining and bedrooms, living room designs and occasional tables are finished in warm pecan veneers with wood grains carefully matched for harmony of color tone. Dressers, commodes and chests beautifully reproduce trim reeded moldings, carved shadow-panels . . . and repeat the embossed acanthus leaf motif adapted from classical columns. Each detail is a wonderful achievement in the grand Italian manner. We invite you to experience this renaissance in living. Send $1 for 20 page color decorating guide "Your Home and You are United." CELANESE

PUTS ALL THE PIECES TOGETHER TO CREATE NEW MOODS FOR YOUR HOME

Bright. Fresh. Exciting. Fun.
See the rooms Celanese has transformed from dull to dramatic.
Celanese shows you how easy it is to make your house bloom with fabrics made from the fibers Celanese makes so well.
Like Celanese Acetate and Fortrel polyester.

These fibers, famous in the fashion world, are winning new recognition in the home.
Acetate takes color magnificently, rivals lush silk in texture and richness of design, yet at a fraction of the cost.
Fortrel promises and delivers ease-of-care; can be woven in dozens of ways, from the sheerest curtains to the thickest broadloom.
And we've used Devoe paints—the perfect make-up for walls.
Send for the new, easy-to-follow Celanese Room Service '66 decorating book.
It's free. And it's fun to change old tired rooms or bride-new ones into practical show pieces.
See Room Service fabrics at the fine stores listed on each page and also at those listed on page 52.
Come away full of ideas and fabrics that help everything fall into place.
Perfectly.

Cool. Refreshing. Come on, dive right into our sunny living room. TILBURY's "Granada" from the Chalet panel group of rayon and Celanese Acetate set the cool climate. Brilliant blues and grassy greens are embroidered and entwined on white antique satin. About $11 per panel.

flavor. Fish experts attribute these qualities to the fact these lobsters live in the coldest waters in which they can survive. Like our own North Atlantic lobster, South African rock lobster tails should be boiled briefly. Drop the frozen tails into boiling, salted water (1 teaspoon to 1 quart)– enough to cover—or a court bouillon. When the liquid comes to a boil again, simmer 3 minutes longer than the weight of the tail (your market should give you the weight of the tails when you buy them). A 4-ounce tail should be cooked 7 minutes after the water comes to a boil the second time. If cooked in a court bouillon, we suggest you cool them in the liquid to give them more flavor and succulence. Allow approximately 4 quarts of liquid to 6 lobster tails. In cooking fish or shellfish of any kind, it is important to remember you do not, as with meat, cook it to tenderize it; it is tender by nature. Overcooking is disastrous to flavor and texture.

How do you store fruits and vegetables when your hydrators are full? One of the blessings of the 20th Century is polyethylene bags, in which you can store almost any food. Carrots, celery, citrus fruits—you name it—can be put into bags, all air squeezed out, tied securely, then refrigerated. But don't limit their use to just fruits and vegetables. Protect anything edible against drying out or picking up foreign flavors. Now available in three sizes—small, medium, and large—there's a size for every conceivable use.

Why do garlic dishes sometimes taste bitter? Because the garlic was burned.

How can your eliminate onion flavor from your hands? Run cold water over your hands, then rub them with salt. Rinse off. It's that easy.

What is a Jordan almond? An almond coated with hard sugar, in white or pastel colors, known in France as dragées. Apparently they originated in Rome, as early as 177 B.C., and were used as a token of rejoicing on the occasion of a birth or a marriage in patrician families. The custom still exists in France and in Jordan. At the time of King Hussein's marriage a few years ago, the guests at the wedding received mother-of-pearl boxes filled with Jordan almonds. How they came to be called Jordan almonds is a mystery. In this country, dragée means the little silver-coated "bullets" used to decorate cakes and candies.

Can you substitute cocoa for chocolate? Yes. If you find yourself without any unsweetened chocolate, 3 tablespoons of cocoa plus 1 tablespoon of shortening will equal 1 ounce (1 square) of unsweetened chocolate; and the same proportions plus 1 to 2 teaspoons of sugar for 1 ounce (1 square) sweet or semisweet chocolate.

What's a quick, easy way to clean a roasting pan? With the modern, hard-working liquid soaps, it doesn't seem to us much of a chore. Add some of the liquid, then hot water and allow it to soak a good long time. Or do as the old-time cooks did: Put the pan with the soap and water over a moderate heat and boil until all the encrustations come loose.

What is an apéritif? An alcoholic drink before a meal, designed to stimulate the appetite. (See our story next month.)

Why do glass bottles sometimes smell musty? Undoubtedly, because they've been sealed and no air can circulate. It is always a good idea to sniff a bottle before using and if there is some mustiness, rinse it out in boiling water, then dry before using. ■ nless you live in one of nature's chosen oft water areas (odds are about 8 to 1 you on't), you have the unattractive problem f hard water on tap.

It's staring you in the face. When you ook at yourself in the mirror, rough dry kin stares back as a reminder of hard water. The ring around the tub is another. So are the spots that cling to glasses, dishes and silver. And, so are the clouded whites and dulled colors in your laundry.

Stop being hard on yourself. And your family. Give nature a hand. Give yourself a water softener. You deserve one.

And, it deserves Morton Salt Pellets for simple and inexpensive operation. Pellets come with the highest recommendation from leading softener appliance manufacturers. Or, use Morton Pellens, if you have a rust problem. Both promise the softest water this side of a rain cloud. And, it's always on tap. That's the beauty.

When they pour, it's as soft as rain.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

Maeve Merton is the romantic daughter of a mother who, in all charity, is frequently considered hard as nails. Mrs. Lynch stands ready at any time to utter an opinion, solicited or no, on any subject from laundry bleach to Zen Buddhism, and it frequently turns out to be scathing.

For example: She just happened by one moment after Maeve and I had bid a fond farewell to the drapery man and his collapsible ladder, and were regarding the finished study for the first time in all its beigey subtlety.

"If you ask me," said Mrs. Lynch and of course no one did, "I think it looks like something set up in a store window. All that's missing is a dummy in a hostess gown."

Maeve gasped, but I didn't, because her mother was right. The room did have a static, cut-and-dried manner. Not that there is anything dull about its new Dunbar sofa and armchairs and their hand-loomed natural wool upholstery fabrics, woven in Colombia, and I think there's something more electrifying than otherwise about deep, almost purple-brown walls, especially if the fourth wall of a room is practically one sheet of glass letting in a view of a quiet garden. But the room is so large I had begun to think of the carpet in terms of ivory colored acreage—and a lot of such uninterrupted paleness underfoot can get looking desolate as a Dali desert.

"Mrs. Lynch," I said pleasantly, "I quite agree. And how wittily you put it! What's needed at once is a patterned rug to break up this vast floor space."

I squinted my eyes and hummed a little—a dodge that is sometimes successful when you want to create the impression that you know what you're doing. Truth is, I hadn't a thought in my head.

"If I may say so," commented Maeve, whose house this was, after all, "I think an area rug should be used to designate an area. Since Frank's main hobby is reading, why not pattern this room with an area rug that marks off a quiet reading corner close to the window wall where the light is good and there's a view of the garden. The rug pattern should not stress high-tension stuff like golf scores and horse racing, or anything arrestingly pictorial, for that matter. I'd settle for something geometrical in natural colors, restful to the eye."

"A Navajo Indian rug," said Mrs. Lynch immediately, never at a loss for a suggestion.

"No," said Maeve and I in prompt unison, but something in the back of my head kept saying, "Navajo no, but Indian yes," while Maeve engaged in one of her musing monologues. All of which eventually led to the perfect solution.

"When we were in South America," she said, "we visited a lady whose floors were covered in the most stunning wall-to-wall car-

88, 77, 66... Hike!"

The Blue Bombers of Bloomfield thundered across he living room. Coach Mary Wells smiled. The big ame was Saturday, and her boys were looking good.

So was the carpet, she mused. Happily, it was enuine Polycrest olefin. You couldn't buy a more tain-and-wear resistant carpet fiber. And even the lew York Giants couldn't make Polycrest pill or uzz. Unlike acrylics, the salesman had assured her, carpets of Polycrest were made with one long continuous fiber, so there were no loose ends to pull out.

The Bombers pounded over yard after yard of luxurious Polycrest and piled up in the deep Pol crest pile. So rich, so lush, she thought. It reall looked like carpets twice the price.

Still contemplating the Polycrest, she sat down on the couch. A tug at her sleeve roused her from her thoughts.

"Yes, Tommy?" she asked.

"You're sitting on my bubble gum, Mrs. Wells," he said.

pet. She told me she had gone to a sheep farm and ordered her carpeting on the hoof, so to speak. She looked the black sheep over—they're really dark brown, you know—and said she'd take a couple of bundles of that wool come shearing time. She also ordered some vanilla-colored white wool and some that was coffee colored. When the sheep were clipped, she had her wool cleaned and carded and spun into yarn—all by hand, of course—and finally hand-woven into a carpet. I know it isn't possible to have anything like that in this country, but wouldn't it make a marvelous conversation piece to say nothing of a terrific rug?"

Suddenly everything fell neatly into place. "Maeve, dear girl," said I, "stop looking wistful. Even if you don't personally tap the sheep for the honor, you may, indeed, have a rug to vie with the carpeting of your Latin American friend, woven in natural, undyed wool in a pattern of black-brown, beigey-white, and walnut, or nogal as the Peruvians put it. And if it's a conversation piece you're after, you couldn't find a better one, and it is no farther away than Lord & Taylor. The rug is made in the Andean highlands of Peru by the Quechua Indians who are the 20th-century descendants of the Incas. It is made by hand, in every step of manufacture, from the sheep shearing to the weaving. It comes in two geometric patterns that are pure heirloom Inca—one called "Parapet," and another in an ageless key motif that you may think of as Greek but which you can trace back to pre-Columbian cultures of the Andes, a design so popular among the Quechuas that they weave it into their cloaklike ponchos, too. The size of the rug is approximately 5′ by 7′, just right to cut into the room at right angles to the window wall and mark off enough space for a couple of reading chairs and perhaps a table-height bookcase, which might serve to suggest a partition between our quiet corner and the rest of the room."—M.G.

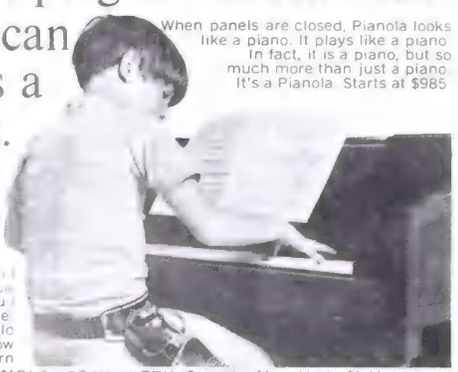
Pianola is the player-piano for people who can't always play piano.
People who sing-along, people who dance along, or people who are all wrapped up in their own instrument. They put their best feet forward—

The Transposer Bar lets you dial the right accompaniment key, whether you whistle, hum, sing or sousaphone.

You can get Aeolian music rolls in everything from fugues to frugs.

Electric play with sensitive volume control is an optional extra — for those who would rather dance or sit across the room and just listen.

Express yourself with your hands on Pianola's tempo and tone controls. Or flick a finger and add a honky tonk sound.



on Pianola player pedals -and out comes piano music, in style. In key, too, because Pianola has the right key for every music roll you play.

Pianola has style, seven kinds of it, for your choice of mood and finish. And, Pianola is bigger than a bread box, small enough to go just about anywhere

Go ahead, and express yourself. Play it with foot pedals. Play it with hand controls. Or plug in Pianola and it plays itself. You can even play it as a regular piano. What more can we say?

When panels are closed, Pianola looks like a piano. It plays like a piano. In fact, it is a piano, but so much more than just a piano. It's a Pianola. Starts at $985

A letter or postcard will get you all there is to know about Pianola free: full-color, full-of-fashion booklet and the words of "Morton Gould on The Player-Piano" and how it helps piano students learn more, faster. Write PIANOLA · 33 West 57th Street · New York, N.Y. 10019

ADDRESS BOOK

By EPSIE KINARD

Who in your little black book can repair a very old (1660-1700) boulle dresser box of ebony with its inlays of mother-of-pearl and metal "jumping out?" a Cincinnati, Ohio, reader writes. Aware of a problem that overheated rooms bring about, Old Arts, 805 Madison Avenue, New York City, keeps a supply of exotic woods for matching boullework boxes and other pieces. Small slivers of wood are shinnied into inlays to counteract shrinkage. Price estimate sent upon receipt of pieces.

Who can replace two curved slag-glass panels missing from a lovely old Tiffany lamp shade?" asks an Auburn, Alabama, reader. Gem Monogram & Cut Glass Corp., 623 Broadway, New York City, can usually make replacements cut from its supply of sheets of antique glass. These usually match Tiffany glass in colors and design. To bend the newly made glass panels to conform to curvature of a shade, it must be brought or sent to the shop. To obtain price estimate in advance, send overall dimensions—height, width, and diameter of shade, and close-up color picture of its Tiffany glass design.

This shop will also rejoin the sterling-silver neck and spout to the cut-glass base of an antique cruet, a problem a reader in Jonesboro, Arkansas, is worried about for fear the bonding cement will dissolve in hot water. Gem uses special molten silicates to prevent this—bakes on this bonding agent for permanence in a glass kiln.

Whom can I get to restore a frayed, stained, and leaking eiderdown comforter, dating back to Early American bundling days?" writes a San Francisco reader. Ripping apart an old coverlet to sift, clean, and sterilize the eiderdown and recover it takes careful and trustworthy handling, but it's done by the Norman Dine Sleep Center, 33 Halsted Street, East Orange, New Jersey. Original fabric covers are duplicated as nearly as possible, even those of pure silk brought back long ago from India in sea captains' chests. Machine-quilted by hand-guided outline, the favorite patterns used are the pineapple, the scroll, and the shadow block. The new fabric cover may be the customer's own choice—sample-tested to make sure it's downproof or one that the Sleep Center supplies. Send for cost estimate.

Who will hand-quilt my hand-embroidered bedspread?" writes a Danbury, Connecticut, reader. "A church group here I'd counted on has discontinued this work." Specializing in this work, the Rosemont Handcrafts, located in a picturesque tree-shaded house in Marion, Virginia, employs the skills of mountain craft needleworkers. Any kind of bedspread—today's or tomorrow's heirloom—can be hand-quilted, using a pattern suitable to the quilt's design. They will use your own or their materials—white muslin backing, fine sheer cotton interlining and binding. Price depends upon size of bedspread, design, and materials used. Send 10 cents for catalog. ■

Henredon furniture has many hidden benefits...like the DACRON® polyester upholstery fabrics protected with ZE PEL® fabric fluoridizer finish to keep them spot and stain resistant. You can rest assured that every piece of upholstered furniture from Henredon has soothing comfort built in. Comfort that will endure. This traditional durability is complemented here by the fabrics. A new, utterly sophisticated Dacron-cotton blend. In formal weaves, born to wear well. And grace pieces like the magnificent sofa, the twin, hand-tufted chairs. Further benefits hide in that wall unit. It's made from separate cabinets that can be used singly or, space permitting, in threes or more. Furniture is part of the new de Ville collection. Stylishly French and wisely scaled to today's smaller rooms.

Other ovens may smoke the kitchen when they clean themselves—but not Thermador! Smoke and acrid vapors disappear outside the kitchen . . . thanks to Thermador's exclusive "cool vent" system. All you do is latch the door, set the "clean" control—and let Thermador do the work. Thermador's specially designed self-sealing oven door has no troublesome gaskets that collect soil and need replacing . . . it's air-cooled and touchable, even during cleaning operation. Your Thermador comes out not merely clean, but looking like a brand-new oven . . . as spotless, gleaming, bacteria-free, as the day you bought it.
All this oven wizardry is packaged in lifetime stainless steel or lovely decorator colors to enhance your kitchen. People, Places, Pleasures

By DUNCAN MacDONALD

Widely known for her daily interview program on New York's WQXR, Miss MacDonald is an acute observer of the many worlds of esthetics, entertainment, travel, and the home.

GARDENS—FOR INSPIRATION: Anyone who has ever thought of capturing the beauty of his garden by photographing the roses cascading over the fence or the last blossoms of an Indian summer soon realizes that his skill as a gardener may not be matched by his skill as a photographer. Dorothy Hales Gary has photographed the gardens, temples, and courtyards of the Far East, bringing us a new appreciation of the meaning of a garden—a place of beauty and repose.

A bronze lantern photographed in a Shinto shrine at Nara, a pair of demons guarding the Temple of the Emerald Buddha at Bangkok supply inspiration to photographers and gardeners alike. Looking through her camera eye, we gain new perspectives in design, new ideas for gardens.

Dorothy Hales Gary, a Californian, makes an interesting portrait herself. She is the granddaughter of George W. Wheeler, who, in setting up the famous Quick Silver Gold Mines, also set up the family fortune. If this sounds unrelated to the art world, her Grandfather Georgi, of Munich, created the famous Georgi piano. Music was her first important interest, followed by painting, and then photography. When not traveling to India, Thailand, or Europe, searching out new subjects for her camera, Mrs. Gary lives in New York, where she is a dedicated member of the Museum of Modern Art's International Council. Her photographs of ancient Egypt are in the book Sun, Stones and Silence, and those of the Far East in Splendors of Asia.

GARDENS—FOR STROLLING: At North Salem, New York, you can walk, even in October and November, through 14 separate gardens, all comprising the Stroll Garden of the Hammond Museum. Best described by Natalie Hays Hammond herself, who created the gardens just five years ago from 22 acres of pasture land, she says, "The Stroll Garden originated in Japan and reached its perfection in the Edo period. The adaptation of the idea should be in terms of tranquillity, providing a world apart, as well as a world within. To please the eye, there are textures of stone, patterns of tree trunks, clusters of foliage, and tracery of vines. To please the ear, there are the songs of birds, the hum of insects, the chorale of frogs. To please the sense of scent, there are dry pine needles in the sun, the fragrance of flowering shrubs, the pungency of loam after a light rain."

As one strolls, one experiences the Zen Garden, the Dogwood Pool, the Willow Garden, the Dry Landscape Garden, the Waterfall Garden (following the Japanese tradition, it runs east to west), the Fruit Garden, and the Reflecting Pool. On the Mountain Walk, one can see in the northwest the faint outlines of the Berkshires, hundreds of miles away. The Sundial Garden is planted with chrysanthemums of burgundy-red, rust, and gold. The Autumn Garden is sheltered from the prevailing winds by arborvitae and cryptomeria and blooms this time of year with autumn crocuses and dwarf chrysanthemums.

Beautiful as it is, the Stroll Garden is only one aspect of the museum complex, which includes a library for scholars, a terrace for concerts, lectures, and theatrical performances.

"This new Rolla-ssage Chair by Niagara is actually giving me the most delightful, relaxing and comforting massage up and down my back. Really! It's almost like the expert fingers of a masseuse. At the same time I'm getting the benefit of Niagara's wonderful Cyclo-Massage and Moving Heat.

"How can a beautiful chair give you an honest-to-goodness rubdown? It doesn't cost you a penny to find out the secret for yourself."

Arlene Francis, one of America's busiest personalities, relies on the effective benefits in Niagara's great furniture innovation—the Rolla-ssage® Chair. The secret's in the built-in-rotating "massagers" that roll up and down from your neck to your hips. Niagara's built-in Cyclo-Massage® and Moving Heat units can be turned on at the same time. The remarkable penetrating combination of all 3 units (which can also be operated individually) helps relieve minor back pain and muscle stiffness, everyday tensions and fatigue, whenever they occur.

This is the same Cyclo-Massage action as in other Niagara equipment proved by years of continuing research and the experience of more than one million grateful men and women. This exclusive Niagara development is now yours in the extraordinary Rolla-ssage Chair . . . available in a variety of styles, colors and fabrics to go with any decor.

Get all the facts FREE. You have nothing to lose but your minor muscle aches, pains and everyday tensions. Fill in and mail the attached postage-paid card today.

Like extra 'hands' to help where it hurts
12 built-in rotating "massagers" move slowly up and down, giving you a gentle, soothing rubdown all along your back. At the same time, Cyclo-Massage and Moving Heat units further help ease sore, stiff muscles and joints of the back. The moving mechanism can be stopped at any place on the back to apply Cyclo-Massage where it is needed most. (A second Cyclo-Massage unit in the footrest helps relieve minor leg aches and pains and aids relaxation.)

There is also a handsome working kitchen for dinners and buffets that provide gustatory substance for genteel "meet the artist" functions.

The latter are housed in handsome Guildhall, which is the exhibition area of the museum. "London Observ'd" is the theme of a fascinating exhibit that will continue through December, depicting facets of London life in the 17th and 18th Centuries. Of the hundreds of items on display (a Royal Doulton chess set, a silver pocket nutmeg grater, miniature mosaics, snuff boxes, engravings, paintings, and maps), nearly all have been collected personally by Natalie Hays Hammond in a lifetime of travel and involvement in the arts. The museum was founded as an intellectual working center to bring to one place—for the enjoyment and enlightenment of the public as well as for students and scholars—the collections of Miss Hammond as well as those of her distinguished family. The museum is named for her parents, Natalie and John Hays Hammond; her father was a diplomat and philanthropist of San Francisco.

GARDENS—FOR COMMUNITIES: Did you know that any community in the world that wishes to plant a public garden may obtain free seeds for this purpose? The seeds are as unusual as the idea. Sarah Johnson Woodward loved gardens and flowers and developed two parks for her home town of Watertown, Wisconsin. Her daughter Mary, who was to become the wife of Albert D. Lasker, soon learned to share her mother's love of nature and the outdoors. As a memorial to her mother, Mary Lasker sends seeds to anyone wishing to establish public plantings. The seeds, a special type of winter-hardy chrysanthemum, were developed by the University of Chicago at the Laskers' Mill Road Farm in Lake Forest, Illinois.

With other members of her family, Mrs. Lasker has contributed 300 flowering cherry trees and 40,000 white daffodils to the United Nations Garden as a memorial to her husband, and she has given thousands of plants and trees to New York City. At Oxford University, she contributed rose gardens in honor of Sir Alexander Fleming and Sir Howard and Lady Florey, discoverers and developers of penicillin. This latter gift brings together Mary Lasker's two consuming interests: gardens and medical research. The Albert Lasker annual awards are our country's most distinguished medical awards, recognizing accomplishments in the fields of basic medical research and clinical research.

Mary Lasker's home on Beekman Place in New York City, overlooking the East River, is filled with important examples of the work of Renoir, Picasso, Van Gogh, Monet, Braque, and Toulouse-Lautrec. One comes away with a feeling of freshness and light. Mary Lasker is a woman of great personal beauty; her home is an extension of that beauty. She points the way for all of us to extend the beauty of our private lives to areas far beyond. We may not be able to give 9,000 azalea plants for Pennsylvania Avenue, as she did some months ago as a member of the First Lady's Committee for a More Beautiful Capital, but we certainly can give window boxes to the city's poor and trees and plants for village squares.

THE CREATIVE MIND—DESIGN: The creative process is always fascinating to observe, regardless of the level of creativity or the area of interest. National Educational Television is continuing its half-hour series on "The Creative Person." A forthcoming subject for the series (which includes such diverse personalities as Dylan Thomas, William Steinberg, Nadia Boulanger, and Federico Fellini) is the fashion designer Pauline Trigère. Trigère is widely known for fashion creations, but intimates know Pauline best for her talents in the herb garden and kitchen of her home at Lewisboro, New York, where she shares her good food and good living with family and friends. ■

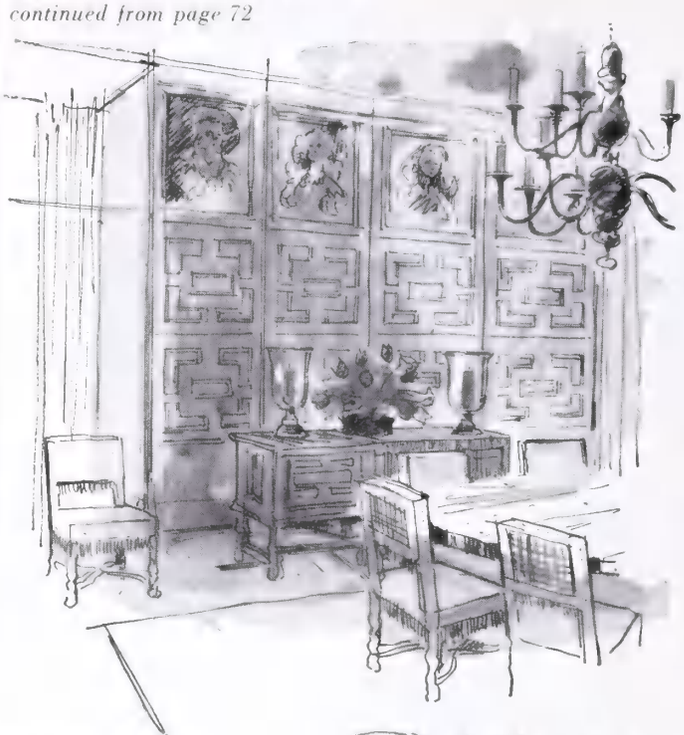
Uh...a former old friend.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot...

After Tom decided to sell his house without professional help, his weekends and evening hours were devoted to sales talks and entertaining lukewarm prospects. He finally sold the house to an old friend. And at a bargain price. But the negotiations were so hectic that the friendship came to a heated end.

Poor Tom. He could have avoided this by seeing a Realtor®. A Realtor is a professional in real estate who subscribes to a strict Code of Ethics as a member of the local board and of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. He is specially trained to analyze property values and fluctuating markets. And he takes care of negotiations between buyer and seller, and handles the many details.



When you sell your house, do it the friendly way. Look for a Realtor wherever you find this seal, which only he may display.

The Finlandia, shown at The Cincinnati Music Hall

RCA Victor Stereo... for realism that rivals the concert hall

The Cincinnati Music Hall, like a fine stringed instrument, seems to mellow and become more beautiful with the passing years. The venerable Hall is marking its 88th year as host to the world's fine music. And the Cincinnati Symphony, for whom the Hall is home, was selected this year by the State Department as the first American orchestra for an around-the-world tour.

Whether your choice is symphony or swing, you'll enjoy it most on an RCA Victor Solid State stereo. And you'll also enjoy the beauty of fine furniture craftsmanship. The magnificent Finlandia shown above combines elegant Danish Modern styling with an audiophile's dream of matched and balanced stereo components.

For instance, there's a full 300 watts of peak power at your command in the Solid State amplifier—for premium performance from either recordings or the sensitive FM-AM and FM Stereo radio. Imagine all that power, combined with an enclosed, air-tight 8-speaker sound system: two giant 15″ woofers, two 7″ mid-range speakers, two 3½″ tweeters and two exponential horns for a silky quality of "presence."

RCA Victor's gentle Feather Action Tone Arm has a Duralife* diamond stylus. And RCA Victor Studio-Strobe assures accurate turntable speed.

Let your RCA Victor dealer prove our claim of "realism that rivals the concert hall." See him. You'll understand why more people own RCA Victor phonographs than any other kind.

Bringing Oriental shadow play into a bedroom, grillework panels of hardwood are used for floor-to-ceiling window shutters, a dominating headboard-divider, and an enclosure for an extra closet.

After you carpet the floor,

do you have to carpet the carpet?

There are two emotions you feel when you first see your new carpet in place.

The first is pure joy. It's caused by the clean, elegant look of the spotless new carpet.

The second is fear and trembling. It's caused by the thought that people will actually walk on your new status symbol.

Your first instinct is to protect the innocent, young carpet. To cover it with runners, throw rugs. Almost anything. But that defeats the whole purpose of the new carpet, doesn't it?

When it's a World Carpet you never have to carpet your carpet. Protection against wear is built into it with tougher, stain-resistant, wear-resistant fibers. Plenty of them, too. More than enough to crowd every square yard with deep, lush pile. More than enough to cushion every footfall from stampeding children and dancing friends.

When it's beautiful and tough, it's out of this World.

There's status in starting at the bottom. Once you decide your home deserves a fine piano, it's worth digging deep to see exactly what makes one piano better than others. ■ Take any one of our grands. ■ Look underneath. The first thing you see is a set of six inflexible steel spokes bolted to the inner rim. It's our exclusive Tension Resonator which maintains the crown of our sounding board year after year, no matter how punishing the climate or humidity. No other piano has anything like it. ■ Next, run your hand along the wooden underplanes. They're as smoothly finished as fine furniture . . . a pretty good clue to the workmanship in every single inch of a Mason & Hamlin. ■ Once you're back on your feet, see what all this quality sounds like. Play it. The tone is warm and rich . . . characteristically Mason & Hamlin. And if the powerful upper register surprises you, it's because we handtune even the non-singing portions of the treble strings. ■ Now take a good look at our fine furniture styles, in consoles and grands. If you doubt you're looking at America's finest pianos, maybe you'd better start in again from the bottom. ■ For brochure write: Dept. H.

BOOKS:

THE FURNITURE SCENE

The fascination with furniture is never-ending. Its changing design has been a subject for scholarly research year after year. For the layman, perhaps the most intriguing aspect is not furniture design per se but what the styles reveal of life lived in various historical periods. This year several notable books in this field have been published, adding to our knowledge of times past.

Hollis S. Baker, the late president of Baker Furniture, devoted years to researching and writing an authoritative work on a subject very close to him. The result, Furniture in the Ancient World (Macmillan, $17.95), is a much-needed definitive book. Little has previously been written on the history of pre-medieval furniture. A lifetime spent working in the furniture industry and studying its craft and history, plus a scholarly interest in archeology, made Mr. Baker an ideal person to close the gap in the history of furniture.

Richly documented with color plates and black-and-white illustrations, his book traces the evolution of furniture in the ancient worlds of Egypt, the Near East, and the Aegean. Included in his study are styles of furniture found in royal palaces and everyday homes.

The greatest emphasis is placed on Egyptian furniture because the only existing examples of ancient furniture are those pieces found in Egypt.

Knowledge of furniture from the Near East and the Aegean area has been gathered from vase paintings, terra-cotta and marble reliefs, ivory plaques and seals.

But most significantly, Mr. Baker has shown the continuing influence exerted by furniture designs and techniques of the ancients on later models. Even today's eclectic tastes reflect the influence of the classical era.

Moving to another age and another locale, we discover British Furniture through the Ages, illustrated by Maureen Stafford with an introduction by Robert Keith Middlemas (Coward-McCann, $5). The entire course of development in British furniture from the Age of Oak (c. 1300) through 20th-century designs by Sir Ambrose Heal and Sir Gordon Russell (the latter wrote the introduction to the Hollis Baker book) is covered by 570 black-and-white drawings. The evolution from simple medieval to sophisticated modern reflects the growth and change of man and his society. All types of pieces —armchairs, side tables, fire screens—are followed through their various stages.

The first edition of Hispanic Furniture by Grace Hardendorff Burr appeared in 1941 with only 1,000 copies printed, yet it managed to get on the Harvard List, a selection of basic books for the study of art history. Happily, a more recent and updated edition was published just two years ago (Archive Press, $22.50). This illustrated history, which traces Spanish furniture from the Gothic 15th through the Rococo 18th Centuries, also includes a chapter on Colonial furniture from both Spain and Portugal. The closing section, a catalog of the furniture in the Hispanic Society of America in New York, reveals the wealth of Hispanic furniture in this country.

Spanning decades, not centuries, are the books in the Faber Monographs on Furniture under the general editorship of Peter Thornton. One of the two new titles in this series is Adam and Hepplewhite and Other Neo-Classical Furniture by Clifford Musgrave (Taplinger, $17.50). England between 1760 and 1790 saw the ascendency of the elegant furniture of Robert Adams, Hepplewhite, William Kent, and others. Clarifying remarks, sketches, and photographs make the development of the Adam style an understandable transition.

The other recent book in this series is devoted to a French furniture style: Empire Furniture 1800-1825 by Serge Grandjean (Taplinger, $17.50). Although less familiar than the Louis styles, this furniture, created during Napoleon Bonaparte's reign, influenced European and American designs in the early 19th Century and directly affected the design of the English Regency period.—K.F.

ADAPTIQUE. The original counterpart of this magnificent credenza (circa 1725) is not for sale. It still graces a fine old English manor house. But you can have its proud prototype. It is now a part of White's Adaptique collection of contemporary originals. Each piece is custom-crafted with the look of excellence that makes it a classic in its own right, in its own time. Adaptique's varied continental style influences and design motifs harmonize with any period decor. Sizes vary for homes spacious and small. See for yourself. Seen up close for the intricate marking, or viewed at a distance for its scattered brightness, the viola is forever a delight.

VOILA!
THE VIOLA

By CAROL SHUTE

Have you ever really looked at a flower? A viola, for instance. Of the hundreds of species in the genus, one of the most engaging is the old Viola tricolor. Its folk name is heart's-ease, and it looks much like a tiny pansy—reasonably enough, because that is what it is.

A small pressed-glass bowl beside me holds dozens of them—purple, blue, ivory, yellow, lavender. On some of them, the two large upper petals are ivory, the three small lower ones bright yellow. Others have upper petals of purple, deep and velvety and almost black; below, the purple shades into blue. Another, a favorite of mine, has dark violet above and lilac below; at the tip of the two upper petals there is an astonishing spot of purple-black. Each of the many-hued blossoms has a bright golden heart with clear, sharp lines of brown or black or purple radiating from its center.

Look again. The shape of a small one must remind us that violets, too, are violas. A large round purple, with a brilliant eye and strong black lines, puts one in mind of a cat's face: it tells you where the showy modern pansies came from.

Within the modest compass of the flower bowl are many individuals, and only those from the same plant are the same—but occasionally even these differ. In this unassuming breed are flowers dark and light; bicolored, shaded, multicolored; some formed like violets, some like pansies; some wear comical frowns, others look candid. Some seem to strike off light with their sunny yellows; others draw it inward, and speak of the night. This is really looking at a flower, and the reward is contained in the looking. It is true of any flower worth keeping in your garden. It is the reason I let these little violas run wild here in mine.

The clumps and scattered plants that bloom all over the rock garden are the result of a handful of seedlings a friend gave me several years ago. They have crossed and recrossed and seeded themselves even in the grass. As fast as a plant grows leggy, there's a seedling to take its place. I give surplus plants to my friends, or put them in other gardens on my place. They love to be picked and simply send up more buds. Here's another excellent reason for keeping them—the small children who visit are permitted to pick as many as they like, and are content to stay away from my other plants. (That's why I also keep great clumps of blue-and-white violets at the edge of the wildflower garden.)

Such flowers sound like nuisances, especially when I tell you they sow themselves among the dwarf iris and around tiny rare plants I've carefully brought up from seed. These intruders must be removed, but they, too, have their function: They prod me into cleaning up the area while I'm there.

Nothing could be less trouble than these harlequin dots and splashes of bloom that complement or contrast with the other flowers in the garden. They also commit drolleries that make our modern pansies seem poker-faced. (The word pansy, by the way, is a corruption of the French pensée, meaning thought. See?) One humorist popped up in the middle of a tight cluster of Sempervivum rosettes. Others appeared, cheerful and floriferous above ripening foliage of species crocus. Still others gave me a pleasant surprise when I parted the wide, crowded blades of Scilla: they were already there, blooming, to help me hide the fading bulb foliage. And they have arranged themselves prettily under the moss rose on the slope. Small wonder they are also called Johnny-jump-ups.

V. tricolor has other endearing characteristics. It will bloom all summer, with new plants coming along even in the fall. It winters well. Lift up the mulch in January and you will see its bright, clean leaves. In my experience, it has had no noticeable diseases or pests. It doesn't care much if there's a drought, and an excess of rain merely makes it grow. Its roots are fine and numerous, so it is easy to move: a trowel will hold a good-size plant with its earth. If it is transplanted with its roots bare, keep it shaded and watered, and it will soon pretend it was born there. Transplanting can be done any time of year, except when the ground is frozen.

V. tricolor as we know it today is close to its original form, though hybridization has made it sturdier and more colorful. Gerard, in 1587, wrote of it: "The Heart's-ease or Pansie . . ." is ". . . of three sundry colours, whereof it tooke the syrname Tricolor, that is to say, purple, yellow, and white or blew; by reason of the beauty and braverie of which colours they are very pleasing to the eye, for smel they have little or none at all."

A fig for their smel—their beauty and braverie are enough for me. ■

YAMAHA
INTERNATIONAL CORPORATION

Ten years from now, will your child be playing piano or just listening?

If he starts on a Yamaha piano early, he'll have many enjoyable years ahead. He will not be just listening. He will entertain others and add greatly to the richness of his own life.

And the beauty of it is—almost any child can learn to play. Modern methods for teaching music are far ahead of the old techniques. This is especially true of the Yamaha Music Course (call your Yamaha dealer to see if it is available in your area now, or soon will be).

While planning for your child's musical future, be sure to inspect the Yamaha piano—one of the world's finest instruments. It is a truly professional quality piano at a family-affordable price.

You'll be delighted with Yamaha's full, ringing tone. The sensitive touch. The unusually fine craftsmanship. The wide selection of models, designs and colors to choose from. And you'll be especially pleased with the Yamaha terms, unique Service Bond and 10-year warranty.

See one. Test one. Check all the features. You'll see why Yamaha is the world's largest producer of pianos. And why so many people play Yamaha pianos—instead of just listening to someone else. Wouldn't that be just what you would like to have for your child?

If your child is a poor reader

–see how phonics can help him

Try it at our risk– for two weeks!

See how your child can learn to read better and spell better in just a few weeks with records that teach him by phonics, at home! Mail Free Trial Coupon below.

Would you like to see your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in as little as six weeks' time? These are results parents have seen again and again with this simple home-tutoring course in reading.

Mrs. B. J. Smith of Concord, Calif. writes: "In ten weeks my son advanced from second grade level in reading to the fourth grade level. His spelling improved to the high fourth grade level. We feel fortunate in learning of The Sound Way To Easy Reading."

Mrs. B. J. Smith is only one of over 50,000 parents who have turned to The Sound Way to Easy Reading for help in the frustrating problem of a child who can't read. And over 3,000 schools use it.

Teaches with records

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

That is why so many poor readers show remarkable progress with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. It teaches reading by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago). Its phonograph records and charts show your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters in the alphabet and their blends. Once he learns the 123 basic phonics sounds in this course he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades, and even in high school.

Tested and proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in 4 Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Help your child now

Don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Try it free for two weeks. You send no money—just mail this coupon now!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

PARENTS DELIGHTED

Advanced two grades—"Larry was having a really hard time in second grade until he took your phonics course. Then, in two months, his grades went from D's and F's to A's and B's. I cannot give your course enough praise."
Mrs. Muriel Rich, Fairfax, Va.

Better marks—"At the end of his first semester in fourth grade, Gerald's highest mark was a D-minus. After working 6 weeks with the records his lowest mark was C." Mrs. William Leger, Buffalo, S. Dak.

Four sons—"In twelve weeks, two of our boys brought up their reading grades from D to B. And our other two came up from D to C. I'll never get more for my money than I already have with your course." Mr. John Gehde, Jr., Cassville, Wis.

TEACHERS ENTHUSIASTIC

Recommends to parents—"Your course has been excellent in standardizing the teaching of phonics in our entire school system. I recommend it to parents as a home tutoring course for poor readers."
R. B. Miller, Supervisor, Monterey, Va.

A pleasure to hear my class read—"I am just delighted. In the last twelve weeks 22 of my 29 fourth grade pupils brought up their scores in silent reading. Their oral reading is so improved it's a pleasure to hear them now."
Mary L. Henderson, Crowley, La.

Coat of Arms Research Report and Drawing

A Special Heraldic Service Available To All

The Sanson Institute's private heraldic library contains the coat of arms records of almost one-half million names . . . representing more than twenty European countries. Our research staff investigates each name and finds the arms on record. If you wish you may order your own or any name for complete arms research and report. You receive a document of the findings of the research which includes the heraldic wording of the arms, the source of reference, also a drawing indicating colors and illustrating the charges on the field. Supplementary material outlines the symbolic meanings of the elements found on the coat of arms. This research service is included with every merchandise order. If, however, you wish to have a Research Report and drawing of the arms prior to ordering you may request this service and a completed report will be mailed to you. For this service there is a fee of $5.00 ($2.00 of which is deducted on any future order). Please allow us four weeks for delivery. You may consider your wife's name, special clients or friends' names for this research for a later gift order.

"Please take care of my sister."

TAICHUNG, FORMOSA—Two-year-old Su Ying, her parents dead, waits for her brother who will never return.

Little Su Ying was abandoned in the alley behind our Babies' Home in Formosa. She was frightened, cold and hungry.

But as you can see in the picture, someone had tried to make her look pretty. Her hair was combed and her dress, even though torn, was clean.

In her hand she clutched a note written by her brother:

"Please take care of my sister. Our parents are dead for many weeks. I am twelve and can no longer find food for this small sister. To my ears came news of your House, so I bring Su Ying to you."

Will you help us give Su Ying —and youngsters equally as needy —a chance to grow up in an atmosphere of love?

For only $10 a month you can sponsor such a child and receive his or her photograph, personal history, and the opportunity to write letters.

Your child will know who you are and will answer your letters. Correspondence is translated at our overseas offices.

(And if you want your child to have a special gift—a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear —you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.)

Since 1938 thousands of American sponsors have found this to be an intimate, person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

And your help is desperately needed. Overseas, our staff reports boys and girls still search garbage dumps for food . . . babies abandoned in the streets . . . blind children locked in cellars . . .

Little Su Ying and children like her need your love. Won't you help? Today? Thank you.

Sponsors are urgently needed this month for children in Korea, Formosa, India, Brazil, Japan and Hong Kong. (Or let us select a child for you from our emergency list.)

KING OF THE ROAD? Love to saunter down country lanes, hike through the woods? Here's a compatible companion—the Lauder stick of white birch. It's curvy, gnarly, and has the bark left on, it's as rustic and Gaelic as Sir Harry, himself. 36" long, with brass ferrule tip, leather hand thong. $2.95, 35¢ post. Clymer's of Bucks County, Dept. HB10, Point Pleasant, Pennsylvania 18950.

YOU WILL LOVE PIXIES

Adorable little caricatures on labels. Ready to help you express your feelings — to personalize your letters. It's fun to pick out the one that reflects exactly what you're thinking. Just peel it off—self adhesive—and press it on your letter on the spot where it best illustrates the humor, anger, joy, sadness, etc., that is intended. Remember the old saying that 1 picture is better than 1,000 words. Very distinctive and very smart. 21 different expressions—105 altogether. $1.00 post paid. Send check or money order.

Some of our daisies are doozies.

Red tulips for example. Who ever heard of that? Or green tulips, purple apples or blue geraniums? Yes, Schumacher has them. We know when you find a fabric, wallpaper or carpet that's exactly what you're looking for . . . but not in the right color you need . . . it's downright frustrating. That hardly happens at Schumacher's because our range of color selections in every pattern runs the full gamut, not just one or two variations. We go all the way, in every way, to please. "Daisy Chain" on 50" Dacron sheer available with companion wallpaper. Available through decorators and decorating departments of fine stores. F. Schumacher & Co., 58 W. 40th St., N.Y.
